PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE SIXTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

SPECIAL SESSION OF THE SENATE.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, March 4, 1913.

THOMAS R. MARSHALL, Vice President of the United States, to whom the oath was administered at the close of the last regular session of the Sixty-second Congress, called the Senate to order and said:

Let us reverently attend while the Chaplain invokes the blessing of the God of our fathers and our God upon us.

Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D., the Chaplain of the Senate, offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, our heavenly Father, at the opening of this Congress we stand before Thee to acknowledge Thy Providence and to implore the continuance of Thy favor toward this Thy people. Bend over us, we humbly beseech Thee, and hearken unto our prayer.

We ask Thy blessing, our Father, upon him who this day surrenders the high office to which he was called by the suffrages of this people. We pray Thee to watch over him, to direct his feet into the paths of peace, and to keep him in the memory and esteem of this people.

We pray Thee, most merciful God, to bless Thy servants, the President and Vice President of the United States. Anoint them with Thy Spirit and plenteously endue them with Thy grace. Protect them by Thy heavenly power and direct them by Thy counsel, that they may serve Thee with reverence and godly fear.

For all who, by the suffrages of this people, are called to exercise authority, we pray that as they rule by Thy favor, so they may serve in Thy fear and with an eye single to Thy glory.

We pray Thee, O God, to bless our country. Deliver us from violence without and from discord within. Defend our liberties and uphold our free institutions. Extend unto us the peace that floweth as a river, enriching our borders with peaceable industries and with honorable toil. Upon the altar of the hearts of this people kindle into flame the fire of patriotic devotion, that, by Thy grace, this may be that happy Nation whose God is the Lord.

We invoke Thy blessing upon this Congress, begun in Thy name. So direct their deliberations and order their counsels that the time may be hastened when the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdom of our God and of His Christ.

And unto Thee, O God, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom and whose dominion endureth throughout all generations be glory and praise now and forevermore. Amen.

ADDRESS OF VICE PRESIDENT MARSHALL.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Senators, the proprieties of this occasion probably require a few words from one who is grateful to the American people for the honor heretofore done him and this day consummated.

No Senator has, I trust, a keener appreciation of the necessities in the way of tact and courtesy now devolving upon me than I myself. I offer no surety as to my discharge of duties other than a personal pledge that I will seek to familiarize myself with them and will endeavor always to exercise that complaisance and forbearance which are essential to him who ably presides over great debates upon great public questions by great men.

Divergent views relative to this body would be less divergent if the American people would come to realize that on all sides of real questions much may truthfully be said. Such an attitude of the public mind would eliminate the view that this body is distinctively deliberative and not thoroughly patriotic.

Charges of bad faith based upon an attitude of mind or upon conduct should never be made until it is clearly established that the resultant action is the outcome of personal interest or improper and dishonorable business or social relations.

Your action has not always met with universal approval, but up to this good hour no workable substitute for the exercise of the functions of this body has been proposed. It is not needful for me here and now to accept a brief in your defense. This body will continue to stand, not because of its Presiding Officer, but because of the patriotism and intelligence of its constituent Members and their devotion to our system of government.

To my mind, government is the harness with which a people draws its load of civilization. If the harness be properly adjusted the load, though heavy, will be drawn with ease and no part of the people will be galled. The Senate is the blinders, intended to keep the people from shying at imaginary dangers and toppling into the ditch our system of government. So long as the blinders serve this purpose they are a most valuable part of the harness, but if they be drawn so closely to the eyes as to prevent the seeing of real dangers, then they should either be spread or done away with entirely. I am one of those who think that we can so adjust our blinders as to meet new conditions and render us sanely responsive to every reasonable demand of the people without disturbing any of the checks and balances of our system of government and preserving with loyalty and fidelity the ancient ideals of the Republic.

With neither right nor desire to infringe upon the prerogatives of the President so soon to be, I beg the expression of the opinion that whatever diverse views may be held relative to the work of this body all persons are agreed that under the Constitution the Senate of the United States is singularly the guardian of the people's honor; that more and more as righteousness is exalted among this people the idea is becoming more firmly fixed that it is not vast territory, great wealth, nor large learning which mark the real status of America; that America is to be measured by the golden metewand of honor; and as the idea in her formation was the inherent right of men to rule themselves, that now she can ill afford to announce this doctrine in her own land and renounce it for an instrument of oppression in other lands.

Unfortunately there is no fixed standard of honor outside the dictionary. The gambler may hold it to consist in paying his gambling debts, the member of the smart set in divorcing his neighbor's wife before taking her unto himself, the Senator in eliminating personalities. But when we enter the chancelleries of the world and submit to their judgments not only our right to be but our right to be respected, we can hope to be measured in but one way, and we must be able to show that the solemn treaty obligations of this Republic will be kept with the same scrupulous honesty, both of spirit and letter, whether made with the humblest people of this continent struggling for self-government or with the mightiest monarch of the Old World. This high sense of honor constitutes the panoply of the American people. Armies and battleships furnish no substitute for it. These are valuable, but the people never intended that authority should use them as accessories to a burglar's kit.

If anyone, in the name of the American people, either in violation of treaty obligations or the manifest purpose of the Monroe doctrine, has taken aught while this body was deliberating, it is your duty to ascertain all facts thereto. And if wrong or injustice has been done, even to the humblest republic, let this people be brave enough and sufficiently honest to make reparation. The real greatness of this Republic rests upon its unsullied honor, and it is the duty of this body to search down rumors of bad faith and dishonesty and to rectify wrong wherever wrong is discovered.

Here in this most sacred spot where war has been made and peace declared; here in the presence of the distinguished representatives of the Governments of the civilized world; here within the hearing of the beauty, culture, and ripened statecraft of his own land may one humble American express the hope before he enters upon a four years' silence that all our diplomacy may spell peace with all peoples, justice for all Governments, and righteousness the world around.

PROCLAMATION.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the proclamation of the President convening the Senate in extraordinary session.

The Secretary (Charles G. Bennett) read the proclamation, as follows:

A PROCLAMATION BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

Whereas public interests require that the Senate of the United States be convened at 12 o'clock on the 4th day of March next to receive such communications as may be made by the Executive;

Now, therefore, I, William Howard Taft, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the Senate of the United States to convene at the Capitol, in the city of Washington, on the 4th day of March next, at 12 o'clock noon, of which all persons who shall at that time be entitled to act as Members of that body are hereby required to take notice.

Given under my hand and the seal of the United States at Washington the 13th day of February in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirteen, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and thirty-seventh.

[SEAL.] WM. H. TAFT.

By the President:

P. C. KNOX,

Secretary of State.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATH.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The names of the newly elected Senators will be called, four at a time, Mr. Secretary, and as their names are called they will present themselves at the Vice President's desk for the purpose of taking the oath of office.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Sergeant at Arms will carry out the order of the Senate for the inauguration of the President of the United States upon the east front of the Capitol.

The President elect, Woodrow Wilson, accompanied by the Chief Justice of the United States, the joint committee on arrangements of the two Houses, the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, and followed by the ambassadors of and ministers plenipotentiary from foreign countries, the Members of the Senate, preceded by the Vice President and Secretary of the Senate, the Members of the House of Representatives, preceded by the Speaker and Clerk, and the other guests of the Senate proceeded to the inaugural platform at the east front of the Capitol.

The oath of office having been administered to the President elect by the Chief Justice of the United States, he delivered the following INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

There has been a change of government. It began two years ago, when the House of Representatives became Democratic by a decisive majority. It has now been completed. The Senate about to assemble will also be Democratic. The offices of President and Vice President have been put into the hands of Democrats. What does the change mean? That is the question that is uppermost in our minds to-day. That is the question I am going to try to answer, in order, if I may, to interpret the occasion.

It means much more than the mere success of a party. The success of a party means little except when the Nation is using that party for a large and definite purpose. No one can mistake the purpose for which the Nation now seeks to use the Democratic Party. It seeks to use it to interpret a change in its own plans and point of view. Some old things with which we had grown familiar, and which had begun to creep into the very habit of our thought and of our lives, have altered their aspect as we have latterly looked critically upon them with fresh, awakened eyes; have dropped their disguises and shown themselves alien and sinister. Some new things, as we look frankly upon them, willing to comprehend their real character, have come to assume the aspect of things long believed in and familiar, stuff of our own convictions. We have been refreshed by a new insight into our own life.

We see that in many things that life is very great. It is incomparably great in its material aspects, in its body of wealth, in the diversity and sweep of its energy, in the industries which have been conceived and built up by the genius of individual men and the limitless enterprise of groups of men. It is great, also, very great, in its moral force. Nowhere else in the world have noble men and women exhibited in more striking forms the beauty and the energy of sympathy and helpfulness and counsel in their efforts to rectify wrong, alleviate suffering, and set the weak in the way of strength and hope. We have built up, moreover, a great system of government, which has stood through a long age as in many respects a model for those who seek to set liberty upon foundations that will endure against fortuitous change, against storm and accident. Our life contains every great thing, and contains it in rich abundance.

But the evil has come with the good, and much fine gold has been corroded. With riches has come inexcusable waste. We have squandered a great part of what we might have used, and have not stopped to conserve the exceeding bounty of nature, without which our genius for enterprise would have been worthless and impotent, scorning to be careful, shamefully prodigal as well as admirably efficient. We have been proud of our industrial achievements, but we have not hitherto stopped thoughtfully enough to count the human cost, the cost of lives snuffed out, of energies overtaxed and broken, the fearful physical and spiritual cost to the men and women and children upon whom the dead weight and burden of it all has fallen pitilessly the years through. The groans and agony of it all had not yet reached our ears, the solemn, moving undertone of our life, coming up out of the mines and factories and out of every home where the struggle had its intimate and familiar seat. With the great Government went many deep secret things which we too long delayed to look into and scrutinize with candid, fearless eyes. The great Government we loved has too often been made use of for private and selfish purposes, and those who used it had forgotten the people.

At last a vision has been vouchsafed us of our life as a whole. We see the bad with the good, the debased and decadent with the sound and vital. With this vision we approach new affairs. Our duty is to cleanse, to reconsider, to restore, to correct the evil without impairing the good, to purify and humanize every process of our common life without weakening or sentimentalizing it. There has been something crude and heartless and unfeeling in our haste to succeed and be great. Our thought has been "Let every man look out for himself, let every generation look out for itself," while we reared giant machinery which made it impossible that any but those who stood at the levers of control should have a chance to look out for themselves. We had not forgotten our morals. We remembered well enough that we had set up a policy which was meant to serve the humblest as well as the most powerful, with an eye single to the standards of justice and fair play, and remembered it with pride. But we were very heedless and in a hurry to be great.

We have come now to the sober second thought. The scales of heedlessness have fallen from our eyes. We have made up our minds to square every process of our national life again with the standards we so proudly set up at the beginning and have always carried at our hearts. Our work is a work of restoration.

We have itemized with some degree of particularity the things that ought to be altered, and here are some of the chief items: A tariff which cuts us off from our proper part in the commerce of the world, violates the just principles of taxation, and makes the Government a facile instrument in the hands of private interests; a banking and currency system based upon the necessity of the Government to sell its bonds 50 years ago and perfectly adapted to concentrating cash and restricting credits; an industrial system which, take it on all its sides, financial as well as administrative, holds capital in leading strings, restricts the liberties and limits the opportunities of labor, and exploits without renewing or conserving the natural resources of the country; a body of agricultural activities never yet given the efficiency of great business undertakings or served as it should be through the instrumentality of science taken directly to the farm, or afforded the facilities of credit best suited to its practical needs; watercourses undeveloped, waste places unreclaimed, forests untended, fast disappearing without plan or prospect of renewal, unregarded waste heaps at every mine. We have studied as perhaps no other nation has the most effective means of production, but we have not studied cost or economy as we should either as organizers of industry, as statesmen, or as individuals.

Nor have we studied and perfected the means by which government may be put at the service of humanity, in safeguarding the health of the Nation, the health of its men and its women and its children, as well as their rights in the struggle for existence. This is no sentimental duty. The firm basis of government is justice, not pity. These are matters of justice. There can be no equality or opportunity, the first essential of justice in the body politic, if men and women and children be not shielded in their lives, their very vitality, from the consequences of great industrial and social processes which they can not alter, control, or singly cope with. Society must see to it that it does not itself crush or weaken or damage its own constituent parts. The first duty of law is to keep sound the society it serves. Sanitary laws, pure-food laws, and laws determining conditions of labor which individuals are powerless to determine for themselves are intimate parts of the very business of justice and legal efficiency.

These are some of the things we ought to do, and not leave the others undone, the old-fashioned, never-to-be-neglected, fundamental safeguarding of property and of individual right. This is the high enterprise of the new day: To lift everything that concerns our life as a Nation to the light that shines from the hearthfire of every man's conscience and vision of the right. It is inconceivable that we should do this as partisans; it is inconceivable we should do it in ignorance of the facts as they are or in blind haste. We shall restore, not destroy. We shall deal with our economic system as it is and as it may be modified, not as it might be if we had a clean sheet of paper to write upon; and step by step we shall make it what it should be, in the spirit of those who question their own wisdom and seek counsel and knowledge, not shallow self-satisfaction or the excitement of excursions whither they can not tell. Justice, and only justice, shall always be our motto.

And yet it will be no cool process of mere science. The Nation has been deeply stirred, stirred by a solemn passion, stirred by the knowledge of wrong, of ideals lost, of government too often debauched and made an instrument of evil. The feelings with which we face this new age of right and opportunity sweep across our heartstrings like some air out of God's own presence, where justice and mercy are reconciled and the judge and the brother are one. We know our task to be no mere task of politics, but a task which shall search us through and through, whether we be able to understand our time and the need of our people, whether we be indeed their spokesmen and interpreters, whether we have the pure heart to comprehend and the rectified will to choose our high course of action.

This is not a day of triumph; it is a day of dedication. Here muster, not the forces of party, but the forces of humanity. Men's hearts wait upon us; men's lives hang in the balance; men's hopes call upon us to say what we will do. Who shall live up to the great trust? Who dares fail to try? I summon all honest men, all patriotic, all forward-looking men, to my side. God helping me, I will not fail them, if they will but counsel and sustain me!

The Senate returned to its Chamber at 1 o'clock and 28 minutes p. m., and the Vice President took the chair.

HOUR OF MEETING.

On motion of Mr. MARTIN of Virginia, it was:

Ordered, That the hour of the daily meeting of the Senate be 12 o'clock meridian until otherwise ordered.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 1 o'clock and 32 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, March 5, 1913, at 12 o'clock m.

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, March 5, 1913.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

CALLING OF THE ROLL.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, to the end that the presence of a quorum may be ascertained I suggest the lack of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Georgia suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Brady	Catron	Clarke, Ark.
Bacon	Brandegee	Chamberlain	Colt
Bankhead	Bristow	Chilton	Culberson
Borah	Bryan	Clapp	Cummins
Bradley	Burton	Clark, Wyo.	Dillingham

du Pont	Lippitt	Pittman	Sterling
Fall	Lodge	Pomerene	Stone
Fletcher	McCumber	Ransdell	Sutherland
Gallinger	McLean	Root	Swanson
Gore	Martin, Va.	Saulsbury	Thomas
Hitchcock	Martine, N. J.	Shafroth	Thompson
Hughes	Myers	Sheppard	Thornton
Jackson	Nelson	Shields	Tillman
James	Newlands	Shively	Townsend
Johnson, Me.	Norris	Simmons	Vardaman
Johnston, Ala.	O'Gorman	Smith, Ariz.	Warren
Jones	Oliver	Smith, Ga.	Walsh
Kenyon	Overman	Smith, Md.	Weeks
Kern	Owen	Smith, Mich.	Williams
La Follette	Page	Smith, S. C.	Works
Lane	Penrose	Smoot
Lea	Perkins	Stephenson

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-six Senators have answered to their names. There is a quorum present.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I desire to offer the resolution I send to the desk. I offer the resolution at the suggestion of the junior Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN], and I therefore take the liberty to suggest that he be made chairman of the committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The resolution (S. Res. 2) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That a committee consisting of five Senators be appointed to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that a quorum of the Senate is assembled and that the Senate is ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make.

The VICE PRESIDENT appointed as the committee under the resolution Mr. KERN, Mr. SMITH of Georgia, Mr. MARTIN of Virginia, Mr. LODGE, and Mr. ROOT.

WOMAN-SUFFRAGE PROCESSION.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, if it is in order I should like to submit a resolution. I have prepared it very hastily, the handwriting is not very clear, and I will therefore read it before sending it to the Secretary's desk:

Whereas the superintendent of police of the District of Columbia was, by a joint resolution of the Congress, directed to stop all ordinary traffic along Pennsylvania Avenue between the hours of 3 p. m. and 5 p. m. on Monday, the 3d day of March, 1913, and prevent any interference with the suffrage procession on that day; and

Whereas it is charged by the press and by many of those participating therein that the said resolution was not adequately or properly regarded or enforced upon the occasion mentioned, and that the said procession was seriously interfered with: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, directed to make a full, immediate, and rigid inquiry and investigation into the truth or falsity of said charge, and report their conclusions to the Senate at the next session thereof.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I wish to suggest to the Senator from Colorado that the substance of the resolution was adopted by the Senate on yesterday in a resolution offered by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON], and another resolution was offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES].

Mr. THOMAS. If such a resolution has been offered and adopted, this resolution is unnecessary, and, of course, I shall withdraw it; but it is a subject——

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator from Colorado will allow me——

Mr. THOMAS. Certainly.

Mr. BRISTOW. I will state that yesterday morning the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] introduced a resolution almost identical in language, I think, and it was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate and reported back to the Senate and adopted yesterday.

Mr. THOMAS. That being the case, I withdraw this resolution.

Mr. JONES. If the Senator will allow me, I will state that the resolution I introduced directed the Committee on the District of Columbia of the Senate to make the investigation.

Mr. THOMAS. I was not aware of the fact that such a resolution had been introduced and adopted. I am very glad to know that it has been done, because I consider that this matter——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Chair understand that the Senator from Colorado wishes to withdraw the resolution?

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I have withdrawn the resolution, but I consider the matter of such great importance that it should not be allowed to slumber. It ought to be investigated and reported upon as soon as possible to the Senate of the United States.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, before the matter passes from consideration I wish to say that as chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia for the time being I have taken notice of the resolution adopted yesterday and I have appointed a subcommittee for the purpose of making this very investigaton.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution is withdrawn.

RECESS.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I should like to inquire, if any Senator can inform me, about what time the committee appointed to wait on the President will make its report?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks there is no information on the subject.

Mr. BACON. I will state that in the nature of things it must necessarily be 20 or 30 minutes; possibly more than that.

Mr. GORE. I move that the Senate take a recess until 1 o'clock.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Say 1.30.

Mr. GORE. Very well; I will make it 1.30.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Oklahoma moves that the Senate take a recess until 1.30 o'clock.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I suggest to the Senator from Oklahoma that there is no use to take such a long recess. One o'clock will give plenty of time for the committee to go to the White House and come back.

Mr. GORE. I will make it 1 o'clock, and ask that the question be put on my motion as originally offered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Oklahoma modifies his motion and moves that the Senate take a recess until 1 o'clock.

Mr. BACON. I suggest to Senators that we all wish, of course, to be present at the expiration of the recess, and it is known to everyone that between 1 and 2 o'clock it is extremely difficult for Senators to be here. It would be better for us to have the hour of reassembling after the recess fixed for such time as may be convenient for all Senators to be present. We have no other work to do but this, and it will be very much better to have it so rather than to have a partial attendance of the Senate at that time. If we meet at 1 o'clock, before the work can be done the Senate will become thin within a very few moments. I will not offer it in the form of an amendment or endeavor to effect any change unless it is agreeable to the maker of the motion; but it seems to me it would be very much better to have the hour for reassembling fixed a little later.

Mr. GORE. I will, of course, defer my judgment to that of the Senator from Georgia, though other Senators had suggested to me to move a recess to 1 o'clock. I therefore modify my motion by making the hour for reassembling 2 o'clock.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Oklahoma moves that the Senate take a recess until the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Senate stands in recess until 2 o'clock p. m.

Thereupon (at 12 o'clock and 22 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until 2 o'clock p. m., when it reassembled.

CALLING OF THE ROLL.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Florida suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gore	Myers	Smith, Ga.
Bacon	Hitchcock	Nelson	Smith, Md.
Bankhead	Hughes	Norris	Smith, Mich.
Bradley	Jackson	O'Gorman	Smith, S. C.
Brady	James	Oliver	Smoot
Brandegee	Johnson, Me.	Overman	Stephenson
Bryan	Johnston, Ala.	Owen	Sterling
Burton	Jones	Page	Stone
Catron	Kenyon	Penrose	Sutherland
Chamberlain	Kern	Perkins	Thomas
Chilton	La Follette	Pittman	Thompson
Clark, Wyo.	Lane	Pomerene	Tillman
Clarke, Ark.	Lea	Ransdell	Townsend
Colt	Lippitt	Root	Warren
Culberson	Lodge	Shafroth	Walsh
du Pont	McCumber	Sheppard	Weeks
Fletcher	Martin, Va.	Shields	Williams
Gallinger	Martine, N. J.	Simmons	Works

The VICE PRESIDENT. Seventy-two Senators have answered to their names, and there is a quorum of the Senate present.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. KERN, Mr. SMITH of Georgia, Mr. MARTIN of Virginia, Mr. LODGE, and Mr. ROOT appeared, and

Mr. KERN said: Mr. President, the committee appointed to wait on the President of the United States and inform him that a quorum of the Senate is assembled and ready to receive any communications he may have to make, beg leave to report that they have performed that duty, and the President replied that he would immediately communicate to the Senate a message in writing.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the Senate by M. P. Latta, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

The Journal of the proceedings of Wednesday last was read and approved.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE PROCESSION (S. DOC. NO. 1).

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, transmitting, in response to Senate joint resolution No. 164, copies of official orders pertaining to the woman's suffrage procession on March 3, 1913, issued by the major and superintendent of police on the 1st and 2d days of March, and also a copy of a detailed statement made to the Board of Commissioners by the major and superintendent of police on March 4, 1913, relating to and covering the manner in which the various orders of the major and superintendent of police to his subordinate officers were carried out, etc., which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia and ordered to be printed.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the board of directors of the Just Government League of Maryland, relative to the conduct of the police force of the District of Columbia during the woman's suffrage parade on Monday, March 3, 1913, which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS ON LEGISLATIVE BUSINESS.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Senators, I am traveling here more with your hearts than with my head. There are certain communications which, in my judgment, require the action of both Houses of Congress. I deem it unadvisable to hand them down to be referred at this extraordinary session, but I desire to challenge the judgment of the Senate as to my duty to hand them down. I am ruling that I should hand down nothing except matters which can be taken up and disposed of by the Senate at the present extraordinary session.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I would say that the judgment of the Chair, in my opinion, is correct—that nothing shall be submitted to the Senate in its executive session except such communications as relate to matters that the Senate at this extraordinary session by itself can dispose of. I would suggest that the proper course would be to retain them, and when the Senate is in session at the extra session of Congress, then to lay them before the Senate.

I should suppose, if the Chair were in doubt as to any particular communications, that that matter might be laid before the Senate for its disposition.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Mr. President, I can not at this minute readily recall any sort of communication that could find its way to the desk at this time which would require the joint action of the two Houses. I think the statement of the situation by the Chair is a complete indication of the proper course. These documents will have to remain on the desk of the Vice President until there is another House in session to take cognizance of that particular part of the responsibility involved in its required cooperation.

This extraordinary session was called for the purpose of considering executive business, but it is a matter we can not overlook that the dominant political branch of the Senate shall avail itself of the fact that the Senate is now in session to organize along the line of the recent change in political sentiment in the country, and the Presiding Officer will find himself almost completely out of a job until that service has been completed. It is now in progress, and no greater length of time will be consumed in disposing of it than the necessities of the case require. We hope when it is done it may be well done, at least to the satisfaction of our complacent brethren on the other side of the Chamber.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. KERN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After four minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 2 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.), on motion of Mr. KERN, the Senate adjourned until Monday, March 10, 1913, at 2 o'clock p. m.

SENATOR FROM ARKANSAS.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Mr. President, I rise to a question of privilege.

The credentials of Mr. JOSEPH T. ROBINSON, Senator elect from the State of Arkansas, have heretofore been presented to the Senate and are now on file. That gentleman is present, and I ask that the oath of office be administered to him.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator elect will present himself at the desk for that purpose.

Mr. ROBINSON was escorted to the Vice President's desk by Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas, and the oath prescribed by law having been administered to him, he took his seat in the Senate.

SERVICE OF PROCESS ON SENATE COMMITTEE.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

I desire to say that in the performance of my duty as a member of the subcommittee of the Committee on Foreign Relations directed to inquire into certain phases of the Mexican and Cuban rebellion I came into the possession of many facts and papers bearing upon that question, and at New Orleans certain papers came into the possession of the Senate subcommittee, of which I am chairman, which are now demanded by the courts.

This morning I was served with a subpœna duces tecum to produce certain of those papers to the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana in the New Orleans division. As I am acting in the purely representative capacity I do not desire to assume the responsibility of passing upon the question of jurisdiction, neither do I desire to turn over any papers to that court or any other tribunal without the consent and authority of the Senate.

Therefore, Mr. President, I desire to send to the Secretary's desk the subpœna with which I was served, and before finally disposing of the matter by reference or otherwise I ask that it be read for the information of the Senate.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I trust the Senator will reconsider that request to have the paper read and go into the RECORD. I think it is very proper that he should present the paper and have it referred. I do not believe it has enough importance to be put into the RECORD. I think it is an absolute and unwarranted assumption of authority on the part of the court. I do not think it ought to be tolerated by the Senate or recognized in the slightest degree. Official papers in the possession of the Senate can not be taken from the Senate by any court process.

Mr. ROOT. Mr. President, it is the possibility of such a view prevailing as has been expressed by the Senator from Georgia which, it seems to me, should lead to the presentation of the paper to the Senate.

Mr. BACON. I think that is proper.

Mr. ROOT. Upon the request of the Senator from Michigan I examined the paper a short time ago with some care. It appears to me to be a proceeding to take papers out of the hands of the Senate under the process of the court, threatening a penalty in case the person who holds them as the custodian for the Senate does not comply. I think the proper course to follow in the case of a proceeding of that kind by a coordinate branch of the Government is that the paper should be brought to the attention of the Senate, and that the Committee on the Judiciary should be directed to report to the Senate what course should be followed.

Mr. BACON. I quite agree with the Senator from New York.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There being objection to the reading of the paper——

Mr. BACON. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary without reading.

Mr. BACON. I have the floor, if the Chair will pardon me.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, I think I have the floor.

Mr. BACON. I beg the Senator's pardon. I understood that the Senator from Michigan yielded the floor with the presentation of the paper and the request that it be read.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I will yield gladly to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. BACON. Before the Senator resumes, as I had not entirely completed when the Senator from New York made his suggestion, I wish to say that I think the Senator from Michigan pursued a course exactly correct in presenting the paper and asking that it should be referred, as has been suggested by the Senator from New York, to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President——

Mr. BACON. Let me just complete my proposition.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Certainly.

Mr. BACON. I think the paper should be referred without reading. I do not think that the reading of it or not reading it is a matter of very grave importance, but I do think the proper direction is a reference to the committee. I, myself, utterly repudiate and deny the right of any court to attempt to take papers of the Senate out of the possession of the Senate by any process it may see fit to issue.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. If the subpœna had been directed solely to me personally I would not have made the request that it be read for the information of the Senate. My request, however, was made because it is directed to me officially as a member of the committee. That fact I desire Senators to know. Beyond that I have no question at all as to the wisdom of the immediate reference.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. May I interrupt the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Certainly.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. In glancing over the report of the subcommittee which the chairman has filed, I find that quite a number of witnesses testified with the assurance evidently that the evidence given by them would not be used in any court or in any subsequent proceeding. How far that would be binding I do not know; but it seems to me it ought to have some weight with the Senate in its final action with reference to the suggestion of the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, the committee endeavored not to exceed its powers by promising that testimony shall not be used. I do not think in a single instance that has been done without the reservation that such evidence would be used as the Senate might determine.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Will the Senator from Michigan suspend for a moment, that the Senate may receive a message from the President of the United States?

[A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.]

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Michigan will proceed.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. If there is no objection upon the part of the Senator from Georgia, I think the orderly way to dispose of the matter is to have the subpœna read. I ask that it be read and that it be then referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. STONE. Will the Senator from Michigan yield to me for a moment?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Certainly.

Mr. STONE. What possible objection would there be to having the subpœna read for the information of the Senate?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I think it ought to be read.

Mr. STONE. It is a document about which it seems to me the Senate should be informed. Then let it be referred to the Judiciary Committee for its examination, and that committee can report to the Senate its judgment as to the proceeding that should be adopted.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I might say in reply to the Senator from Missouri that the subpœna is returnable on the 27th of March, possibly during the vacation of the Senate, and this disposition of the matter has been deemed wise by members of the Committee on Foreign Relations with whom I have been able to confer in the few moments that have elapsed since I was served with the writ.

Mr. BACON. When the Senator from Michigan yields the floor I desire to say a word.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I yield now to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. BACON. The question of reading the paper is, of course, a matter I do not regard as of sufficient importance to interpose an objection to. It was a mere suggestion on my part that the paper was of a character which might properly be referred without reading; that was all. I think it is giving it a little too much dignity and importance to have it read into the RECORD. That was the only reason why I made the suggestion to the Senator. I did not intend to interpose any objection to such a course as he might suggest would be proper to have it take. If the Senator wants it read, of course I make no objection.

I wish to say that this is not the first time the Senate has had brought to its attention the assumption on the part of another branch of the Government to exercise judicial authority over the acts and proceedings of the Senate, and it was for that reason, remembering the former occasion, that I was probably a little too prompt to interpose my suggestion in regard to the matter.

There was a time within the recent past when a court in this District saw fit to issue a subpœna, a subpœna coupled with a penalty as in this case, calling upon the members of a committee of the Senate to appear before that court and answer to that court for their official acts as a committee of the Senate. The Senate, after a very thorough discussion, refused to recognize such authority in any court, and refused to respond to that summons in any manner, shape, or form. It not only failed to appear but to make any official response except to direct the Secretary of the Senate to inform the court that the Senate did not recognize its authority and would not receive its command in any way.

Of course I have not given this present matter the same consideration and examination which I had the opportunity then to give to the other case. It may be that there are particular circumstances which may justify some other direction being given in this case, but unless something is brought to my attention which will differentiate it in nature and kind from the other proceeding, I shall be very emphatically of the opinion that similar action should be taken in this instance on the part of the Senate.

I hope the subpœna will be read and then referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, I ask to have it read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

United States of America, District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana.

The President of the United States to Senator WILLIAM ALDEN SMITH, personally and as the representative and agent of a committee of the United States Senate, Washington, D. C., or wherever found:

You are hereby commanded to be and appear and to bring with you the following papers, to wit:

1. Written order, or orders, directed to A. Baldwin & Co. (Ltd.), of New Orleans, or their manager or representative, and signed by one Vincent or Vincente Segura, in his own name or that of some alias, directing the delivery by A. Baldwin & Co. (Ltd.), of certain arms and ammunition and other articles, the date or dates of said order or orders being unknown, but believed to be either in August or September or December, 1912.

And all other papers and documents or evidence of every character obtained from the said A. Baldwin & Co. (Ltd.). or any representative of said company, during a stay in New Orleans, by Senator WILLIAM ALDEN SMITH and John W. Barbrick, during January, 1913, all pertaining to a certain sale, or sales, of arms and munitions of war by A. Baldwin & Co. (Ltd.), and pertaining to the delivery of such arms and munitions of war.

2. All shipping orders given to or by the agents of the railroad company, believed to be the Illinois Central Railroad Co., for the movement of certain cars containing arms and munitions of war from the warehouse of A. Baldwin & Co. in New Orleans to another place in the city of New Orleans, believed to be a place called Terrys Switch, and from Terrys Switch back to the public warehouse.

3. Bank statement of the New Orleans National Bank, in account with A. Baldwin & Co. (Ltd.).

4. Letter written by New Orleans National Bank to John W. Barbrick, or some one else, in regard to the manner of transferring certain funds from Mexico for A. Baldwin & Co. (Ltd.) or for Vincent Segura.

5. Copy or original of letter received by Stauffer, Eshleman & Co. (Ltd.), of New Orleans, from the Schuster Commission Co., of El Paso, Tex., said to be dated about January 8, 1913.

6. Any and all other papers pertaining to the sale and delivery of arms and munitions of war by A. Baldwin & Co. (Ltd.) before the district court of the United States in and for the said district, to be holden at the city of New Orleans on Thursday, the 27th day of March, 1913, then and there to be used in evidence in a certain cause now pending therein, and to be tried between the United States, plaintiff, v. Vincent Segura et al., defendants, and No. 2832 of the criminal docket of this court, at 11 o'clock a. m., and herein fail not under penalty of $250.

Witness the Hon. Rufus E. Foster, judge of said court, at New Orleans, this 7th day of March, A. D. 1913, and the one hundred and thirty-seventh year of American independence.

(Signed) H. J. CARTER, Clerk.

CLERK'S OFFICE.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., March 7, 1913.

(Indorsement: Return. No. 2832. United States District Court, Eastern District of Louisiana, New Orleans division. United States v. Vincent Segura et al. Subpœna duces tecum. Marshal's return.)

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, before the reference is made I wish to say that, if it were not for the fact that I believe under the Federal practice some authority from the judge is required before a subpœna duces tecum of that kind can be issued, I would suppose that its issuance in this case was the act of some irresponsible clerk. I may be mistaken, however, in my recollection of the Federal practice in this regard, and I do not wish to do the judge any injustice.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I ask that the subpœna be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will be so referred.

PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE AND OFFICERS OF THE SENATE.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the election of President pro tempore of this body.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. KERN. I offer the resolution I send to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GALLINGER in the chair). The resolution will be read for the information of the Senate.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 5), as follows:

Resolved, That the Hon. JAMES P. CLARKE, a Senator from the State of Arkansas, be, and he is hereby, elected President of the Senate pro tempore, to hold and exercise the office in the absence of the Vice President from time to time during the pleasure of the Senate.

Mr. LODGE. I move as an amendment to the resolution to substitute for the name of Hon. JAMES P. CLARKE, a Senator from the State of Arkansas, the name of Hon. JACOB H. GALLINGER, a Senator from the State of New Hampshire.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, why should not the vote be taken by ballot, so that Senators may vote for whomsoever they please for President pro tempore instead of voting on just the two names?

Mr. STONE. We can do that on a roll call.

Mr. BRISTOW. I move a roll call on the election of President pro tempore.

Mr. LODGE. I think the resolution must be disposed of first.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts moves to substitute the name he has indicated for the name that was incorporated in the resolution offered by the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. BRISTOW. I move, as a substitute, that the roll be called for the purpose of electing a President pro tempore of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair can scarcely entertain that as a substitute for the motion to amend made by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. BRISTOW. I offer it as a substitute for the resolution as amended.

Mr. LODGE. I do not think that can be moved as an amendment. That is an attempt to interpose another motion.

Mr. BRISTOW. It is a substitute for the pending motion.

Mr. LODGE. I think it is another method of determining the same question. It is not a substitute or in the nature of an amendment.

Mr. BRISTOW. The Senate can determine whether or not it desires to proceed by resolution or roll call, can it not?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair can not entertain the motion of the Senator from Kansas as a substitute for the motion that has been made to elect, and will put the question on the amendment submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. BRISTOW. Can not the Senate by a vote choose to elect its President pro tempore by ballot, or upon a roll call, instead of by a resolution? Is there anything in the rules that precludes the Senate from determining how the President pro tempore shall be elected?

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, the Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN] has made a motion to proceed to the election of a President pro tempore of the Senate. He has made that motion in the way in which it has usually been done; and until that motion is disposed of, it clearly seems to me no other motion is in order. That motion has been adopted, as I recall it.

Mr. BRISTOW. It has not.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator from Indiana moved to proceed to the election of a President pro tempore. That motion was adopted. He then offered a resolution. The Senator shakes his head. I ask the Secretary to read the record. I repeat, the Senator from Indiana moved to proceed to the election of a President pro tempore. I think I am correct. That motion was agreed to. Acting under that resolution, the Senator then moved that the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE] be declared President pro tempore of the Senate.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. And he offered a resolution.

Mr. LODGE. And he offered a resolution to that effect.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will suggest to the Senator from Massachusetts that, as the Chair recalls it—and he will refresh his memory by looking at the resolution—the Senator from Indiana coupled the request for the election of the Senator from Arkansas as President pro tempore with a motion to proceed to the election.

Mr. LODGE. I ask for the reading of the stenographer's notes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed by the Secretary that the minutes show that the motion to proceed to the election of a President pro tempore was put and carried, and that now the motion of the Senator from Indiana is before the Senate with the amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. BRISTOW. My contention is that a Senator has the right and that it is in order to move that, instead of proceeding by resolution in this way, the roll be called and that we proceed to elect a President pro tempore by a call of the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would suggest to the Senator from Kansas that the Chair is of opinion that if the Senator would make a motion that the vote be taken by a call of the roll it would be in order, if the Senate chooses to so decide.

Mr. BRISTOW. Well, I move that the vote for President pro tempore be taken by a call of the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BRISTOW]. [Putting the question.] The "ayes" have it, and the roll will be called.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. JACKSON], and therefore withhold my vote. If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote for Senator CLARKE of Arkansas.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I wish to make an inquiry. Are pairs to be observed on a vote of this kind?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BRANDEGEE in the chair). That is something that the Chair has no authority to decide.

Mr. STONE. Of course the Chair has not, but I express the opinion that pairs should not obtain.

Mr. JAMES (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WEEKS], who is absent. I therefore withhold my vote. If the junior Senator from Massachusetts were present, I should vote for Senator CLARKE.

Mr. MYERS (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCLEAN]. In his absence I withhold my vote. If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote for Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED]. In his absence I transfer that pair to the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT] and shall vote. I vote for Mr. GALLINGER.

Mr. TOWNSEND (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Florida [Mr. BRYAN]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. STEPHENSON] and vote. I vote for Mr. GALLINGER.

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE]. I am reliably informed that, if he were present, the Senator from Pennsylvania would vote for the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER]. If I were at liberty to vote I would vote for the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE]. In view of all the facts I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CULBERSON (after having voted for Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas). As I have a general pair with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. DU PONT], who has not voted, I withdraw my vote.

The result of the vote for President pro tempore was as follows:

FOR MR. CLARKE OF ARKANSAS—41.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP] has received 1 vote; the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BRISTOW] 1 vote; the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] 1 vote; the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] 18 votes; and the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE] 41 votes. The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE] having received a majority of all the votes cast is duly elected President pro tempore of the Senate. The Senator will appear at the desk and take the oath of office.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas advanced to the desk, and the oath of office was administered to him by the Presiding Officer.

Mr. KERN. I offer the resolution which I send to the desk, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Indiana offers a resolution, and asks unanimous consent for its immediate consideration. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 6), as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate do now proceed to the election of the following officers in the order named: Secretary of the Senate, Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate, Chaplain of the Senate, Assistant Doorkeeper of the Senate.

Mr. KERN. I desire to add to that resolution the words "and Acting Assistant Doorkeeper of the Senate."

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, those words will be added.

Mr. GORE. I object to the addition of the last clause, for reasons which I will state later if it becomes necessary. I hope the Senator will not make that request.

Mr. OLIVER. I object to the consideration of the original resolution, if that is the case.

Mr. KERN. We can not hear the Senator on this side.

Mr. OLIVER. I say, inasmuch as the addition of the words "Acting Assistant Doorkeeper" is objected to, I object to the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. KERN. Notwithstanding the objection, I move that the Senate proceed to the election of officers in the order named.

Mr. OLIVER. Do I understand the Senator from Indiana to include the Acting Assistant Doorkeeper?

Mr. BACON. I hope the Senator will speak louder. It is important we should hear him.

Mr. OLIVER. I asked for information, if the Senator from Indiana included in his resolution the election of Acting Assistant Doorkeeper as well as the other officers?

Mr. KERN. My resolution is there. It speaks for itself. I am sorry I can not acquiesce for the moment in the request of my friend from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE].

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, the reason why I made the suggestion was because of the fact that I have been informed that Mr. Loeffler has been agreed upon by the caucus on the other side of the Chamber. I appreciate the courtesy which has always been extended by the one side to the other, by the majority to the minority, to allow them to select this particular officer. I am disposed to acquiesce in this precedent and to extend this courtesy, and I regret to have been obliged to raise this particular objection, but I would say, Mr. President, that a matter has come to my attention, a charge going to the official conduct of Mr. Loeffler, which I desire to call to the attention of the Committee on Privileges and Elections. If the charge be true, no Senator in this Chamber, on either side, would consent for him to serve this body in this capacity. If the charge is not founded in fact, then the suspicion ought to be cleared away. In view of the particular matter out of which the charge arose, I think the Committee on Privileges and Elections ought to look into it, and I intend to ask that it be referred to that committee. I will bring the charge to the attention of the committee, together with the witness sustaining the charge. That is the reason why I was obliged, against my will, to interpose this objection. I trust that the election of this officer at this time will not be insisted upon.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, a certain party came to me making a charge against another gentleman whose name is incorporated in this resolution, but I have not felt it incumbent upon me to raise the question. There is no proof of the charge. It is a very easy matter to make accusations against anybody. I think the Senate ought not, simply because somebody has said something against Mr. Loeffler, unproven, unsubstantiated, to discriminate against him in the procedure that we are about to take.

I trust no change will be made so far as the phraseology of the resolution is concerned.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I agree generally with what the Senator has suggested. This charge is of such a serious character, however, that I am sure the Senator from New Hampshire would not desire the services of this man if it be true; and if it be not true, the suspicion ought to be removed from the minds of Senators who entertain it. I do not care to state the charge here unless this matter be pressed further.

I therefore move to strike from the pending resolution the clause providing for the election of the Acting Assistant Doorkeeper.

Mr. O'GORMAN. Mr. President, I move that the recommendation embraced in the resolution offered by the Senator from Indiana, so far as it affects the selection of an Acting Assistant Doorkeeper, lie on the table.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, it has always been the custom in the Senate, as it has been in the House, to permit the minority to choose an Assistant Doorkeeper who should be at their service. The service is largely a confidential one. I have seen it done repeatedly when the party now in the majority has been in the minority; and the nominee of the majority for Doorkeeper was chosen to his present position on motion of the then Senator from Maine, Mr. Hale.

There never has been any question raised before on either side as to the right of the minority to have this one officer. It is as unreasonable, it seems to me, to have him selected in any other way than by the minority as to expect to have our private and confidential clerks elected by the conference of the other party.

The conference of the minority thought they knew what they were doing when they selected Mr. Loeffler, who has been long in the service of the Senate. If he is guilty of any offense such as suggested by the Senator from Oklahoma, the Senate may rest assured that the minority will not wish him retained in his place. But I think to turn him down and reject him and lay him aside in this way, on an unnamed charge, from an unnamed accuser, in the presence of the action of the conference of the minority, is an injustice to which no man should be subjected. I sincerely trust we shall be allowed at least to vote upon the matter.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, the universal custom of leaving to the minority the privilege of filling this place carries with it a responsibility resting upon them and not upon the majority at all. They have a right to select anybody whom they please. If they select the wrong sort of man, they have hurt themselves and not the majority. It is not to be assumed that they purposely would have selected a man unfit for the position. The fact that the choice is left to them involves the idea that we shall not question their choice. If, later on, it shall appear from evidence of any description that this officer is guilty of anything which would be unbecoming an officer of the Senate, he can be removed by a vote of the Senate; and in the meanwhile the matter can be first brought by gentlemen upon that side to the attention of the minority caucus, and they can act upon it.

I decline to have ourselves put in a position where we are to be taken by the country as responsible for a selection made by a minority conference. We are responsible only for the selections made by our conference. In according them this place we are doing a courtesy which has grown reverent with age.

I hope the form of the resolution will not be altered, and that we will carry it through as it is, unless Senators upon the other side, with whom the choice is left, choose to withdraw their man. It is their affair and not ours.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I desire to add simply one thought, and that is this: It has been already correctly stated that the responsibility is with the minority. It must be apparent to everyone that when we seek to pass upon the question whether they have selected a fit man, we assume that which we ought not to assume, and that if we should determine that they had presented a man who was not a fit man it would be a reflection upon the minority. Further, Mr. President, if it so happens that they have selected an officer to represent them, as is their recognized right, against whom there is a valid charge which would unfit him for the discharge of his duty, it is certainly due to the minority that the majority should show confidence in them and to feel assured that when that matter is brought to their attention, if it is found by them to be sufficient to justify his discharge, they themselves will be the parties to move it.

I think it would be not only an injustice but an impropriety on the part of the majority to undertake to assume to supervise the action of the minority in the selection of the official accorded to them, and to further assume if there be unfitness on the part of the officers that when that is called to their attention they will not themselves undertake to rectify it.

I hope we may proceed in the orderly and regular manner. I have no idea what this charge is, or as to its justice; but I do have the fullest confidence that if there be a charge of unfitness on the part of this proposed officer, when it is brought to the attention of the minority, who are fully competent to deal with the matter, they will certainly apply the proper remedy.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I certainly have no disposition to inflict any injustice upon the other side of this Chamber, and I had hoped to escape any suggestion of being guilty of any impropriety. I realize the responsibility which devolves upon the other side in connection with this particular selection. I realize that they are amply able to meet and to bear their own responsibility. I had felt, however, that I was under some responsibility myself in connection with this particular matter. I felt under some responsibility to make the suggestion here and now that this man was under a charge of official misconduct which would disqualify him from holding this place.

I have performed that duty, and I have met my responsibility. I do not know whether Senators on the other side desire to have the charge suggested now or not; but I do want the matter looked into, because, in the judgment of every man, it would disqualify this man from serving the Senate if the charge be true. I shall state it now, or I shall defer it——

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, as a member of the minority, before this resolution is acted upon, in view of the record that has already been made, I call upon the Senator from Oklahoma to state the charge against Mr. Loeffler.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I was stating that I would either make the statement now, or I would defer it, as leaders on the other side might desire. I have no disposition to precipitate this matter here and now in this way, and I sought to avoid it. But, Mr. President, Senators here who served during the Sixty-first Congress remember an incident which occurred upon this floor in which the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS]; the Senator from Texas, Mr. Bailey; and I think the Senator from Indiana, Mr. Beveridge, figured. It related to a certificate of deposit on the part of one Holstlaw, which was a part of the evidence in the Lorimer trial. That certificate mysteriously disappeared from the Senate. It placed Senators in a most embarrassing situation. I can furnish a witness who will make the statement that Mr. Loeffler is and was responsible for the disappearance of that certificate of deposit.

That is the statement which I desire the Committee on Privileges and Elections to investigate and report upon. I have discharged my duty and have met my responsibility. I remit all further responsibility to Senators on the other side.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, will the Senator object to giving the Senate the name of his informant?

Mr. GORE. If the matter is going to be investigated, I would rather bring the witness before the committee. If it is insisted upon, I will name the witness now.

Mr. SMOOT. I think before we decide this question we ought to be informed as to the name.

Mr. GORE. I have no objection to stating it.

Mr. SMOOT. I should be obliged if the Senator would do so.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, it was the page who took this certificate from the hand of the Senator and started with it to the desk. Mr. Loeffler called the page to him, and said: "Let me see that." The page handed it to him. Mr. Loeffler retired out yonder door, and the page has never seen the certificate from that time to this. He told me of the matter in confidence, and I have no reason to doubt the truth of the allegation. His name is Harrison. He is the young man who is now at the telephone.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I have no disposition, of course, to interfere with the proper investigation of this matter. I think it is a matter which rests with the minority. It is their responsibility. I would suggest to the Senator from Oklahoma to pursue the line indicated by himself—that it be left to them as to whether we shall now proceed, or whether it shall be postponed. The Senator suggested that course, and I think it is the proper one.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I withdraw my motion. I omitted to do that. I have washed my hands entirely of this affair.

Mr. O'GORMAN. Mr. President, in view of the withdrawal of the motion made by the Senator from Oklahoma, I do not press my motion to let the matter lie on the table.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I renew the motion of the Senator from Oklahoma.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the motion to lay upon the table.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, just a word.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The motion is not debatable, but it has been debated.

Mr. GALLINGER. A portion of a proposition can not be laid on the table. If it is anything it is an amendment which is debatable.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, I rise to a point of order. The original resolution called for a schedule of officers, including the Acting Assistant Doorkeeper. The amendment was proposed by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE] to omit the Acting Assistant Doorkeeper from that schedule. That amendment has been withdrawn. Subsequently to that, the Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN] offered another amendment, and that has been withdrawn. So the question now before the Senate is on the original resolution, without any motion or amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator is in error. The motion of the Senator from New York was to lay upon the table that part of the resolution which had to do with the election of the Acting Assistant Doorkeeper.

Mr. GALLINGER. I repeat the point I made a moment ago, which was that we can not lay upon the table a part of a resolution. It is in the nature of an amendment; and I desire to speak to the amendment.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The Senator from New York withdrew his motion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Yes; but the Senator from Wisconsin renewed it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. No; I renewed the motion of the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE].

Mr. GORE. I so understood; and I rose to make that suggestion.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I regret exceedingly that this matter has come up in the form that it has. The minority, recognizing the fact that the Democrats have a majority of the Senate, are ready to recognize their right to elect to office in the Senate such men as they see fit, and upon them will rest the responsibility. If they elect an unworthy man, I know they will hasten to undo the mistake they made as soon as it is called to their attention. Taking the same view, the minority will take whatever responsibility attaches to the election of this one official. I submit to the Senate that the minority ought to be given that responsibility, with the assurance—speaking as one member of the minority—that after Mr. Loeffler shall be elected, if any charge properly substantiated is made against him, the Republican minority will hasten to make an investigation of the matter.

I do not think so important a matter ought to be determined by snap judgment. It certainly ought not to be determined upon the statement of a boy, very likely irresponsible, who happened to say to a Senator that a paper was taken from his hand which perhaps never was taken from his hand. If we are going to proceed upon assumptions of that kind, Mr. President, much more serious charges than that have been made to me concerning another gentleman whose name is included in that list, but I do not believe a word of them. They have not been substantiated. They were very likely made by a personal enemy, and I have cast them aside as being unworthy of serious consideration.

Mr. President, let us proceed in the usual way. We ought not to be diverted from the usual, and, as I look at it, the proper course, because of the situation that has arisen. If the Senator from Oklahoma can produce any proof of the accusation he has made, he will have an opportunity to do so before a committee of the minority a little later on. But I am quite unwilling that this young man's name, which stands high in the estimation of some of us—a young man who comes from a family distinguished in both civil and military life—should be smirched simply upon a statement made by a boy acting as page in the Senate of the United States.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President——

Mr. GALLINGER. I yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. ASHURST. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Oklahoma when this boy told him this.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, let me say, first, that I entirely concur in the spirit of the remarks of the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. ASHURST. I should like to have an answer to my question.

Mr. GORE. I hope the Senator will let me make that statement first. I think the minority ought to be extended this courtesy; and only upon a ground going to the official conduct of this person should I have raised this question, or even suggested it. I did not intend and did not desire to make this suggestion here and now; in fact, I desired not to do so. For that reason I had suggested the propriety of referring the matter to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

I will say that the page advised me of this about three weeks prior to the last vote in the Lorimer case. He told me that he had cherished this secret, and he desired to confide it to some one. I immediately advised the then Senator from Texas, Mr. Bailey, and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS], who had figured in the incident resulting in the loss of this paper. I thought I was under obligation to communicate to them this fact. I made no public statement in regard to it because I did not wish to interject any extraneous matter in the Lorimer trial.

Mr. GALLINGER. It seems to me that that was the proper time to present to the Senate what the Senator from Oklahoma has on his mind to-day, and that it ought not to have been withheld until this young man is nominated for an office, which, if refused him upon the statement of a mere boy, will be in the nature of a disgrace, a taint on his name. Mr. President, without detaining the Senate a moment longer——

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, just one other word. I wish to say that I have told several other Senators of this matter. I had intended to tell the Senator from New Hampshire, but during the rush of the closing days it escaped my attention.

I merely wish, however, to resent the intimation that this story came from a mere boy. That is no impeachment of this lad's character. If it were taken at all, it probably would not have been taken from the hands of a grown man; it would have been transmitted to the desk by a page. It is natural that it should happen in that way.

I have no further word to say on this subject, and I regret that it should have taken this turn. I think another course would have been better.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I do not think this matter ought to be referred to a committee. It seems to me that it should not be acted upon on the flimsy evidence that is before the Senate.

I repeat what I said a moment ago: If the minority makes a mistake, it will be quick to remedy that mistake as soon as it is brought to its attention. Let us be just, and not by hasty action bring reproach upon a young man who has heretofore had the affectionate regard of those of us who know him best.

Mr. ROOT. Mr. President, I agree very fully with the position which has been taken upon both sides of the aisle regarding the responsibility of the minority in the election of the Acting Assistant Doorkeeper, whose services are to be peculiarly confidential in respect to the service to the minority.

I should not detain the Senate by a single word on the subject, except that I do not wish this occasion to pass without saying that I was watching the proceedings in the Lorimer case with great intentness. I had just made an extended argument in the case against Mr. Lorimer. There was no Senator who was more alert and more keenly interested in the production and treatment of the certificate which has been referred to, and the statement that has been made regarding the taking of the paper by Mr. Loeffler from the page, assuming the statement to be absolutely correct, carries to my mind no conclusion, suggestion, or suspicion of wrongdoing on Mr. Loeffler's part. I think that is entirely consistent with absolute right conduct. I am not at liberty to draw any unfavorable inferences regarding him from the statement that has been made so far.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the Senator from Oklahoma has known for some time that there was a committee on committees of the minority which had under consideration the selection of the Acting Assistant Doorkeeper. He also knew that Mr. Loeffler's name was under consideration as well as that of another party. To-day is the first time that I ever heard any intimation made against the character of Mr. Loeffler. I have never heard a word against him as a man.

If the Senator from Oklahoma had mentioned this to any member of the committee or brought his charge to the attention of the committee, there is no doubt that it would have been investigated. He failed in this and now brings it to the attention of the Senate. It has not been considered by the committee.

Mr. JONES. If the Senator from Utah will allow me, I desire to suggest to him that it was not the minority committee on committees that selected Mr. Loeffler; it was the caucus.

Mr. SMOOT. That is true; I should have said the caucus. The Republican caucus, of course, selected him, and his selection was discussed by the caucus and voted upon, and I never heard a member of the committee even suggest that there was a charge of wrongdoing against Mr. Loeffler.

If there is a formal charge against him and he is found guilty of any wrongdoing, there is no member of the minority party who would not vote to remove him from office just as quickly as any member of the majority.

I do not feel justified in voting against Mr. Loeffler on the charge made here to-day, and particularly in the way made.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Mr. President, in this particular matter I shall be guided by the expressed wish of the minority. These matters of understanding are obligatory according to their just application. We understand that the minority are responsible for the selection of their representative on this floor to perform certain important duties that are especially applicable to service on the other side of the Chamber.

Custom has evolved a system by which it is thought best to allow each side to select that particular officer at its discretion. If the Republican minority are satisfied, in the first instance, with this particular nominee of theirs, I am going to accept their judgment about it.

In his official character he is an officer of the Senate and the same vote that will accept him now will turn him out then if a charge is made that would go to his official integrity. If he should prove to be a person unfit for the service to which he has been assigned by the minority, that becomes a question that goes to the integrity of the Senate's organization, and it will involve a fair trial, when the accused will be confronted by those who testify against him, but he will not be condemned in the outset in the face of a practically unanimous indorsement of those in whose service he is to enlist.

So, unless there is something like a general dissatisfaction on the other side of the Chamber manifested, I shall vote in accordance with their desire in this matter.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, I simply desire to say that I shall vote to elect Mr. Loeffler because of my knowledge of the man. For 24 years he has been a faithful official of the Senate. He has received six promotions here—from a page to his present position, and there has never been a dishonorable act connected with his name. I do not believe he has done anything for which he should be criticized, and upon such testimony as has been cited I would hesitate long before I would blast a reputation honestly earned and dearly prized by one who has been honored on both sides of this Chamber from his early boyhood.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE] has properly stated the attitude which is to be occupied by Senators on this side of the Chamber. I only rose in view of the fact that I am on this side of the Chamber to bear testimony to the correctness of what has been so well stated by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH] as to the character of this young man. I do not know anything about the correctness or truth of the particular charge made against him. I do not intend in anything I may say to make any issue upon that one way or the other, but I do wish to say as this young man's character has been brought in question that for 18 years at least he has been under my observation and I have regarded him as a most upright and efficient official of this body, first as a page and later one who has had charge of the training and the direction of the pages. While he has not been in such close association or under such close observation, perhaps, by the Senators on this side of the Chamber as on the other, I have known the fact of the estimate in which he has been held by Senators. I have heard, for instance, when the question of an increase of compensation came up, the fact of his efficiency and his integrity and his capacity commented upon in the open Senate as that of a man entitled to recognition, promotion, and reward.

I am sure the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] will recall the fact that more than once the question of this young man's ability, efficiency, and character has come before the Senate, and in that connection everyone has borne testimony in his favor to that extent. I think this statement is due to him.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I merely wish to add this word: That I had no intention to introduce this matter in the Senate at this time and in this way. My idea was that it should be referred to a standing committee of the Senate, where it could be given judicial investigation and fair investigation and a deliberate report made, based upon the evidence, either favorable or unfavorable, to Mr. Loeffler. As far as that is concerned I am, of course, entirely indifferent. I had not anticipated that the matter would take this course or that such a charge would be necessary. Indeed, I did not apprehend that there would be any objection to a reference of the matter to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. This is, of course, unanticipated on my part.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, the discussion has proceeded upon the motion which I submitted entirely upon the assumption that this is a trial. It is not. The motion simply provides that the position of Acting Assistant Doorkeeper be omitted from the resolution which is presented for consideration at this time.

A charge has been made in the Senate which, if true, should disqualify the candidate named for the position of Assistant Doorkeeper or for any other position in the service of the Senate. The charge is a part of the record of this day's proceedings. It is proposed now, with that charge on the record, to proceed with the election of the man accused. Senators upon the other side assume that they can participate in that election and divest themselves of all responsibility regarding it, upon the ground that it would be a discourtesy for the majority to refuse to accept the candidate presented by the minority for a position conceded to the minority, even in the face of the gravest accusation made at the same time against that candidate. The accused can not be elected by the votes of this side alone, if they were all cast for him.

This candidate is charged with having surreptitiously removed an important piece of record evidence in a case involving the highest possible privilege, a case involving the title of a Senator to a seat on this floor. With that charge on the record it is proposed that he shall, notwithstanding, be elected to a position of responsibility and confidence in this body. This matter, in my opinion, should be investigated, and the time to investigate it is before the election, not after.

On the motion which I have submitted I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, inasmuch as I propose to vote for Mr. Loeffler, if I am given an opportunity to do it, I desire to state my reasons for doing so.

I realize that the Senator from Oklahoma has made a rather serious charge; but I am convinced of the fact, with all due deference to him, that that charge has not been fairly made. He has stated on the floor of the Senate that this knowledge was in his possession at the time the Lorimer case was being tried. During all the time from then until now this man has been serving as an officer of the Senate. At that time the information was fresh; the facts were clearly before the gentleman who possessed them, if they were facts; and they should have been presented to the Senate at that time.

Now, inasmuch as we have gone this far, I propose, so far as my vote will influence it, to elect Mr. Loeffler to this place. Then I shall be as active as any other Senator in trying to find out what the facts are, and if those charges are sustained I will readily vote that he shall be turned out from this office and another placed in his stead.

But I repeat that the Senate has not been fairly treated to wait until this moment and then make public charges against the man who, so far as every other Member of the Senate is concerned, has a good, clean record and a reputation untarnished. This is unfair to him, it is unfair to the Senate, and I will not be a party to making that stain any more indelible.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I agree with what has been said, but I want to say in addition to what Senators on the other side have stated, who have spoken on this subject as I should have expected them to speak, I happen to be chairman of our committee on committees, and can assure Senators on the other side that that committee will look into this matter thoroughly. The minority has no more desire to place unfit men in office in the Senate than the majority; we are all equally interested in having honorable and proper service; but I do think that it would be the grossest injustice, with what has been said here to-day, to strike down, as it would strike down, a man of unblemished character hitherto, so far as we have all known—and he has been among us for 15 or 18 years—simply on what has been alleged on the floor to-day.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion to amend made by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE].

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I hardly think it is fair for the Senator from Michigan [Mr. TOWNSEND] to suggest that I have been unfair in this regard. The matter has taken a course entirely unexpected to me, and I am not responsible for having precipitated this specific charge. In fact, I did not make the charge. I suggested to the Senate that the charge had come to my attention.

It is true, sir, I was advised of this prior to the last vote in the Lorimer case. I immediately advised Senator Bailey and Senator CUMMINS. I felt I could not honorably withhold the information from those two Senators, whatever it might be worth. I have since told several other Senators of the statement made to me.

I did not make it at that time because I was unwilling to introduce this incident into the Lorimer trial, and I did not make it sooner with a view to removing this officer because I did not believe that it would be possible at that time to undertake his removal. I thought the wiser course was to defer until this occasion, when I supposed the charge could be investigated and he would either be vindicated or convicted of the charge and suitable action could be based upon a responsible report.

I have pursued the course which I think the wise one.

Mr. LODGE. I only desire to say, in view of what the Senator from Oklahoma has said, that the certificate of deposit was lost when the first trial of the Lorimer case came on three years ago.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Four years ago.

Mr. LODGE. I should have said four years ago. The Lorimer case was tried a second time, and even then this matter was never brought out.

Mr. GORE. The Senator from Massachusetts has entirely misconceived what I said. I remember the incident; I know that it occurred on the first trial; I know that it was not material evidence on the last trial, owing to a fuller investigation by the committee; but the matter did not come to my attention until about three weeks before the last vote, and I did not think it was necessary to introduce it at that time. I could not foretell that Mr. Loeffler would be nominated for this place, and if he had not been so nominated, I should not have felt under any obligation to mention the matter now or hereafter. There would have been no occasion to make the matter public.

Mr. MYERS. Mr. President, inasmuch as I am paired and shall not have the privilege of casting a vote on this roll call, I desire, in a very few words, to explain my vote. I am not one of those on the majority side, referred to by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], if there be any, who believe that we can proceed with this election now and divest ourselves of all responsibility. I believe that the majority side in a matter of this kind, and in this particular action, has responsibility as well as has the minority. I will suggest that this is not a question of electing or defeating this gentleman at this time; it is merely a question of postponing the matter temporarily until it can be looked into, investigated, and reported upon; that is all. Then, if he is found innocent, the election can be proceeded with at once and made unanimous. If he is found guilty, he will simply not be elected, instead of being turned out. I concur in the views of the Senator from Wisconsin, that this is a matter which needs investigation before being acted upon.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Wisconsin demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the question.

Mr. BACON. I understand the question to be upon the motion of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] to strike out so much of the resolution as relates to this particular official.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the question.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike from the end of the resolution the words—

And Acting Assistant Doorkeeper of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. JACKSON]. If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. JAMES (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WEEKS]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] and vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. MYERS (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCLEAN]. In his absence I withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. OLIVER (when the name of Mr. PENROSE was called). I wish to state that my colleague [Mr. PENROSE] is necessarily absent from the city to-day. If he were present, he would vote "nay" on this proposition.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED] to the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT] and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. TOWNSEND (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. BRYAN], who is necessarily absent from the Senate. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. STEPHENSON] and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE], but in view of the statement made on the floor a moment ago by the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. OLIVER], I desire to vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 18, nays 45, as follows:

YEAS—18.

Bristow	Kern	Newlands	Thompson
Clapp	La Follette	O'Gorman	Vardaman

So Mr. LA FOLLETTE's amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the original resolution.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I ask for a division of the question on so much of the resolution as relates to the election of an Acting Assistant Doorkeeper at this time.

Mr. LODGE. The officers are all elected separately.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I am informed that all these officials are elected separately. That being true, I withdraw my request. This I understand to be a motion to proceed to the election.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. KERN. I offer the resolution which I send to the desk, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Indiana submits a resolution and asks unanimous consent for its immediate consideration. The resolution will be read. (S. Res. 7.)

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That James M. Baker, of South Carolina, be, and he is hereby, elected Secretary of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution? The Chair hears none. The question is upon agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. ROOT. Mr. President, I move to amend the resolution by striking out the name of "James M. Baker, of South Carolina," and inserting the name of "Charles Goodwin Bennett, of New York," as Secretary of the Senate.

Mr. BRISTOW. I move that we proceed to elect a Secretary of the Senate by ballot, and that the roll be called, or by a viva voce vote, if it is not desired to have the roll called.

Mr. LODGE. There is no intention to call the roll.

Mr. BRISTOW. Very well; I withdraw the motion which I just made.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from New York [Mr. ROOT] to the resolution.

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question recurs upon the adoption of the original resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. KERN. I offer the resolution which I send to the desk, and I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Indiana submits a resolution and asks unanimous consent for its immediate consideration. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 11), as follows:

Resolved, That Charles P. Higgins, of Missouri, be, and he is hereby, elected Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I move to amend the resolution by striking out the name of "Charles P. Higgins, of Missouri," and substituting the name of "E. Livingstone Cornelius, of Maryland."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment to the resolution proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER].

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the adoption of the original resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. KERN. I offer the resolution which I send to the desk, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Indiana submits a resolution and asks unanimous consent for its immediate consideration. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 8), as follows:

Resolved, That Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, of the District of Columbia, be, and he is hereby, elected Chaplain of the Senate.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I move to amend the resolution by striking out the name of "Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman" and inserting that of "Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D." for Chaplain.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment to the resolution, proposed by the Senator from Wyoming.

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the adoption of the original resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. KERN. I offer the resolution which I send to the desk, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Indiana submits a resolution and asks unanimous consent for its immediate consideration. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That Thomas W. Keller, of West Virginia, be, and he is hereby, elected Assistant Doorkeeper of the Senate; and that Carl A. Loeffler, of Pennsylvania, be, and he is hereby, chosen Acting Assistant Doorkeeper of the Senate.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the resolution.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Now, Mr. President, I ask for a separate vote on those two proposed names.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Wisconsin asks for a separate vote on the two names contained in the resolution. The votes will be taken separately in the absence of objection.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I do not ask for a roll call upon the first name, that of Mr. Keller; but I propose to ask for a roll call upon the election of the Acting Assistant Doorkeeper for this side of the Chamber; and I propose to offer another name for the consideration of the Senate for that position.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question will first be taken upon the election of the Assistant Doorkeeper. The first clause of the resolution will be read. (S. Res. 9.)

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That Thomas W. Keller, of West Virginia, be, and he is hereby, elected Assistant Doorkeeper of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to so much of the resolution as has just been read.

The first clause of the resolution was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question now is on the second division of the resolution, which will be read. (S. Res. 10.)

The Secretary read as follows:

And that Carl A. Loeffler, of Pennsylvania, be, and he is hereby, chosen Acting Assistant Doorkeeper of the Senate.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. For that position, Mr. President, I place in nomination the name of "A. D. Sumner," who has served in the capacity, I think, of Acting Assistant Doorkeeper upon the other side of the Chamber.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out the name of "Carl A. Loeffler, of Pennsylvania," and insert "A. D. Sumner, of Iowa."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I simply nominate Mr. Sumner, and ask for a roll call on the election.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Wisconsin asks for a roll call upon the question.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I think we might proceed as we did in the case of the election of the President pro tempore of the Senate.

Mr. LODGE. Substituting the name of Mr. Sumner.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Let each Senator as his name is called announce his preference.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, I desire to say that I had intended to vote for Mr. Loeffler, but I do not believe that the election of any candidate should be proceeded with while charges are pending against him. I think that an investigation should first have been made; and if he is not guilty, which, from my knowledge of him, I do not believe he is, then he could have been elected with the unanimous vote of the Senate, but I can not vote for Mr. Loeffler or anybody else under the circumstances that present themselves to us at this time. I wanted to make that statement before the roll was called

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, I have not taken any part in this matter, and the fact is this is the first I have heard of it; but I will ask the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] if he will not withdraw the motion to substitute another name for the simple reason that these charges have just been made, and under the law as it has obtained all the while a man is considered innocent until he is proven guilty. In view of the fact that these charges are now made and that the minority have declared their intention to sift them, and if the person be found guilty then judgment will be pronounced upon him, I think, in justice to the man charged, that we should allow him to be elected and then allow the investigation to be afterwards made.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I desire to say that I voted for the motion of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] a few moments ago simply because I thought that this matter ought to be investigated before the election was had. I can not vote for Mr. Sumner under the circumstances, however, although I supported him in the Republican conference. Mr. Loeffler was the choice of that conference, and I am perfectly willing to accept their verdict in that matter so far as this election of the man is concerned. I am very much in the position of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BRISTOW]; I do not like to vote for anybody under these circumstances, because I think this matter ought to have been investigated before the election was had; but, as I have said, I can not vote for Mr. Sumner under the circumstances.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the question and call the roll.

The SECRETARY. The second clause of the resolution is as follows:

And that Carl A. Loeffler, of Pennsylvania, be, and he is hereby, chosen Acting Assistant Doorkeeper of the Senate.

To this Mr. LA FOLLETTE offers an amendment to substitute for the name of "Carl A. Loeffler" the name of "A. D. Sumner."

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President, there seems to be some confusion upon this side as to just what is the question before the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the name of "Mr. Sumner" be substituted in the resolution for the name of "Mr. Loeffler"? The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I again announce my pair, as on the previous vote, with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. JACKSON]. If I were permitted to vote under what I understand to be the agreement and arrangement, I should vote "nay."

Mr. JAMES (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WEEKS]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. MYERS (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCLEAN], and on account of his absence withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. OWEN. (when his name was called). I do not feel willing to vote against this young man without a hearing, and I vote "nay."

Mr. THOMPSON. I feel regarding this matter much the same as does the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN]. I would prefer to have the matter referred to the proper committee.

Mr. GALLINGER. Debate is not in order, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Debate is not in order.

Mr. THOMPSON. Under the circumstances of the case I do not feel like voting against this young man. The presumption of law is that he is innocent, and I vote "nay."

Mr. TOWNSEND (when his name was called). As I have already stated, I am paired with the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. BRYAN]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. STEPHENSON] and will vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. GALLINGER (after having voted in the negative). I inquire if the junior Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN] has voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is informed that that Senator has not voted.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have a general pair with that Senator, and therefore withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 5, nays 47, as follows:

YEAS—5.

Bristow	James	La Follette	Sheppard

So the amendment of Mr. LA FOLLETTE was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the adoption of the original resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I wish to say that I have no interest in this controversy, and have had none, other than that the truth should be known. I thought it ought to have been ascertained in advance. The Senate has ordered otherwise. It is to me a matter of indifference as to how it shall be done, so that it carries a guaranty of having been done deliberately.

Mr. Loeffler is now an officer of the Senate, and not a candidate of the minority side. A vindication at the hands of the Committee on Privileges and Elections would, of course, set him entirely square before the Senate and before the country. I am sure that he would court such an investigation and desire such a vindication. I therefore move that the Committee on Privileges and Elections be instructed to look into this matter.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, in view of the fact that assurances have been given on the minority side that this matter will be properly attended to, I move to lay the motion on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Hampshire moves to lay on the table the motion of the Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Upon that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, before the vote is taken I should like to say just a word.

It seems to me that the proper way to dispose of this matter is to withdraw this motion, if the Senator from Oklahoma will do so, which of course will result in withdrawing the motion to lay on the table, and leave this matter with the minority membership.

These Senators are just as much concerned in the integrity of the Senate administration as any other Senators. I am sure they will look into it and make a satisfactory report to Senators. It may be in executive session; it may be to Senators individually. If that is not done, this is something that can be taken up at any moment. But I submit that it is not quite the right thing to do to take this matter away from the minority by one sweep and refer it to a standing committee of the Senate, for the reason that, as I view it, this is a matter which especially appeals to a proper consideration and a proper disposition by the minority themselves. I think we ought to leave it there for the time being.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is upon laying upon the table——

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to say a word. I know this motion is not debatable.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I think I can——

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Were the yeas and nays ordered?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. GORE. I think I can relieve the situation——

Mr. OLIVER. Have I the floor?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Pennsylvania has the floor.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. President, I appeal to the Senator from New Hampshire to withdraw his motion to lay on the table. This matter having come up, if it is simply investigated by the conference of the minority, it may not be looked upon as a sufficient vindication of this young man, whom I believe to be thoroughly innocent of any wrong. I think it is due to him that an investigation be made by a body whose verdict will be accepted by everybody as final. I appeal to the Senator from New Hampshire to allow the motion of the Senator from Oklahoma to go through, and to allow the Committee on Privileges and Elections to take up the matter and decide it.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I will not withdraw my motion, and I trust no further debate will be permitted by the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is upon laying on the table the motion of the Senator from Oklahoma that the matter be referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections, upon which the yeas and nays have been ordered. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BRISTOW (when his name was called). Upon this vote I am paired with the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. If he were here, he would vote "yea," and if I were at liberty to vote, I would vote "nay."

Mr. CHILTON (when his name was called). I again announce my pair. If I were at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. JAMES (when his name was called). I transfer the general pair I had with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WEEKS] to the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. MYERS (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCLEAN], and on account of his absence withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. SMITH of Michigan (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED] to the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT] and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. TOWNSEND (when his name was called). I again announce my general pair with the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. BRYAN], which I transfer to the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. STEPHENSON] and will vote. I vote "nay."

I desire to have this announcement stand for the day on all future votes.

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE]. Not knowing how he would vote upon this particular question I withhold my vote. If I were at liberty to vote upon this question, I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CHILTON. I made an announcement understanding that there was an agreement and an arrangement, but seeing that it is not so regarded I should like the RECORD to show that if I were at liberty to vote now I should vote "nay."

Mr. GALLINGER. I am paired with the junior Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. LIPPITT] and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. BACON (after having voted in the affirmative). Mr. President, I desire to say that I voted "yea" because I thought that was the desire of the minority, and I thought the matter ought to be left exclusively to them. But as they are divided on the subject I will, with the permission of the Senate, change my vote from "yea" to "nay." I should be willing to leave it to them if they were unanimously of that desire.

The result was announced—yeas 10, nays 38, as follows:

YEAS—10.

Catron	Nelson	Root	Warren
Gallinger	Perkins	Sutherland

So Mr. GALLINGER's motion to lay upon the table the motion made by Mr. GORE was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. GORE] to refer the charges to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. KERN. I ask that the oath of office be administered to the Secretary elect.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary elect will present himself at the desk for that purpose.

Mr. Baker was escorted to the Vice President's desk by Henry M. Rose, Assistant Secretary, and the oath prescribed by law having been administered to him, he took his seat at the Secretary's desk.

Mr. KERN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 12), which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

Resolved, That the President of the United States and the House of Representatives be notified of the election of Hon. JAMES P. CLARKE of Arkansas as President pro tempore of the Senate, James M. Baker as Secretary of the Senate, and Charles P. Higgins as Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM FOR EXTRA SESSION.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I wish to offer a resolution. I ask unanimous consent that it be printed in the RECORD and that it may lie on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nevada does not ask to have it read?

Mr. NEWLANDS. I do not ask to have it read, but printed in the RECORD.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I should like to know the nature of it before consenting.

Mr. NEWLANDS. It is a resolution for a legislative program. I will address the Senate on it at the next session.

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 4) was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolution for a legislative program during the extra session.

1. Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that during the approaching extra session for the immediate revision of the tariff Congress should not only consider and pass comprehensive legislation regarding all the schedules of the tariff but should also, through the appropriate committees, consider other subjects of needed legislation, to be taken up for final action at the next regular session of Congress.

TARIFF AND TAXATION.

2. Resolved, That the Senate Committee on Finance report at as early a date as possible during the extra session upon the following questions:

(a) Whether the prices of any farm products in the United States are raised above the international level of prices by the duties now imposed on such products; and if so, what products, and whether such duties on such products can be abolished or materially reduced without injury to American industry, and to what extent. In such inquiry shall be included meats, cheese, wool, sugar, tobacco, wines, citrus fruits, and dried and preserved fruits.

(b) What products now on the dutiable list should be put on the free list.

(c) Whether it is practicable and advisable to change all duties from specific to ad valorem duties.

(d) The average percentage of the duties imposed by the existing tariff, and the average percentage to which it is desirable to reduce the duties imposed under the proposed revision of the tariff, and the maximum and the minimum duties which it is desirable to impose.

(e) Whether it is practicable and desirable to distribute the proposed reduction over a period of four years.

(f) Whether it is practicable and advisable after making the contemplated reduction in the tariff to organize an administrative tariff board, which, acting under rules fixed by Congress, shall have the power, either upon its own initiative, or upon the initiative of any importer, producer, or consumer, to further inquire into complaints of excessive duties prohibiting or unduly restricting importations, or of diminished duties permitting excessive importations, to the prejudice of existing domestic industries, and to the injury of the capital or labor employed therein, or of excessive duties prejudicial to domestic consumers, such board to present to the President and to Congress such recommendations as it may deem advisable.

(g) Whether it is practicable and advisable to give such tariff board, after full investigation and hearing, the power, with the approval of the President, to make reductions or increases in duties, within certain limitations and under rules prescribed by Congress; and if so, what limitations and rules should be prescribed.

(h) Whether it is practicable and advisable to make such rules and regulations for the action of such a tariff board as will enable the Government to feel its way gradually from a higher protective to a revenue basis without readjustments prejudicial both to domestic labor and capital, and without denying to the consumers needed relief from the imposition of excessive taxes upon foreign imports and excessive prices for domestic products.

(i) Whether it is advisable to provide a graduated income tax and a graduated inheritance tax with a view to making up any deficit in revenue caused by a reduction in customs duties, and also with a view to extending the operations of the National Government in cooperation with the States in the improvement of post roads, the regulation of rivers in aid of navigation, irrigation, water-power development, and swamp-land reclamation, and also in cooperation with the States in the advancement of vocational education.

(k) Whether it is practicable and advisable to appoint a budget committee, of which the chairman of the Appropriation Committee and the chairmen of the other supply committees shall be members.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

3. Resolved, That the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce report at as early a date as possible during the extra session upon the following questions:

(a) Whether it is advisable to supplement the existing Sherman Antitrust Act by legislation which will more specifically define restraints of trade, including therein the prevention of unfair competition, stock watering, overcapitalization, excessive size, interlocking directors, and the holding by one corporation of the stock of another.

(b) Whether it is advisable to substitute for the present system of holding companies, by which a corporation organized under the laws of a single State is made the means of federating corporations organized under the laws of other States for the purpose of interstate transportation, a national act for the incorporation of holding companies, under which railway companies organized under the laws of different States may be federated for interstate transportation, such holding companies to be subject in their general conduct to the regulation of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

(c) Whether it is advisable to organize an interstate-trade commission, in which shall be merged the officials, powers, and functions of the Bureau of Corporations, with powers of publicity, investigation, correction, and recommendation regarding corporations engaged in interstate trade similar to those conferred upon the Interstate Commerce Commission regarding corporations engaged in interstate transportation, but without the power to fix prices, such interstate-trade commission to have the power to aid the courts in the administration of the Sherman Act and other legislation supplementary thereto.

(d) Whether it is advisable to provide for the creation of a board of river regulation which shall bring into cooperation the departments and services of the National Government whose duties in any way relate to waterways in devising and carrying out comprehensive plans for the promotion of interstate commerce by the regulation of river flow, the mitigation of destructive floods, by the promotion of storage above and of bank and levee protection below, the establishment of terminal and transfer facilities, the coordination of rail and water carriers, and the cooperation of the Nation with the States, each within its jurisdiction, in plans and works for the full and, so far as practicable, compensatory development of the rivers for every useful purpose, and the establishment of an ample fund for continuous work during a period of 10 years.

(e) Whether it is practicable and advisable to bring into coordination under the Interstate Commerce Commission the related subjects of interstate transportation, interstate trade, and interstate exchange, by the creation of three boards in such commission, one relating to interstate transportation, one relating to interstate trade, and one relating to interstate exchange, the present Interstate Commerce Commission to constitute the board of interstate transportation, the proposed interstate-trade commission to constitute the board of interstate trade, and the proposed banking commission to constitute the board of interstate exchange, merging into the board of interstate trade the present Bureau of Corporations and merging into the board of interstate exchange the Comptroller's office.

INTERSTATE EXCHANGE.

4. Resolved, That the proper Senate committee report as soon as possible during the extra session upon the following question:

(a) Whether it is practicable and advisable to organize under national law in each State a national reserve association, in which the State banks engaged in interstate exchange and complying with the national legislation as to capital and reserves shall be united with the national banks as members, such associations to have the powers of issue relating to emergency currency now enjoyed by the constituent national banks; such associations to have such of the powers proposed by the National Monetary Commission to be conferred upon a central national reserve association as are necessary and advisable; such State associations to have the powers of investigation and correction regarding the affairs of the constituent banks; such State associations to be brought into federation for the protection of interstate exchange and the prevention of bank panics through a national banking commission fairly representative of the different sections of the country, part of which shall be selected by such associations and part by the President of the United States; such national banking commission to have powers of investigation and correction over the State associations, and to report to the President and Congress annually such recommendations as it deems advisable regarding legislation and administration concerning monetary affairs.

PUBLIC LANDS AND NATURAL RESOURCES.

5. Resolved, That the Senate Committee on Public Lands report at as early a date as possible during the extra session upon the following questions:

(a) Whether it would be advisable for the National Government to promote the development of Alaska by the construction of a railroad or railroads; and, if so, the probable cost and plans for construction and operation.

(b) Recommendations regarding the protection of our natural resources in timber, coal, iron, and oil against monopolistic control.

(c) The applicability of the land laws of Canada to the conditions of our public domain, and particularly those provisions regarding the grant of the surface to settlers, excluding from the operation of the grant—timber, coal, iron, oil, and water-power sites.

MILITARY EXPENSES AND AUXILIARY NAVY.

6. Resolved, That the Committees on Military and Naval Affairs report at as early a date as possible during the extra session upon the following questions:

(a) The preparation of a plan for the more efficient administration and cooperation of the Army and Navy and the reduction of the total Army and Navy expense for the next four years to not exceeding $225,000,000 annually, with the aid of a board of Army and Navy officers to be selected by the President.

(b) A plan for the construction of auxiliary ships for the Navy, to be used in time of war in aid of the fighting ships and in time of peace in establishing necessary service through the Panama Canal and new routes of commerce to foreign countries through lease to shipping companies; such legislation involving the temporary diminution of the construction of fighting ships and the substitution of auxiliary ships with a view to the organization of a well-proportioned and efficient Navy.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, my purpose in offering these resolutions is to secure the consideration during the extra session by the appropriate committees of the various subjects which are likely to come up for legislative action during the next regular session in December.

Our experience in these extra sessions teaches us that whilst the tariff bill is in committee or pending in the House, the Senate has nothing to do, and whilst the bill is pending in the Senate the House has nothing to do, and that while the committees in the Senate and the House having jurisdiction of the tariff are busy the remaining committees are without occupation.

The Democratic platform presents so many matters requiring legislative action that it is important that the committees should clear the way as soon as practicable, and the extra session offers this opportunity. It is not my purpose to embarrass the extra session by any legislation relating to subjects other than the tariff, but simply to keep the committees of the Senate during the extra session employed in work which will be productive of results at the next regular session commencing in December.

The subjects which I have incorporated in this legislative program are subjects which are referred to in the Democratic platform and require early solution.

The membership of Congress is highly efficient. The methods of Congress are not highly efficient. Experience has shown that owing to these methods the sessions of Congress are constantly increasing in length, so that they threaten to become continuous. The resolutions do not commit the Senate in any way to specific legislation, but simply call upon the appropriate committees for reports upon the different subjects of legislation which will be of great advantage in the ultimate solution of legislative problems.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will lie on the table and be printed.

THE PANAMA CANAL (S. DOC. NO. 2).

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I present and ask to have printed as a public document an article appearing in The Outlook on the Panama Canal, by Samuel Seabury, justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York. It is a very illuminating article, and I feel that it is exceedingly appropriate at this particular time.

Mr. SMOOT. I did not hear the request of the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. It is an article appearing in The Outlook on the Panama Canal, by Samuel Seabury, justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York. As I stated, it is a most illuminating article and an intelligent one, and I feel that it is infinitely appropriate to the conditions that today confront us regarding the canal. I ask that it may be printed as a public document. It is a short article.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course I am not going to object, but it is becoming the practice of the Senate to have every article published in any of the magazines made a public document.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I have no desire to incumber the RECORD with every magazine article, and I see many of them.

Mr. SMOOT. I am not going to object to the Senator's request.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. KERN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 10 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

Mr. KERN. I move that the Senate adjourn until Saturday next at 2 o'clock p. m.

The motion was agreed to, and (at 4 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Saturday, March 15, 1913, at 2 o'clock p. m.

SENATE.

SATURDAY, March 15, 1913.

The Senate met at 2 o'clock p. m.

Prayer by Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D., of the city of Washington.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of the proceedings of Thursday last, when, on request of Mr. GALLINGER and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

SENATOR FROM NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I rise to a question of privilege. I present the credentials of Mr. HENRY F. HOLLIS, elected a Senator from the State of New Hampshire. I ask that the credentials may be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The credentials will be read.

The credentials of HENRY F. HOLLIS, chosen by the Legislature of the State of New Hampshire a Senator from that State for the term beginning March 4, 1913, were read and ordered to be filed.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, the Senator elect is present and prepared to take the oath.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The newly elected Senator will present himself at the desk for that purpose.

Mr. HOLLIS was escorted to the Vice President's desk by Mr. GALLINGER, and the oath prescribed by law having been administered to him, he took his seat in the Senate.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

STATEMENT OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I rise to ask unanimous consent to print certain matter in the RECORD. I may say in explanation that it is usual for the Committees on Appropriations of the House and Senate to submit on the last day of the session a statement giving a history of the appropriation bills and the sum total of the appropriations, also the estimates from the departments and the amounts at the various stages of progress of the bills—amounts of the bills as brought into the House and voted upon there, and as they came to the Senate, and so forth.

The stress of business near the close of the last session of the Sixty-second Congress was such that the clerks of the committees of the House and Senate were unable to complete the statement. The chairman of the Appropriations Committee of the House received permission to extend his remarks and print tables in the RECORD, I think, within 15 days after final adjournment—that is, as the RECORD is being printed from day to day containing speeches which were withheld. The appropriation matter was released yesterday.

So, on the part of the Senate, I now wish to submit this table, which has been agreed upon by the accountants of both committees. In fact, there are two tables—one which shows the totals and another which shows a comparison between the appropriation bills for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, and the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914.

It is usual for the chairmen of such committees to make somewhat extended remarks when they present the matter. I shall not do that now. I observe from the printed proofs, which I have here before me, that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations of the House and the former ranking member of the minority of the House have submitted or will submit extended remarks, and while they differ, as party statements always do, they unite upon one recommendation—that all appropriation bills should be handled by one committee. I shall offer no remarks upon that statement, but shall ask those who are interested in the subject to turn to the record that will be made on the House side by the two Members chosen to represent their parties in connection with this table.

I merely ask now that the table may be inserted in the RECORD.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I was taken very much by surprise, I confess, yesterday when I was notified by the Senator from Wyoming, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, that he intended to make a financial statement. I was not first upon the list of the minority of the Committee on Appropriations, and, as is well known by Senators, I have been sick. If I had known that the Senator from Wyoming was going to make this statement, I should have taken it upon myself, as an individual member of that committee, to prepare a counter statement, because the statements of the views of the minority and majority do not agree in many respects. I do not know that I shall now have time to make out a statement.

I wish to say, however, Mr. President, that many, many millions of dollars were added to the appropriation bills by the Senate, and many great items in the legislative appropriation bill and other bills that came from the House of Representatives were increased against my protest.

If I had time I should like to make a statement. It is impossible to make a statement without having the figures at hand ready to read. I have not, of course, examined the statement submitted by the Senator from Wyoming. It may be correct. I do not say it is not correct, but I expect on many items we will have some differences. I merely thought, as a member of the minority of the committee and not a leading member, but as an individual member——

Mr. BACON. I should like to make a suggestion to the Senator, which I presume would be entirely acceptable to the Senator from Wyoming.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. OVERMAN. I yield.

Mr. BACON. It is that in view of the statement made by the Senator from North Carolina that he would desire to make such a statement and has not now time to do it, that the Senator from Wyoming will withhold his statement until the extra session, in order that the two statements may go into the RECORD at the same time.

Mr. WARREN. My idea in offering it now is this: The country is always anxious to know what the expenses of a session are when it is over, and it is usual to have the statement prepared and submitted on the last day of the session.

It was not the fault of the Senate any more than it was of the House that we were unable to make it prior to March 4.

The statement itself does not make charges against any party nor does it affirm for any party any approbation. It simply gives the figures, and I may say to my friend from North Carolina that it gives in detail the additions made by the Senate, which is exactly what the Senator will want to know. It gives every detail of addition and subtraction by the Senate and is to be printed in that manner, furnishing that information. If the Senator should wish to have something printed later, I certainly would have no objection.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I will say in answer to the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON] what I was about to state, that I shall not be precluded from making a statement later. I wanted the statement that I make now to go in the RECORD with the statement made by the chairman of the committee. Not having been able to examine his figures, I felt called upon at this time to make this statement, and later I will submit a statement in detail.

Mr. WARREN. I think I ought to correct the Senator in one respect. They are not my figures at all. They are the figures of the two accountants or head clerks of the two Committees on Appropriations—on the House side and the Senate side—and they are identical.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Wyoming? There being no objection, permission is granted.

The matter referred to follows.

History of appropriation bills, third session of the Sixty-second Congress; estimates and appropriations for the fiscal year 1913-14; and appropriations for the fiscal year 1912-13.

Amount of estimated postal revenues for fiscal year 1914	281,791,508.00
Total of estimated revenues for fiscal year 1914	991,791,508.00

[1] This amount includes $1,350,000 appropriated in a joint resolution, approved July 8, 1912, for the Organized Militia, a like sum having been carried by the Army act which was vetoed, and omitted from the Army act finally approved.

[2] One-half of the amounts for the District of Columbia payable by the United States, except amounts for the water department, which are payable from the revenues of the water department.

[3] This amount includes appropriations for objects for which there was appropriated for similar purposes $999,670 in other than the legislative act for 1913.

[4] Includes all expenses of the postal service payable from postal revenues and out of the Treasury.

[5] In addition to this amount the sum of $12,937,982 to meet contracts authorized by law for river and harbor improvements is included in the sundry civil estimates for 1914.

[6] In addition to this amount the sum of $10,045,795 is appropriated in the sundry civil act to carry out contracts authorized by law for river and harbor improvements for 1914.

[7] In addition to this amount the sum of $9,500,250 was appropriated in the sundry civil act to carry out contracts authorized by law for river and harbor improvements for 1913.

[8] This amount includes $12,937,982 to carry out contracts authorized by law for river and harbor improvements, and $30,174,432.11 for construction and fortification of the Panama Canal for 1914.

[9] This amount includes $10,045,795 to carry out contracts authorized by law for river and harbor improvements, and $21,135,393 for construction and fortification of the Panama Canal for 1914, and appropriations for objects for which there was appropriated for similar purposes $6,152,798.56 in other than the sundry civil act for 1913.

[10] This amount includes $9,500,250 to carry out contracts authorized by law for river and harbor improvements, and $31,786,950 for the construction and fortification of the Panama Canal for 1913.

[12] This is the amount submitted by the Secretary of the Treasury in the annual estimates for the fiscal year 1914, the exact amount appropriated not being ascertainable until two years after the close of the fiscal year. This amount includes estimated amount of $60,685,000 to meet sinking-fund obligations for 1914.

[13] In addition to this amount contracts are authorized to be entered into, subject to future appropriations by Congress, as follows: By the Army act, $150,000; by the District of Columbia act, $2,185,000; by the fortification act, $300,000; by the naval act, $21,296,524; by the rivers and harbors act, $5,795,800; by the public buildings act, $39,892,850 (exclusive of $5,116,000 for authorizations without contracts); in all, $70,620,174.

[14] In addition to this amount contracts are authorized to be entered into, subject to future appropriations by Congress, as follows: By the fortification act, $371,400; by the naval act, $23,852,500; by the rivers and harbors act, $2,200,000; in all, $26,423,900.

COMMITTEES OF THE SENATE.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, I propose the order I send to the desk, and ask for its adoption.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Indiana asks for the adoption of an order, which will be read.

The Secretary read the order, as follows:

Ordered, That so much of Rule XXIV of the Senate as provides for appointment of the standing and other committees of the Senate by ballot be suspended.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the order just read? The Chair hears none, and the order is adopted.

Mr. KERN. I offer the resolution I send to the desk, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the resolution, and the Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the following shall constitute the standing committees of the Senate of the Sixty-third Congress:

On Additional Accommodations for the Library of Congress: Mr. Penrose (chairman), Mr. Poindexter, Mr. Stone, Mr. Hughes, and Mr. Vardaman.

On Agriculture and Forestry: Mr. Gore (chairman), Mr. Smith of South Carolina, Mr. Smith of Georgia, Mr. Sheppard, Mr. Shafroth, Mr. Ransdell, Mr. Thompson, Mr. Robinson, Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Warren, Mr. Page, Mr. Crawford, Mr. Bradley, Mr. Gronna, Mr. Brady, and Mr. Norris.

On Appropriations: Mr. Martin of Virginia (chairman), Mr. Overman, Mr. Owen, Mr. Smith of Maryland, Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Lea, Mr. Bryan, Mr. Shafroth, Mr. Tillman, Mr. Culberson, Mr. Warren, Mr. Perkins, Mr. Gallinger, Mr. Smoot, Mr. Oliver, Mr. Dillingham, and Mr. Jones.

To Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate: Mr. Williams (chairman), Mr. Shafroth, Mr. Reed, Mr. Dillingham, and Mr. Bristow.

On Banking and Currency: Mr. Owen (chairman), Mr. Hitchcock, Mr. O'Gorman, Mr. Reed, Mr. Pomerene, Mr. Shafroth, Mr. Hollis, Mr. Nelson, Mr. Bristow, Mr. Burton, Mr. Crawford, and Mr. Weeks.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, it is a little unexpected that the Senator from Indiana should offer as complete the Senate committees, inasmuch as we were only informed late yesterday that the majority desired some changes, and I thought I was understood in suggesting that we should have time for a meeting this morning of the committee on committees to rearrange the committees as proposed as nearly as we could.

However, I do not wish to delay action on the resolution of the Senator from Indiana, and if I may correct the minority list as each committee is reached I shall then offer no objection, of course, to the further consideration of the resolution.

Mr. KERN. Very well.

Mr. WARREN. On Banking and Currency, commencing with the minority members, the list should read Mr. Nelson, Mr. Bristow, Mr. Crawford, Mr. McLean, and Mr. Weeks.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the list of the committee as amended.

The SECRETARY. The Committee on Banking and Currency would then read:

Mr. Owen (chairman), Mr. Hitchcock, Mr. O'Gorman, Mr. Reed, Mr. Pomerene, Mr. Shafroth, Mr. Hollis, Mr. Nelson, Mr. Bristow, Mr. Crawford, Mr. McLean, and Mr. Weeks.

The reading was continued, as follows:

On Canadian Relations: Mr. Shields (chairman), Mr. Ransdell, Mr. Walsh, Mr. Gore, Mr. Smith of Maryland, Mr. Oliver, Mr. Cummins, Mr. Burton, and Mr. Root.

On the Census: Mr. Chilton (chairman), Mr. Pomerene, Mr. Sheppard, Mr. Shively, Mr. Thornton, Mr. Martine of New Jersey, Mr. Thompson, Mr. La Follette, Mr. Cummins, Mr. du Pont, Mr. McLean, and Mr. Townsend.

On Civil Service and Retrenchment: Mr. Pomerene (chairman), Mr. Johnston of Alabama, Mr. Myers, Mr. James, Mr. Hollis, Mr. Shields, Mr. Ransdell, Mr. Cummins, Mr. La Follette, Mr. Smoot, Mr. Colt, and Mr. Sterling.

On Claims: Mr. Bryan (chairman), Mr. Overman, Mr. Pittman, Mr. Robinson, Mr. James, Mr. Johnson of Maine, Mr. Martin of Virginia, Mr. Lane, Mr. Crawford, Mr. Bristow, Mr. Bradley, Mr. Burleigh, Mr. ———, and Mr. Norris.

On Coast and Insular Survey: Mr. Saulsbury (chairman), Mr. Bryan, Mr. Culberson, Mr. Bankhead, Mr. Pittman, Mr. Townsend, Mr. Works, Mr. Brady, and Mr. Sterling.

On Coast Defenses: Mr. Martine of New Jersey (chairman), Mr. Johnson of Maine, Mr. Simmons, Mr. Smith of Maryland, Mr. Sheppard, Mr. Lane, Mr. du Pont, Mr. Root, Mr. Catron, Mr. Weeks, and Mr. Burleigh.

On Commerce: Mr. Clarke of Arkansas (chairman), Mr. Fletcher, Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Ransdell, Mr. Sheppard, Mr. Vardaman, Mr. Shields, Mr. Martin of Virginia, Mr. Bankhead, Mr. Simmons, Mr. Nelson, Mr. Perkins, Mr. Smith of Michigan, Mr. Stephenson, Mr. Crawford, Mr. Oliver, and Mr. McLean.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, after the name of "Mr. SMITH of Michigan," I move to insert the name of "Mr. BURTON" and to strike off the name of "Mr. MCLEAN."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the list as proposed to be amended by the Senator from Wyoming.

The SECRETARY. The names of the minority side of the committee will then read:

Mr. Nelson, Mr. Perkins, Mr. Smith of Michigan, Mr. Burton, Mr. Stephenson, Mr. Crawford, and Mr. Oliver.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, at that point there should be inserted, so that it may be printed in the usual way:

The conference of the minority: Mr. Gallinger, chairman.

Mr. KERN. There is no objection to that, but the list as presented is exactly the way it was presented from the other side two years ago.

Mr. BACON. That has never heretofore appeared in the list of committees.

Mr. WARREN. It so appears in the list of committees in the office of the financial clerk and in other lists.

Mr. BACON. In what list?

Mr. WARREN. In all the lists, I think.

Mr. BACON. As adopted by the Senate?

Mr. WARREN. Certainly.

Mr. BACON. Does the Senator mean to say that the Senate has heretofore adopted in the list of committees the name of a party official?

Mr. WARREN. Is the Senate not adopting the entire party nominees for committees?

Mr. BACON. Undoubtedly; but that is a different matter. I do not think I can be mistaken in the fact, as the Senator will find.

Mr. WARREN. I understand I am right. Perhaps the Senator will look at the paper I have here.

Mr. BACON. I may be in error, but I am speaking about the action of the Senate. Of course we know who such officials are, and all that, but the Senate does not.

Mr. WARREN. Here it is in the committee list, which gives the name of Mr. MARTIN.

Mr. BACON. From what paper does the Senator read?

Mr. WARREN. From the list of committees that was prepared officially; but, Mr. President, I do not wish to have any misunderstanding about this matter. I withdraw the suggestion.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I beg pardon of the Senator, but it is not the manner in which it has always been done, for I have before me the action of the Senate organizing the committees at the last Congress, where a list is given of committees named in the resolution offered by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER], and that particular committee is not included in the list.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I rise simply to say that, as objection has been made, I trust that it will be dropped from the list. I have no desire——

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. There is no objection to its being done in a proper way.

Mr. WARREN. Well, would the Senator suggest in what way it should be done to get it into print?

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. It does not seem to have any place in the official list of committees, at least it has not heretofore had a place. I have no objection to the minority putting it in as a separate resolution, and I do not believe I have any objection to their putting it in now, if they want to do so; it will take less time to do it than to talk about it. If they have any preference about it, I am satisfied that nobody over here will object to it.

Mr. BRISTOW. In the list of committees that is printed in the Directory the name of such a committee does not appear.

Mr. WARREN. It appears in the official list for the use of the Senate. However, I withdraw the suggestion, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will proceed with the reading.

The Secretary read as follows:

On Conservation of National Resources: Mr. Smith of Arizona (chairman), Mr. Smith of South Carolina, Mr. Vardaman, Mr. Saulsbury, Mr. James, Mr. Thompson, Mr. Newlands, Mr. Bankhead, Mr. Clark of Wyoming, Mr. Jones, Mr. Gronna, Mr. Brady, Mr. ———, Mr. Sterling, and Mr. Weeks.

On Corporations Organized in the District of Columbia: Mr. La Follette (chairman), Mr. Lippitt, Mr. Stone, Mr. Shively, and Mr. Bacon.

On Disposition of Useless Papers in the Executive Departments: Mr. Page (chairman), Mr. Smoot, and Mr. Lane.

On the District of Columbia: Mr. Smith of Maryland (chairman), Mr. Pomerene, Mr. Smith of Arizona, Mr. Kern, Mr. Hollis, Mr. James, Mr. Saulsbury, Mr. Martin of Virginia, Mr. Dillingham, Mr. Jones, Mr. Works, Mr. Kenyon, Mr. Fall, and Mr. Lippitt.

On Education and Labor: Mr. Smith of Georgia (chairman), Mr. Shively, Mr. Swanson, Mr. Martine of New Jersey, Mr. Johnson of Maine, Mr. Shields, Mr. Borah, Mr. Penrose, Mr. Page, Mr. McLean, and Mr. Kenyon.

On Engrossed Bills: Mr. Warren (chairman), Mr. Simmons, and Mr. Saulsbury.

On Enrolled Bills: Mr. Hollis (chairman), Mr. James, and Mr. Stephenson.

To Examine the Several Branches of the Civil Service: Mr. Smith of Michigan (chairman), Mr. Crawford, Mr. Jackson, Mr. Lea, Mr. Culberson, Mr. Simmons, and Mr. Smith of Maryland.

On Expenditures in the Department of Agriculture: Mr. Sheppard (chairman), Mr. Simmons, Mr. Gore, Mr. Lippitt, and Mr. Stephenson.

On Expenditures in the Departments of Commerce and Labor: Mr. Thompson (chairman), Mr. Chilton, Mr. Martin of Virginia, Mr. Fall, and Mr. Brady.

On Expenditures in the Interior Department: Mr. Catron (chairman), Mr. Poindexter, Mr. Swanson, and Mr. Hollis.

Mr. WARREN. We have now reached the Committee on Expenditures in the Interior Department, and the chairman selected by the minority for that committee is Mr. SMOOT. The list should be changed accordingly.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The change will be made in the absence of objection. The Secretary will read the committee as it now appears.

The Secretary read as follows:

On Expenditures in the Interior Department: Mr. Smoot (chairman), Mr. Swanson, Mr. Hollis, and Mr. Poindexter.

Mr. WARREN. The name of Mr. CATRON should appear. The Senator from Indiana will remember that we were to add a member there, so that there would be a majority of the minority party.

Mr. KERN. Yes; it was so read a moment ago.

Mr. WARREN. Perhaps I did not catch it. Will the Secretary please read it again?

Mr. KERN. The name of the chairman was left blank.

Mr. WARREN. I will ask the Secretary to read the names of the entire committee.

The SECRETARY. As written it reads:

Mr. Catron (chairman), Mr. Swanson, Mr. Hollis, and Mr. Poindexter.

Mr. WARREN. It should read "Mr. SMOOT, chairman," and Mr. CATRON's name should remain.

Mr. KERN. That is right.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That change will be made in the absence of objection.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of Senators who have had experience in such matters what the practice has been with reference to minority committees as to the majority of the committee? I can well conceive that something might arise with reference to the expenditures of a department like that of the Interior, where the majority of the committee ought to be on the majority side; but, as suggested by my friend from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN], the majority of this committee would be on the minority side. What the Senator from Wyoming said was that the name of the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] was to be substituted as chairman, and that the name of the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CATRON] was to remain. That would make it 3 to 2, as I heard the list read by the Secretary, and I am not quite satisfied with that.

Mr. OWEN. Mr. President, I might explain to the Senator from Missouri that this constitutes an exchange. The Committee on Expenditures in the Interior Department was exchanged so as to make the Committee on Public Health and National Quarantine a majority committee, and that is the arrangement now. The Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] being chairman, the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CATRON] and the Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER] being on the Committee on Expenditures in the Interior Department gives a majority of the membership to the minority in the Chamber, in accordance with the previous practice of the Senate in permitting certain minority committees to have a majority of the membership of those committees.

Mr. STONE. Do I understand my friend to say that that has been the previous practice? If it has been, I have nothing to say.

Mr. OWEN. It has been.

Mr. STONE. For the minority to have control of a committee?

Mr. OWEN. In this case the minority have control.

Mr. STONE. What was the rule in the last Congress, and what was the committee in the last Congress?

Mr. OWEN. The rule in the last Congress with regard to the Committee on Public Health and National Quarantine was——

Mr. STONE. I am not speaking of the Committee on Public Health and National Quarantine. I am speaking of the committee now under discussion.

Mr. OWEN. I am explaining to the Senator that the Committee on Public Health and National Quarantine was exchanged and this committee was given in lieu of it to the minority. It was, as I have said, an exchange.

Mr. GALLINGER. In the last Congress, if the Senator will permit me, it was a majority committee and has now been made a minority committee.

Mr. STONE. The Senator means the Committee on Expenditures in the Interior Department?

Mr. GALLINGER. That was a majority committee in the last Congress.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President——

Mr. STONE. Well, let me ask, if my friend will pardon me, was the Committee on Public Health and National Quarantine a minority committee?

Mr. WARREN. It was.

Mr. STONE. And was the minority in a majority on that committee?

Mr. WARREN. It was. This simply leaves it exactly as it was before the exchange.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, if I may say this in the Senate, in the House of Representatives a number of investigations have been made into expenditures and into the administration of affairs in the different departments. It may be that that is at an end; possibly it is; but if a question should arise during this Congress affecting the expenditures in that department, or the correct administration of the affairs of that department, and the House should take cognizance of it and proceed, as it has in the case of other departments and possibly of this—I have not kept track of it, and so I am not sure—I submit to my friends on the other side whether a contingency might not arise where the majority of that committee ought to be with the majority side of the Senate. However, I am not very particular about it.

Mr. OWEN. If it should become of any importance, the majority can ask that that be done, and it would be done as a matter of course. The committee only represents the Senate at last, and there is no need for any controversy about it.

Mr. STONE. I will make none.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Mr. President, the committee which prepared the list of committees thought that the committee substituted for the Committee on Public Health and National Quarantine should have the same status with reference to the preponderance of party membership that that committee had, so that when the Democrats took over the Committee on Public Health and National Quarantine and substituted the other committee as a minority committee they intended that the minority should have a majority of that committee.

Mr. WARREN. I understand now that the name of Mr. CATRON is on the list, and that it appears with Mr. SMOOT as chairman, and Mr. CATRON and Mr. POINDEXTER as the other members from this side.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is so informed.

The Secretary read as follows:

On Expenditures in the Department of Justice: Mr. ——— (chairman), Mr. Pittman, Mr. Robinson, Mr. Bradley, and Mr. Borah.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I ask to have the blank filled by inserting the name of Mr. SUTHERLAND as chairman.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, the name of Mr. SUTHERLAND will be inserted; and the Secretary will read the list of names of the committee as now made up.

The Secretary read as follows:

On Expenditures in the Department of Justice: Mr. Sutherland (chairman), Mr. Pittman, Mr. Robinson, Mr. Bradley, and Mr. Borah.

On Expenditures in the Navy Department: Mr. Hughes (chairman), Mr. Martin of Virginia, Mr. Tillman, Mr. Gronna, and Mr. Dillingham.

On Expenditures in the Post Office Department: Mr. Vardaman (chairman), Mr. Bacon, Mr. Chilton, Mr. Bristow, and Mr. Smith of Michigan.

On Expenditures in the Department of State: Mr. ——— (chairman), Mr. Stone, Mr. Ransdell, Mr. Jackson, and Mr. Penrose.

Mr. OWEN. The vacancy in the chairmanship of that committee is an intentional one.

The Secretary read as follows:

On Expenditures in the Treasury Department: Mr. Robinson (chairman), Mr. Smith of Maryland, Mr. Lea, Mr. Burton, and Mr. Works.

On Expenditures in the War Department: Mr. Poindexter (chairman), Mr. Kenyon, Mr. Lane, Mr. Johnston of Alabama, and Mr. Shields.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, we also have on our list of that committee the name of Mr. NORRIS. I think that is the proper number for us to have. Do I understand that the name of Mr. NORRIS has been inserted?

Mr. KERN. I move to strike out the name of "Mr. SHIELDS" as a member of the Committee on Expenditures in the War Department and to substitute the name of "Mr. NORRIS."

The motion was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the committee as now proposed.

The Secretary read as follows:

On Expenditures in the War Department: Mr. Poindexter (chairman), Mr. Lane, Mr. Johnston of Alabama, Mr. Norris, and Mr. Kenyon.

Mr. WARREN. As a matter of seniority, the names of Mr. KENYON and Mr. NORRIS should be transposed, so that Mr. KENYON will be first and Mr. NORRIS second. I think the Senator from Indiana will agree to that.

Mr. KERN. I have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, that change will be made.

The Secretary read as follows:

On Finance: Mr. Simmons (chairman), Mr. Stone, Mr. Williams, Mr. Johnson of Maine, Mr. Shively, Mr. Smith of Georgia, Mr. Thomas, Mr. James, Mr. Hughes, Mr. Gore, Mr. Penrose, Mr. Lodge, Mr. McCumber, Mr. Smoot, Mr. Gallinger, Mr. Clark of Wyoming, and Mr. La Follette.

On Fisheries: Mr. Thornton (chairman), Mr. Fletcher, Mr. Johnson of Maine, Mr. Martin of Virginia, Mr. Lane, Mr. Works, Mr. Jones, Mr. Perkins, and Mr. Burleigh.

On Public Lands: Mr. Chamberlain (chairman), Mr. Myers, Mr. Smith of Arizona, Mr. Thomas, Mr. Robinson, Mr. Thompson, Mr. Pittman, Mr. Ransdell, Mr. Hughes, Mr. Smoot, Mr. Clark of Wyoming, Mr. Works, Mr. Fall, Mr. Norris, and Mr. Sterling.

On Railroads: Mr. Perkins (chairman), Mr. Oliver, Mr. Jackson, Mr. Norris, Mr. ———, Mr. Clarke of Arkansas, Mr. Bacon, Mr. Reed, Mr. Smith of Arizona, Mr. Williams, and Mr. Smith of South Carolina.

On Revolutionary Claims: Mr. Bradley (chairman), Mr. Burleigh, Mr. Newlands, Mr. Chilton, and Mr. Myers.

On Rules: Mr. Overman (chairman), Mr. Kern, Mr. O'Gorman, Mr. Williams, Mr. Lea, Mr. Bacon, Mr. Warren, Mr. Gallinger, Mr. Nelson, and Mr. Cummins.

On Standards, Weights, and Measures: Mr. Bankhead, Mr. Bacon, Mr. Hughes, Mr. Clapp, and Mr. du Pont.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, Mr. CLAPP should be chairman of that committee, I think.

Mr. OWEN. Mr. President, at the suggestion of the Senator from Georgia, I move that Mr. BACON's name be struck off and Mr. SHIELDS's name inserted.

Mr. WARREN. That is a minority committee, with Mr. CLAPP as chairman. I desire to call the attention of the Senator from Indiana to that fact. We have chosen Mr. CLAPP as chairman of the Committee on Standards, Weights, and Measures.

Mr. KERN. Yes.

Mr. WARREN. I think it should be so inserted.

Mr. OWEN. Yes.

The reading was resumed, as follows:

On Standards, Weights, and Measures: Mr. Clapp (chairman), Mr. du Pont, Mr. Bankhead, Mr. Shields, and Mr. Hughes.

On Territories: Mr. Pittman (chairman), Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Shively, Mr. Johnson of Maine, Mr. Hitchcock, Mr. Walsh, Mr. Owen, Mr. Nelson, Mr. Bristow, Mr. McLean, Mr. Lippitt, and Mr. Jones.

On Transportation Routes to the Seaboard: Mr. McCumber (chairman), Mr. Lodge, Mr. Burton, Mr. Burleigh, Mr. Sheppard, Mr. Bankhead, Mr. Vardaman, and Mr. Hughes.

On Transportation and Sale of Meat Products: Mr. du Pont (chairman), Mr. Stephenson, Mr. Hollis, Mr. Simmons, and Mr. Shafroth.

On the University of the United States: Mr. Dillingham (chairman), Mr. Brandegee, Mr. Clark of Wyoming, Mr. McCumber, Mr. ———, Mr. Colt, Mr. Johnston of Alabama, Mr. Overman, Mr. Williams, Mr. Hollis, and Mr. Saulsbury.

On Woman Suffrage: Mr. Thomas (chairman), Mr. Owen, Mr. Ashurst, Mr. Ransdell, Mr. Hollis, Mr. Sutherland, and Mr. Jones.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, as to the Committee on Woman Suffrage, let me ask the Senator from Indiana how many places he has accorded the minority there? I understand that there should be four.

Mr. OWEN. There were two members allowed to the minority that were not named, and were to be named in a subsequent resolution.

Mr. WARREN. I understand that; but I was about to name them now. The members of the minority should be Mr. CLAPP, Mr. SUTHERLAND, Mr. JONES, and Mr. CATRON.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, the question is on agreeing to the resolution?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is.

Mr. TILLMAN. I move that it be agreed to, and I want to say a word.

Under the rules of seniority which have always obtained here I was entitled to the chairmanship of the Committee on Appropriations. I asked for that committee; but my colleagues, in their wisdom—and I recognize that every man on the steering committee that selected the membership of this committee is my friend—thought that I had better retire into the still water for a while and leave the battleships to go out in the open. I bow, and cheerfully submit to that decision.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, in the case of the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Commerce, I wish to inquire whether the words "and Labor" were omitted. I did not understand as to that when the resolution was read.

Mr. KERN. It was intended to read "Departments." The word should be pluralized.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Senators, on agreeing to the constitution of the standing committees as proposed by the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

The list of committees as constituted is as follows:

COMMITTEE ON BANKING AND CURRENCY.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I offer a resolution that I ask to have referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Carolina offers a resolution, which will be read.

The resolution (S. Res. 13) was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Banking and Currency be, and it is hereby, authorized to employ a clerk at $3,000 per annum, an assistant clerk at $1,440 per annum, and a messenger at $1,200 per annum, to be paid from "miscellaneous items" of the contingent fund of the Senate until otherwise provided for by law.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. OVERMAN. Under the law it must be referred to that committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That reference has been made.

INAUGURAL ADDRESSES OF THE PRESIDENT AND VICE PRESIDENT (S. DOC. NO. 3).

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, occasionally we have use for a pamphlet copy of the President's inaugural address. I ask to have printed as a public document the inaugural address of President Woodrow Wilson. I also ask that 1,000 extra copies be printed for the use of the Senate document room.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I ask that the address of Vice President MARSHALL be printed in connection with the inaugural address of the President of the United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the request of the Senator from Mississippi will be granted.

PRINTING OF PRAYERS OF CHAPLAIN AND MEMORIAL ADDRESSES.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I submit the resolution which I send to the desk. I ask that it be read.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 14), as follows:

Resolved, That the prayers as delivered before the United States Senate by the Chaplain, Ulysses G. B. Pierce, during the Sixty-second Congress be, and they are hereby, ordered printed as a public document.

Resolved further, That the eulogies delivered in the Senate over the death of deceased Members of the Senate and Members of the House of Representatives in the Sixty-second Congress be also published in the same document.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will lie over and be printed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 20 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

Mr. KERN. I move that the Senate adjourn until Monday next at 12 o'clock noon.

The motion was agreed to, and (at 3 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, March 17, 1913, at 12 o'clock meridian.

SENATE.

MONDAY, March 17, 1913.

The Senate met at 12 o'clock m.

Prayer by Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D., of the city of Washington.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday last was read and approved.

PANAMA CANAL TOLLS.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I present a communication, in the nature of a petition, signed by the president of the Connecticut Peace Society, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals.

There being no objection, the petition was referred to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HARTFORD, CONN., March 15, 1913.

Senator FRANK B. BRANDEGEE,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: In view of the fact that by the terms of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty the United States agreed to grant all nations observing the rules of neutrality the use of the Panama Canal on terms of entire equality and without discrimination, and in view of the further fact that by the Panama Canal act the Congress of the United States has made a discrimination against the shipping of Great Britain and other nations, contrary to the terms of this treaty, by exempting American coastwise vessels from the payment of tolls, the board of directors of the Connecticut Peace Society feels that a breach of national honor has been committed, and hopes that the Congress of the United States will repeal the exemption clause in the Panama Canal act, or, upon application of Great Britain, will agree to submit to arbitration the question at issue with the British Government.

Personally I feel strongly that the repeal of the clause would be better. I am very proud of the record that our country has made for its honorable methods of diplomacy, and I should deplore any backward step in our dealings with sister nations.

Very truly, yours,

WILBUR F. GORDY,
President Connecticut Peace Society.

HEADS OF DEPARTMENTS ON FLOOR OF SENATE AND HOUSE (S. DOC. NO. 4).

Mr. ROOT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for a reprint as a document of House Report No. 43, Thirty-eighth Congress, first session, being the report of a select committee of seven Members, of which Mr. Pendleton was chairman, and Senate Report No. 837, Forty-sixth Congress, third session, being the report by Mr. Pendleton from a select committee of eight Senators. Both reports relate to a proposal that the heads of the executive departments should occupy seats on the floor of the two Houses. The reports are not very long, and they are very instructive. I should like to have them reprinted, so that they will be available, together with the appendices which form a part of the reports.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New York?

Mr. BACON. I understand the Senator from New York desires to have the matter printed as a document.

Mr. ROOT. Yes. I desire a reprint of a report presented by Mr. Pendleton in the Thirty-eighth Congress and a report presented by him in the Forty-third Congress.

Mr. BACON. It is a reprint?

Mr. ROOT. A reprint.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

PRINTING OF PRAYERS OF CHAPLAIN AND MEMORIAL ADDRESSES.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, I desire to call up for consideration Senate resolution No. 14, which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 14) submitted by Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey on the 15th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the prayers as delivered before the United States Senate by the Chaplain, Ulysses G. B. Pierce, during the Sixty-second Congress, be, and they are hereby, ordered printed as a public document.

Resolved further, That the eulogies delivered in the Senate over the death of deceased Members of the Senate and Members of the House of Representatives in the Sixty-second Congress be also published in the same document.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I desire to amend the resolution by striking out all after line 5, the part pertaining to eulogies on deceased Members of the Senate and House.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there is no objection——

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Then I move you, sir, that the resolution as read be adopted as the sense of the Senate.

Mr. THOMAS. I understand that all the prayers on particular occasions have been printed in the RECORD, and I can see no necessity for going to the expense of printing them again in separate form. I certainly hope the Senate will not order the prayers printed.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I stated on Saturday when I offered the resolution——

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I rise to a point of order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Carolina will state his point of order.

Mr. OVERMAN. Objection has been made, and therefore the resolution goes over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The point of order is not well taken. The resolution is before the Senate.

Mr. HUGHES. The senior Senator from New Jersey has moved that the resolution be adopted.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution is before the Senate. The point of order is not well taken.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I rise to another point of order. If the printing will cost more than $500, the rule requires that it shall go to the Committee on Printing. I do not know what it is going to cost; I have no idea what the cost will be, but that is the rule of the Senate; and whenever a resolution is introduced for printing it goes to the Committee on Printing if the printing is to cost over $500.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Of course, I can not tell what it may cost, but my impression is that the cost will come far short of $500 to print simply the prayers. As I originally offered the resolution it provided for the printing as well of the eulogies that have been delivered on deceased Members of the Senate and the House; but I am quite willing that that part shall be stricken out.

Mr. WARREN. The Senator from New Jersey has withdrawn that part of the resolution?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I have withdrawn that part of it. The printing of the prayers will require a very small outlay. I feel that the Senate would be richly justified in incurring the small expenditure necessary. The prayers were in infinite good taste and were models in their way. When I think of the resolutions for printing papers on alcohol and the documents on thousands of other subjects that have been published, I can see no justifiable reason for opposing this proposition.

Mr. JAMES. I understand that the resolution has been amended by unanimous consent. I ask that the resolution as amended be read, so that we may see what is to be voted upon.

Mr. HUGHES. The resolution was not amended by unanimous consent. Unanimous consent was refused.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the resolution as it stands.

Mr. JAMES. I understand that unanimous consent was granted.

Mr. HUGHES. Objection was made.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read as modified.

The Secretary read the resolution as modified, as follows:

Resolved, That the prayers as delivered before the United States Senate by the Chaplain, Ulysses G. B. Pierce, during the Sixty-second Congress, be, and they are hereby, ordered printed as a public document.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, under the rule the resolution must go over for a day.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Is unanimous consent necessary for the consideration of the resolution?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution came over from Saturday last.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I understand it goes over and can not be considered now.

Mr. OVERMAN. Let it go to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If this matter is out of the way——

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is not out of the way. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. OVERMAN. I ask whether my point of order has been ruled upon.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The point of order made by the Senator from North Carolina has been ruled upon by the Chair. The point of order is not well taken.

Mr. OVERMAN. If the printing costs over $500, the resolution must be referred.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That applies only to additional copies, according to the rule of the Senate. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. THOMAS. The resolution was offered this morning?

The VICE PRESIDENT. No; it was offered on Saturday.

Mr. THOMAS. It was offered on Saturday, but no action was taken on it, and it was reoffered this morning.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. It was offered and ordered to be printed and to lie on the table, to be called up subsequently for consideration.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, before the resolution is voted on I wish to make an inquiry. I understood that it would require the unanimous consent of the Senate to consider it this morning. Has the Chair ruled upon that question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair has ruled upon it. The resolution is before the Senate.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Very well. Then, if it does not require unanimous consent, unless there are precedents for this action, and a good many of them, I think it is a bad precedent to make. It is very doubtful as to whether connection between church and state is not carried far enough, and if we are going to begin to publish the prayers of one Chaplain, I do not see how we are ever going to decline to publish as public documents the prayers of all the Chaplains.

No human being can sit as a critic upon the quality of a prayer. A prayer is a request sent to the throne of God. It may be an able request or it may be a crude request, and some of the best prayers have perhaps been the crudest prayers. The prayer of the publican who merely bowed his head and confessed his sins has been generally considered as one of the greatest prayers ever offered in the history of the world.

I do not see how we are going to escape making all Chaplains' prayers in both Houses public documents if we once start the precedent. No man can criticize a prayer; no man can praise a prayer. A prayer's value depends upon its sincerity, not its verbiage. It seems to me we are establishing a pretty bad precedent out of mere good humor.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, if I could be assured that the Members of this body would read the prayers after they had been published as a document, I would be glad to have them published in that way. But I am morally certain that very few heard them when they were delivered, and I fear they would not be read.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry. My understanding of the resolution as called up by the senior Senator from New Jersey was that it carried with it the printing of memorial addresses. The senior Senator then asked unanimous consent that that part of the resolution be stricken out. Objection was made, and then it was requested that the resolution be read, and when reported at the desk it was read with that language stricken out. My understanding of the pending proposition is that the resolution as it stands before the Senate calls for the printing of the prayers of the Chaplain and the memorial addresses on the deceased Members of the House and the Senate. Am I correct?

The VICE PRESIDENT. For the information of the junior Senator from New Jersey the Chair will state that the senior Senator from New Jersey had a right to modify his resolution, and he did so.

Mr. HUGHES. I did not hear him make that modification.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I made that modification.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I call for the reading of the resolution as it is now presented to the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will again read the resolution as modified.

The Secretary read the resolution as modified, as follows:

Resolved, That the prayers as delivered before the United States Senate by the Chaplain, Ulysses G. B. Pierce, during the Sixty-second Congress be, and they are hereby, ordered printed as a public document.

Mr. WILLIAMS. That is what I thought it was. What I said applies to the resolution as it stands.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, I trust the Senator from Mississippi will not object to the resolution. The Senator declares that prayers depend upon their sincerity. Heaven knows nobody would question the sincerity of Dr. Pierce's prayers. Inasmuch as in ninety instances out of one hundred the seats here are not as well filled during the prayer as they are now, if the prayers were valuable and potent and beautiful, as I think the prayers were, many Senators having had no opportunity to hear them, my proposition is that they may be printed in the form of a public document, so that those who care to do so may have the opportunity to read them in their own chamber. I hope that the resolution will be passed.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I expressed myself with peculiar awkwardness if from what I said anyone could understand that I was questioning the sincerity of the Chaplain's prayers. I know him well and honor him very much, and I appreciate his piety and his sincerity very much. In what I had to say about prayers and the quality of prayers I was merely trying to reenforce the point that the Senate could never make any distinction, because the Senate never could question or criticize a prayer; and therefore if we print as a public document one Chaplain's prayers there will never remain any valid reason for objecting to the printing of another Chaplain's prayers.

A great many churches do not believe in prayer books, but if the Senate every time it changes parties or every time a new Congress comes in publishes a new prayer book under the authorization of the United States Government, and with the indorsement of the United States Government, it seems to me we are going pretty far in the direction not of the establishment of a religion, but of moral suasion in favor of five or six or ten or twelve conflicting religions, succeeding one another rather rapidly on the floor of the Senate and the floor of the House. When we adopt the policy doubtless the House will adopt it, too, so that every two years there, and certainly every six years here, the United States Government will publish a new prayer book. I think that is going a little too far.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I rise to a parlimentary inquiry.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, my principal objection to the resolution lies in the fact that it is an expense that is to my mind unnecessary; I was about to say useless. Economy consists largely of saving in small things. Economies should have a beginning in small things that they may end in larger ones.

This is a precedent that, of course, would be acted upon in the future. Let us begin this new Senate by a system of practical and sensible economy. It may be that this is a trivial expenditure; I concede it; but the mass of expenses, and useless expenses, consist in an aggregate of small items that in themselves amount to little.

It is true, as was stated by the Senator from California [Mr. WORKS], that many of us have not heard all these prayers. It will be equally true probably that a great many of us will not read them because we have not time, and probably for other reasons. But this is the beginning of another item of publication which we should not set a precedent for, especially at a special session of the Senate.

I therefore move that the resolution lie on the table.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Mr. President——

Mr. WILLIAMS. Before that motion is put——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Colorado to lay the resolution on the table.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I understand the resolution has never been to a committee, and that no committee has ever been polled even in connection with it.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I was going to make that point of order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I make the point of order that the resolution has never been referred to a committee.

Mr. HUGHES. I submit that the point of order comes too late. Certain action was taken on the resolution last Saturday, and it went over and came up this morning in regular order.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I rise to a question of order.

Mr. HUGHES. In the absence of an opposing motion the senior Senator from New Jersey called up the resolution this morning.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

Mr. HUGHES. I am speaking to the point of order.

Mr. THOMAS. A motion to lay on the table is not debatable. That motion is before the Senate.

Mr. HUGHES. I am not debating the Senator's motion.

Mr. THOMAS. That may be, but it is not subject to discussion.

Mr. HUGHES. I am discussing the point of order raised by another Senator, and I make the point that the point of order comes too late, because debate has proceeded upon the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The motion of the Senator from Colorado is in order. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Colorado to lay the resolution on the table.

The question being put, there were, on a division—ayes 25, noes 16, no quorum voting.

The VICE PRESIDENT. On the motion to lay on the table no quorum has voted. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gore	Newlands	Smith, Ga.
Bacon	Hitchcock	Page	Smith, S. C.
Bankhead	Hollis	Penrose	Stone
Bradley	Hughes	Perkins	Sutherland
Brandegee	James	Pittman	Thomas
Bristow	Johnson, Me.	Pomerene	Thompson
Catron	Johnston, Ala.	Ransdell	Thornton

Culberson	Lane	Shafroth	Walsh
Cummins	Martin, Va.	Sheppard	Warren
Dillingham	Martine, N. J.	Shively	Williams
Fletcher	Myers	Simmons	Works
Gallinger	Nelson	Smith, Ariz.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. SMITH] is unavoidably absent from the city on important business. I desire this statement to stand for the day. He is paired on all votes requiring a pair with the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED].

The VICE PRESIDENT. Fifty-nine Senators have answered to their names. A quorum of the Senate is present. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] to lay the resolution on the table.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I ask for the yeas and nays on that motion.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. JAMES (when his name was called). I transfer my general pair with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WEEKS] to the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. LEA] and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. SMITH of Georgia (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. For that reason I shall not vote.

Mr. TOWNSEND (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. BRYAN]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. STEPHENSON] and vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CULBERSON (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. DU PONT], who has not voted. I therefore withdraw my vote.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania

[Mr. OLIVER]. As that Senator has not voted, I desire to withdraw my vote.

Mr. GALLINGER (after having voted in the affirmative). I inquire if the junior Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN] has voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is informed that he has not voted.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have a general pair with that Senator, and therefore withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 29, nays 27, as follows:

YEAS—29.

Bankhead	Kern	Shafroth	Thompson
Brandegee	Lane	Shively	Thornton
Clarke, Ark.	Martin, Va.	Simmons	Tillman

Crawford	Lodge	Reed

So the motion of Mr. THOMAS to lay the resolution on the table was agreed to.

COMMITTEE ON BANKING AND CURRENCY.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, by instruction of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate I report the resolution which I send to the desk and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration. I will state that there has not been a regular committee meeting in the committee room, but a vote of the committee has been taken by polling.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi reports from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate a resolution for which he asks immediate consideration. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 13), as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Banking and Currency be, and it is hereby, authorized to employ a clerk at $3,000 per annum, an assistant clerk at $1,440 per annum, and a messenger at $1,200 per annum, to be paid from "miscellaneous items" of the contingent fund of the Senate until otherwise provided for by law.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I will say, in explanation of the resolution, that it merely proposes to organize the new Committee on Banking and Currency in the manner in which committees of its order of importance are already organized.

Mr. WARREN. I assume that the Senator from Mississippi expects when the next legislative appropriation bill is passed to include the employees of that committee in that bill.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Of course.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution. The Chair hears none. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator from Mississippi why the salary of the clerk of this committee is fixed at $3,000?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Because that is the salary of clerks of committees of like standing in the Senate.

Mr. THOMAS. I understand the salary of other committee clerks is $2,500.

Mr. BACON. It is $2,500.

Mr. THOMAS. I am informed that such salaries are $2,500, and I move to strike out "$3,000" and to insert "$2,500."

Mr. WILLIAMS. I thought the salary of the clerk of the Committee on Finance was $3,000.

Mr. BACON. That may be true, Mr. President, but I think that the compensation of the clerk of the Committee on Foreign Relations is $2,500, and that of the clerk of the Committee on the Judiciary is $2,500.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I will say, in that connection, that this is a committee organized for the purpose of dividing the work which has hitherto been done by the Finance Committee, and I suppose the idea was that it should have the same force that the Finance Committee has. However, I do not care. I am perfectly willing to reduce the salary of the clerk to $2,500.

Mr. THOMAS. If that is done, then I shall not object to the resolution.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The clerk of the Committee on Appropriations, by the way, as I am just informed by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK], gets $4,000. The Committee on Banking and Currency is about to take its place as one of the three great committees of the Senate.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, that is true. The clerk of the Committee on Appropriations gets $4,000, and up to two years ago he got $5,000. The clerk of the Committee on Appropriations in the other House now gets $5,000. It is also true that the clerk of the Committee on Finance has for six or seven years received a salary of $3,000. Only those two receive above $2,500. Then come the committees next in importance, whose clerks have a salary of $2,500, and the clerks of the committees next in importance have a salary of $2,220.

Mr. WILLIAMS. This committee is expected to class with the two most important committees, and is expected to have very important work to do as soon as we begin to consider banking and currency legislation.

Mr. SWANSON. It seems to me that as soon as currency legislation is disposed of this committee will not have very much to do, while the other committees are working committees all the time. If we are going to fix this salary——

Mr. WILLIAMS. If any Senator will make a motion to reduce the salary of the clerk of this committee to $2,500, I shall not resist the motion.

Mr. SWANSON. I make the motion.

Mr. THOMAS. I have already made it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS], which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 3, before the words "per annum," it is moved to strike out "$3,000" and to insert "$2,500."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment. [Putting the question.] The "ayes" have it, and the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I should like to have the resolution again read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will again read the resolution.

The Secretary read the resolution as amended.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is upon agreeing to the resolution as amended.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

ASSISTANT CLERKS TO COMMITTEES.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, pursuant to the instructions of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of another resolution, which I send to the desk; and I call the attention of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BRISTOW] to the reading of the resolution. I will state that the report of the committee in this case, as in the other, was arrived at by polling the committee and getting the signatures of the members, and not by a regular meeting. Therefore I ask unanimous consent instead of making the motion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a resolution, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 15), as follows:

Resolved, That the Committees on Coast and Insular Survey, on Enrolled Bills, on Expenditures in the Agricultural Department, on Expenditures in the Departments of Commerce and Labor, on Standards, Weights, and Measures, on Expenditures in the Department of State, on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game, on National Banks, and on Public Health and National Quarantine be, and they are hereby, authorized to employ one assistant clerk each, at $1,440 per annum, to be paid from "miscellaneous items" of the contingent fund of the Senate until otherwise provided for by law.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, I think under the law that resolution ought to go to the committee. It has not yet been printed. I will ask that it be printed and referred to the committee for its consideration at the committee meeting.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Kansas has a right to make that point; and if he makes the request that the resolution take that course, I see no way of resisting it. I ask, therefore, that the resolution be referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will inquire of the Senator from Mississippi, for the purpose of ruling, as to whether this is not a report from the committee?

Mr. WILLIAMS. It is a report from the committee, but the report was obtained by polling the committee instead of by a regular meeting of the committee in the committee room. A majority of the committee have signed an indorsement of it upon the back of the resolution.

Mr. BRISTOW. Of course the Senator from Mississippi will understand that I declined to indorse it myself.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes; I understand that.

Mr. BRISTOW. And I said I should insist that it go before the committee in the regular way, as required by statute.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I will say, Mr. President, that this indorsement was signed by all the members of the committee who were present in the city at the time, except the Senator from Kansas; and it was for that reason that I called his attention to the matter when I called it up.

Mr. BRISTOW. I insist that it shall go to the committee in the regular way.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be so referred.

MONEY TRUST INVESTIGATION.

Mr. KERN (for Mr. POINDEXTER) submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 16), which was read and referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved, That there be printed 10,000 copies of the report of the Money Trust investigation for the use of the Senate and House document rooms.

RURAL CREDIT OR FARM FINANCE (S. DOC. NO. 5).

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that an address by J. L. Coulter relating to farm credit associations be printed as a public document.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

PRINTING OF SPEECH OF SENATOR TILLMAN (S. DOC. NO. 6).

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the speech made by Senator TILLMAN in the Democratic caucus on Saturday be printed in the RECORD, and also as a public document.

Mr. ASHURST. I did not hear the request of the Senator from South Carolina.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The request of the Senator from South Carolina is that the speech delivered by him at the Democratic caucus on Saturday last be printed in the RECORD and also as a public document.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from South Carolina if the request includes the letters read?

Mr. TILLMAN. I have submitted that matter to the gentleman who wrote the letters; and if he objects, I will not include them.

Mr. JAMES. Very well; I have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The speech delivered by Mr. TILLMAN before the Democratic caucus on Saturday, March 15, 1913, is as follows:

CHAIRMANSHIP OF SENATE COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. Chairman, speaking to the resolution I have just offered, I want to say this: Nothing that this caucus can do will affect my personal or political status, except that it may affect my health. A Chinese philosopher once said, "A duck's legs are short; a stork's legs are long; you can not make a duck's legs long or a stork's legs short. Why worry?" It is an easy thing to ask a man this question, but we all know that men can not control their brains, and they will worry in spite of themselves.

The reasons assigned for the action of the steering committee that it is solely because they are solicitous of my health and do not believe I am physically able to perform the arduous labors of the Committee on Appropriations are sincere, I hope, and rest on that motive alone. If I did not believe that this motive governed them, I would have to believe that ambition and not the best interests of the Democratic Party caused their verdict.

Tillman, as chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, was the keystone of an arch, and it was necessary to remove this keystone and get Tillman out of the way in order to let some chairmanships very much desired by some men fall where the steering committee wanted them. This is the natural human view to take of it, and I prefer to believe their own version of the affair. I recognize that they are all honorable gentlemen, and I believe not one of them has any reason other than his own judgment as to what is right and proper to actuate him in this matter. I know all human beings are naturally selfish and inevitably so, and when spurred by ambition they sometimes become unscrupulous and cruel. Dealing with motives is very dangerous anyway, and I will not pursue that train of thought further.

I am not contending here so much for myself as for my State and the principle of seniority. By all of the rules that have obtained heretofore in the Senate since the foundation of the Government appointment on committees has been governed by the rule of seniority. It is an unwritten law, almost a constitutional provision, that should not be lightly brushed aside. It has been observed by the steering committee in making up its assignments in the case of every man, except myself. Why this discrimination? South Carolina has seen fit to send me here for 18 years, and I have just entered on my fourth term and have six more years yet to serve. Last August I was reelected against two strong men by a large majority without spending a dollar and without making a speech. The people have thus shown their continued love for and trust in me. My long service and, if I may be permitted to say, my more or less distinguished service, entitles me to this chairmanship. Four years longer than Jacob served for his two wives I have striven here in the interest of true democracy. When the Senate had dwindled to 30 Democrats I was still valiantly battling at the front for the principles and policies outlined in the Chicago platform of 1896. I was on the committee which drafted that platform. Bryan was not a member of it because he was a contesting delegate and only came into the convention with a right to speak after the committee on credentials had declared his delegation the lawful one. It was late in the proceedings when the delegation was seated, and his speech, as well as one I made at the same time, was in defense of the platform. The goldbugs in that convention had packed the galleries on purpose to howl me down, and they did it until I told them with all the emphasis which I was capable of that there were only three things which could hiss—a goose, a snake, and a man. That seemed to quiet them and they allowed me to go on without interruption afterwards. I had predated Bryan in advocacy of those principles, for I made my first speech in the Senate, which has been designated the "Pitchfork speech," in January of that year, while Bryan's "Cross of Gold" speech was not delivered until in July.

I was a member of the committee on resolutions at the Kansas City convention four years later and read the platform, as some of you may remember, for no one who heard it can ever forget the demonstration which followed my declamation of that platform.

Four years later at St. Louis, when Parker's gold telegram threw the Democratic cohorts into confusion, and it seemed that the party was about to disband in disorder and become a mob, I again stepped into the breach and made the speech which pacified the delegates. In 1896, 1900, and 1904 I campaigned for the presidential nominees, although I had no faith whatever in Parker's election and knew he would be defeated, as he ought to have been.

I was not at the Denver convention because my health had begun to give way and I was in Europe. But in my lectures, which carried me all over the country and into every State, I preached the true gospel and had as much to do with the success of what is now called "progressiveness," I believe, as Bryan himself. That term properly interpreted in its essence is the Chicago platform and nothing else.

I do not mention this for the purpose of influencing your action, but like an old soldier, I point to my work and the wounds I received in battle and ask simply for justice. I do not ask pity or sympathy. I will not have them. Give me what I am entitled to and nothing more. Had I not believed that President Wilson wanted me to accept the chairmanship of the Committee on Appropriations I would not have asked for it, but having received his letter in answer to mine I felt it my duty to ask for the place in order that I might help him, as he seemed to think I could.

In order that you may fully understand everything connected with it I will read the letter I wrote him, and then will read his reply:

JANUARY 21, 1913.

Hon. WOODROW WILSON,
Trenton, N. J.

MY DEAR MR. WILSON: I despise the words "President elect" and yet I think of you so much as President to be that I can not bring myself to call you "Dear Governor." I have been thinking about writing you for some time. You were kind enough last summer to thank me for the letter I wrote giving you some pointers about the personnel of the National Democratic Committee.

This emboldens me to give you some inside information I have gained in my 18 years in the Senate, and incidentally to make some suggestions or comments on the future policy of the Democratic Party.

I am proud of the speech you made at Chicago. It rings true, every word of it, and some of the expressions are very felicitous. In fact, my dear sir, without wishing to make you vain I want to say in all seriousness that you have the happy knack or gift of never opening your mouth in public without saying something worth while. You differ from Charles II, as photographed by the Earl of Rochester, in doing wise things as well as saying them. Of course, you recall the famous mot written on the door of Charles' bedchamber:

"Here lies our sovereign lord the king,
"Whose word no man relies on;
"He never says a foolish thing,
"Nor ever does a wise one."

President Taft has taken Charles's place.

Since I have been in Washington I have seen the appropriation bills grow from a little over four hundred millions of dollars annually to over a thousand millions. You will recall the howl about the "billion-dollar Congress." We have witnessed the change to a two-billion-dollar Congress without much comment. The newspapers seem to take it as a matter of course and are always harping on the growth of the country as a justification. This growth has been marvelous, but the expansion in population and wealth has not kept pace with the growth of the taxes or expenditures. I have heard Senator Aldrich, who surely was an expert on levying taxes for the purposes of protection, proclaim on the floor of the Senate his belief that the Government could be run for $200,000,000 less than is now being appropriated.

Being on the Committee on Appropriations in the Senate, I know just how the appropriation bills have grown so rapidly. It is largely due to personal influence and importunity. Some clerk or officer under the Government wants an increase in his salary, and his Senator or Congressman goes to some one on the Committee on Appropriations, very often to the chairman, and asks for the item to go in. I have often done it myself to oblige a friend. An increase in the salary of one man produces a desire or demand to increase others, and the result is that the figures are moved up all along the line. This happens in one bureau and immediately other bureaus begin to clamor for increases, and so it goes.

Then men have haunted the Congress, since I have been here, with schemes for new bureaus. I have seen these created, many of them necessary and useful, but some of them worthless and mere vehicles to spend money and create places for friends.

Then commission after commission has been appointed for any and every conceivable purpose to make fat places for friends, very often "lame ducks" who have been repudiated by their constituents. I have seen Republican Presidents who have been glad to take care of Democratic "lame ducks." In Cleveland's time I saw Democrats who had been repudiated by their home people on account of free silver rewarded with judgeships and appointments on commissions.

I do not want to tire you, so I will stop this enumeration until I can have the pleasure of talking with you in person. This I do know, Mr. President, that if the Democrats are in earnest about reducing expenditures, it is an easy matter to do it, and that, too, without crippling the Government. It will mean the selection of Cabinet officers who will not be at all complaisant, but intent only on having the Government machine work smoothly, accurately, and effectively for the people's benefit and not for the benefit of the officeholders. The estimates are all made up by the Cabinet officers, and appropriations are always based on estimates, or supposed to be, unless they come as independent propositions from the floor of the Senate Chamber itself. I know you understand the importance of a loyal Cabinet in sympathy with this idea of economy. What we need in the United States is more attention to the needs and protection of the taxpayers than to the wishes and desires of the tax eaters.

There are any number of buildings in Washington rented at high prices from local real estate agents for Government use. Some of these are necessary, no doubt; but many of them are not necessary at all. This city is a veritable Augean stable and the "daughters of the horseleech" are abroad and always crying, "give, give."

Some of the departments are very much cramped for lack of room. These are clamorous for new buildings. Government buildings have been erected for one purpose, and almost before they were completed the demand grew up for that use to be discontinued and the buildings appropriated for some other use, or rather new one.

When I first came here the Members of the House had no place to receive their visitors or constituents, while the Senators had the "marble room" and overflow Senators who had no committee rooms were quartered in the Maltby. The House conceived the idea of building a palace for the use of its Members; the Senate immediately demanded and enforced that demand to build one for their own use. The two marble palaces we now have are the result. Undoubtedly they supply a want, but not a necessity, except on the part of the House. Recently the House has demanded that the Senate turn the Maltby Building over to it, and I understand this will be done when the new Congress meets in March. There is much lost space in the Senate Office Building which could well be utilized to good advantage for other purposes if the Senate would agree.

But why go into all of these details? You will find it all out when you come to Washington. Speaking with a very intelligent clerk not long ago he made this significant statement: "Senator, the only way to reduce expenses is to have Senators and Congressmen who will rise in their places and inquire to know why certain items are in the appropriation bills when they are not needed, and say so, and thus call the attention of the country to them." I know this to be true. But the rule is rather to increase than to reduce.

My long service here and the custom which has obtained almost from the beginning of the Government entitles me to select from among the committees of which I am a member a chairmanship. I am senior Democrat on three important committees and can select the chairmanship of either one of them: Appropriations, Interstate Commerce, and Naval Affairs.

I want you to tell me frankly on which one of these committees you think I can best serve your administration and the country, for I will serve the country best by serving Wilson's administration best.

The Committee on Appropriations, as you know, applies the money, or designates how it shall be spent on many appropriation bills. The Committee on Indian Affairs, the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, the Committee on Naval Affairs, the Committee on Military Affairs, the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and the Committee on Pensions make up their own appropriation bills. Thus there is no coordination and general understanding by one committee and its head as to the scope and amount of all the appropriations. This was the way it was done when I first came to Congress. I remember what a bitter fight the change from this system to the general distribution of the appropriation bills brought about. There was too much work for any one committee to do, and it gave one man too much power. The change was salutary in that respect, but it has largely been responsible for the increased expenses, taken as a whole.

The Committee on Finance in the Senate ought to be divided as it is in the House, one part of it to deal with the tariff and the taxes to raise money, while the other deals with banking and currency and the money problem.

The Committee on Interstate Commerce, while of minor importance at first, has come to be one of the most important in Congress. It deals with the problem of transportation in all of its ramifications. This problem has come to be one of the greatest of the age. The gamblers in New York, Boston, and Chicago who manipulate the stocks and bonds of the banks and railroad securities, have amassed great fortunes based on water alone. Multimillionaires have multiplied with great rapidity, and the masses of the people are expected to sustain these fortunes by paying dividends on stocks and bonds which never had any honest or real foundation. Pierpont Morgan and men of that type have been the prime movers and leaders in amassing wealth of this kind. Having "scrambled the eggs" they boldly stand and ask the committees of Congress what they are going to do about it. Rockefeller, who has amassed millions by monopolies which could have been prevented by an honest enforcement of the Sherman law, rolls in wealth and snaps his fingers at the House Committee. Carnegie, whose hundreds of millions have been stolen from the people through Roosevelt's connivance at his organization of the Steel Trust and the absorption of the Tennessee Coal & Iron Co., tries to buy immortality by giving back to the people a modicum of money in the shape of libraries, etc.

If you and I were to go into a restaurant and there see the cook mixing rotten eggs to scramble for us, would we eat the dish when the waiter brought it to us or would we throw it out of the window? The temper of mind of the American people is to throw the eggs out of the window. Your greatest problem will be how to "unscramble eggs" and bring back the railroads of the country to an honest basis. This will involve a valuation of the railroad properties to find out their actual value, not cost, of the railroads. The Committee on Interstate Commerce will have to do this work, if it be done, and I am therefore inclined to take that burden upon my shoulders, if you so advise, and select that chairmanship.

The Committee on Naval Affairs has to deal with the question of an "adequate Navy." This is the happy phrase of the Democratic platform adopted at Baltimore. Just what is an "adequate and well-proportioned" Navy must be determined. Whether it shall be Hobsonized to make a market for structural steel and armor plate manufacturers, or give us such a fleet as will be sufficient for the needs of the country, is a question to be settled.

My health has been too poor for me to keep abreast of things as I used to do. But I have tried to keep in touch enough and have kept in touch enough to believe that we have a good enough Navy now, and only need to maintain it at its present degree of efficiency. The fifteen or twenty millions of dollars required to build a first-class battleship of the best type can do so many more things for the people, and better things, that I do not feel willing to see the money sunk that way, especially when the life of such a vessel is only about 20 years. Already the Oregon, made famous in the Spanish-American War, is obsolete and ready for the junk pile.

If I take the Committee on Appropriations, I can help reduce expenses; if I take the Committee on Interstate Commerce, I can assist in "unscrambling the eggs;" if I take the Committee on Naval Affairs, I can resist as best I may the clamor which has been nursed by the money of the steel manufacturers and armor-plate people for an ever-increasing Navy. My strength is limited as you know; my will is equal to any task. I realize every day more and more that for the purposes of this world a live jackass is better than a dead Senator.

Please think this over and give me your advice in the same spirit I have written you.

Very sincerely, yours.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
January 30, 1913.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Brief absence from my office and constant absorption with the business connected with the opening of our legislative session here have prevented my replying sooner to your most interesting and important letter of the 21st. I want you to know with what deep and genuine appreciation I have read it. I thank you for it very warmly, indeed.

Confidentially, the Appropriations Committee is the committee on which you would have the hardest work, but your letter convinced me that it is also the committee in which your interest chiefly lies and where you can certainly be of the greatest and most constant service.

Ever since I was a youngster I have been deeply interested in our methods of financial legislation. Ever since then I have insisted upon the absolute necessity of a carefully considered and wisely planned budget, and one of the objects I shall have most in mind when I get to Washington will be conferences with my legislative colleagues there with a view to bringing some budget system into existence. This business of building up the expenses of the Nation, piece by piece, will certainly lead us to error and perhaps embarrassment.

I was very much pleased by your reelection and shall look forward to the greatest interest to being associated with you in counsel.

Again thanking you for your splendid letter,

Cordially yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

Hon. BENJAMIN R. TILLMAN,
Washington, D. C.

Contrast my services and work for the party with Senator MARTIN'S. Last summer at Baltimore I led the South Carolina delegation. South Carolina's 18 votes were cast first, last, and all the time for Woodrow Wilson, while Virginia, led by MARTIN, never did give Wilson any votes until he no longer needed them.

In June, while the convention was still balloting and the question as to who would receive the nomination hung in the balance, Mr. MARTIN gave out an interview, and here is what he had to say about the political situation, and his feelings and his advice to the Virginians as to what candidate they ought to support. It speaks for itself, too, and I have no comments to make:

VIRGINIANS SUPPORT OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD—THEY WILL VOTE FOR HIM AS LONG AS HE HAS CHANCE OF NOMINATION—MARTIN IS STRONG FOR HIM—MEN FROM OLD DOMINION WILL BE CLASSED AMONG THE CONSERVATIVES.

"The great majority of the Virginia delegation," said Senator THOMAS S. MARTIN this afternoon, "will, I am sure, vote for UNDERWOOD. I believe that after the first ballot the unit rule will be voted by the necessary two-thirds majority. It ought to be. There is every reason why UNDERWOOD should be the nominee; none why he should not be. He is a man of pronounced ability, of clean life, of unblemished record. He has been highly successful as the party leader in the House. Doubt as to his availability because he is a southern man is heard only from our own people. I have yet to hear of such objection from the North.

"I hope all the Virginia delegates will vote for Judge Parker for temporary chairman. He has been always a loyal party worker, and it would be an outrage to defeat him merely on the ipse dixit of Mr. Bryan, who chooses to call him a reactionary.

"Of course, I do not mean that Virginia should keep on voting for UNDERWOOD if it turns out there is no chance for him. She would then go to some one else, perhaps CLARK, perhaps Harmon—to any one rather than to Woodrow Wilson, who has done nothing to deserve party honors unless to help wreck it in his own State."

Is there any progressiveness about this?

It must have been Senator MARTIN'S attitude at Baltimore, and his known opinion on Democratic policies in general, that caused the so-called progressives in the Senate to determine that he should not have the chairmanship of the caucus and the floor leadership. It is a mystery to me now, and will always be, whenever I think of it, how the steering committee could have changed front so soon and jumped him over my head and into my place as chairman of the Committee on Appropriations.

Another phase of this subject and I am through. I have been on the rack, as it were, ever since the caucus met on Monday last, and have persistently refused to consider getting off the Committee on Appropriations or of giving up its chairmanship. It seemed that this demand was so insistent and so persistent that suspicions came into my mind, and in analyzing the situation I grew very angry. I declared to the gentlemen of the committee who came to see me about it that if I were turned down in caucus I would carry the fight into the Senate itself. Yesterday morning, when there had been no conclusion of the case, I went to the Capitol and began writing a speech to be delivered in caucus, and was engaged on it nearly all day. It was hot enough, I assure you, so hot that it almost burned the paper it was written on, for I was angry from the ground up, and my indignation was such that I pulled the bridle off and gave free rein to my vitriolic tongue. Some of you who have heard me in days past know that there are few men who can surpass me in saying biting and vindictive things.

I was in this frame of mind last night, but as is often the case with men of my temperament, I slept only two or three hours and then waked up and began to think. All public men know that some of their best thoughts and speeches have come to them in this way. I myself know that if I could have recollected them next day I have made better speeches in bed than I have ever made on the platform or rostrum. When I analyzed the situation and the conditions here my anger vanished. I thought how pitiful and contemptible in comparison was my fight for my rights and the rights of my State as compared with the great battle to be fought and now being fought by Democracy for the rights of the people. I had thought and written bitter things; but my passion was stilled and entirely disappeared when I remembered President Wilson's clarion call in the last paragraph of his inaugural address: "I summon all honest men, all patriotic, all forward-looking men to my side. God helping me, I will not fail them, if they will but counsel and sustain me."

I decided to write another speech this morning and tell my brother Democrats just how I feel, and then leave it all to them. I still feel a great injustice has been done me in this report. I also feel that Senator MARTIN has not acted the noble part I expected of him as a Virginian, for not once but twice and even three times since I came to Washington in January he has told me he wanted me to have on the committees whatever place I was entitled to and desired; and he has never notified me that he had changed his feelings or purpose. Senator MARTIN, after making these voluntary statements and pledges to me, became a member of the steering committee which has given him my chairmanship. Fairness and decency, it seems to me, required him to notify me of his change of mind and attitude toward me. He never at any time expressed any uneasiness about my health to me. Had he done so his conduct would not seem so despicable. When I talked with him about his own race for the chairmanship of the caucus and mentioned to him that I wanted the Committee on Appropriations he advised me to say nothing about it and keep others guessing, which I did. It is this phase of the subject which I do not understand. I would hate to believe there has been any understanding or any promises or pledges made. As I have no proof I must perforce leave any accusations unsaid. But I can not help the suspicion that there must have been a deal of some kind or Senator MARTIN would not have retired without a show-down.

While I am no longer able to battle on the floor of the Senate and deliver philippics as I once did I am still able to give counsel and advice. I am still able to say "NO," and spell it with capitals, too, and that is what is needed on the Committee on Appropriations. I outlined in my letter to President Wilson my ideas as to why the appropriations have grown so rapidly and why so much money is being squandered needlessly. My ambition is as chairman of the Committee on Appropriations to bring into the Senate bills which have passed the House without increasing the amounts at all, and, if possible, to bring in the bills reducing them as they passed the House. I believe it is possible to do this. In fact, I know it, and if I am given help on the committee of young and willing men, earnestly striving for the same object, I will do it.

Then, Senators, contrast the way the Republicans treat their old men and the way ours are being treated. Senator Allison was kept chairman of the Committee on Appropriations as long as he was in the Senate, although in his last years he was very feeble. Senator PERKINS, although far more feeble than I am, is still chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs. Senator Cullom, when he retired from the Senate on the 4th of March, was still chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations. They do not demote and discredit their old leaders because of age.

I have said more than once, and to more people than one, that if the wrong was not righted in the caucus I would carry it to the Senate itself, which, under Rule XXIV, must elect its committees. My idea in going to the Senate was to get into the RECORD, for preservation for the future historian, my vindication and defense, as it were. But when I considered the spectacle which I would present to the country by allowing my grievances against the party, however justifiable, to militate against that unity and harmony which ought to prevail among us, I decided that it was a selfish motive and I bade the devil get behind me.

Democratic harmony and concert of action are more necessary at this time than anything I know of. Democratic discipline is also needed very, very much, for as compared with the Republicans we are an untrained mob with little knowledge of parliamentary law and very little effective knowledge of the rules of the Senate.

Yesterday one of the newspaper boys told me he had seen the two Georgia Senators in amicable conference in the restaurant. Immediately the thought flashed on my mind, if Mr. BACON and Mr. HOKE SMITH are friendly after what has happened why should Mr. HOKE SMITH and Mr. TILLMAN fall out about it. I have already, in the caucus, told Mr. HOKE SMITH how I felt about Mr. BACON'S not getting the place of President pro tempore, and it was that indignation which prompted the interview with the correspondent of the Atlanta Constitution.

I used the word "progressives" in that interview. The reporter changed it to "conspirators," and when I hastily revised the interview, I did not note the change in the language. I do not feel that those Senators who brought about Mr. BACON'S defeat were conspirators at all. They merely expressed their preference as between the two men as they had a right to do. I know if they saw this interview they must have become angry, because it was unjust. I recognize that now, and desire to apologize to them for using the word in the interview. I also desire to apologize to Senator HOKE SMITH for the way I have treated him.

My regret is more keen because I have since learned—only last night—that he was my friend on the steering committee and battled manfully to keep the rest from demoting me or giving Mr. MARTIN the chairmanship of appropriations.

Yesterday, when I was so hot, a reporter for a Georgia paper came into my room and said something about Mr. BACON and Mr. HOKE SMITH talking about Georgia patronage and expressed surprise that they should be speaking to each other. I told him I hoped Mr. HOKE SMITH would never speak to me again; but I do not feel that way now. I am always ready and willing—nay, anxious—to make the amende honorable when I am in error, and that is my reason for speaking as I do.

The other day I said I loved the two Georgia Senators. I did not tell the exact truth. I do love Senator BACON, and was beginning to like Senator HOKE SMITH very much. I hope I shall continue to like him, and will unless he gives me just reason not to. We have need in the Senate of his brains, for we presented a sorry spectacle yesterday for lack of consultation among the leaders and concert of action. The party is so new in its rôle of conducting affairs that the people must make allowances. The new men are nearly all awkward and green, and unless they acquaint themselves thoroughly with the rules and precedents, they will be subjected to very many mortifications, and the party itself will become a laughing stock.

The Biblical quotation I used a few days ago will become historical. The "wild asses of the desert, athirst and hungry, have broken into the green corn." That applies all along the line from the top to the bottom. The Senators themselves are green and the Democrats of the country have been "out in the cold" so long and have had so little hope or opportunity to get patronage or any of the offices that they are simply wild. President Wilson will, I hope and believe, as soon as he becomes familiar with the usages and customs of the other Presidents in dealing with Congress, become a good herdsman. He is going slow, I am glad to say, about making appointments; has adopted David Crockett's motto: "Be sure you are right and then go ahead." Indeed, I have no reason to believe otherwise than that the militant Democracy, after its long exile, will assist and aid the President to carry out his program and make his glorious vision as portrayed in his inaugural address a reality.

I shall, what little time I have left in this world, watch with deep interest and concern his success or failure. I am sure, if he does fail, it will be due to the Congress and not to him. I appeal to all Democrats to throw aside selfish ambitions and impulses, and let us all unite and work for the good of this great Republic.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON PRIVILEGES AND ELECTIONS.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, I offer a resolution, and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 17), as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Privileges and Elections, or any subcommittee thereof, be authorized to send for persons and papers and to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee; that the committee may sit during the sessions or recesses of the Senate; and that the expenses thereof be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution must be referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. KERN. I ask for the immediate consideration of the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that the statute provides that if it takes money from the contingent fund of the Senate, it must be referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. KERN. I wish to say that this resolution was prepared by my predecessor as chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, and was intended to be presented by him to the Senate. The Senate has ordered an investigation into the conduct of one of the employees of the Senate, which investigation is in progress. If that investigation is to be proceeded with, the resolution must be reported and acted on before the Senate adjourns. Let it go to the committee, however, and we will try to get a report on it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

ARMOR PLATE FOR VESSELS OF THE NAVY.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I offer a resolution, which I ask to have read.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 18), as follows:

Whereas bids were opened by the Secretary of the Navy in February, 1913, for furnishing armor plate for the dreadnought Pennsylvania; and

Whereas the representatives of three firms manufacturing armor plate in the State of Pennsylvania, while pretending to bid as competitors, after a conference, submitted bids which did not vary more than $1 per ton; and

Whereas the then Secretary of the Navy, notwithstanding an intimation made on the floor of the Senate of the United States that it was alleged there existed collusion among different manufacturers to advance the price of armor plate and divide the profits of the contract, awarded the contract on March 3, 1913, by dividing for all practical purposes the award of 8,000 tons of armor plate among the three companies; and

Whereas it is alleged that this action of the said firms reveals that they comprise an armor-plate trust and that the price named in the contract awarded by the Secretary of the Navy is in the neighborhood of about $25 per ton higher than the previous awards by the Department of the Navy for armor plate: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of the United States, That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, directed to forward to the Senate, at as early a date as practicable, a report on the amount of armor plate ordered by the Department of the Navy during the past 25 years, the prices paid in each award, and the names of the firms or corporations to whom the contracts were awarded.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, of course I do not ask for the immediate consideration of the resolution, but presume it should go to the Committee on Expenditures in the Navy Department. I have no particular request as to the committee to which it should go.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be referred to that committee, in the absence of objection.

Mr. ASHURST subsequently said: Mr. President, my attention has been called by one of the learned Senators on the floor to the fact that there is an error in the phraseology of the resolution which I introduced a moment ago, and which was referred to the appropriate committee. The resolution as prepared by me requests the Secretary of the Navy to furnish certain information. I am advised that the proper form is that the Secretary of the Navy be directed to furnish the information. Hence, I ask unanimous consent that the word "requested" be stricken out and that the word "directed" be inserted.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection the resolution will be amended as requested, and it will be referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Navy Department and printed.

ADDITIONAL COMMITTEE EMPLOYEES.

Mr. GALLINGER submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 19), which was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That all Senators now having less than three employees be allowed an additional employee, to be paid at the rate of $1,200 per annum from the contingent fund of the Senate until otherwise provided by law.

COMMITTEE ON THE PHILIPPINES.

Mr. HITCHCOCK submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 20), which was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the salary of the clerk of the Committee on the Philippines be increased from $2,200 per year to $2,500 per year, and the pay of messenger to said committee be reduced from $1,440 per year to $1,200 per year.

THE CONGRESSIONAL DIRECTORY.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I report back favorably, with an amendment, a resolution from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate. I make the report by direction of that committee, arrived at by a poll vote, signed on the back of the resolution. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution. (S. Res. 3.)

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a resolution reported by him from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The amendment of the committee was, in line 9, after "$800," to insert ": Provided, That the House of Representatives shall pay one-half of the said sum."

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, may I inquire of the honorable Senator from Mississippi if that ought not to be a concurrent resolution, inasmuch as the House is called upon to contribute one-half of the expense?

Mr. WILLIAMS. It is impossible at this time, of course, to have a concurrent resolution, because the other House is not in session. The matter, therefore, was reported in this shape by the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] with the idea that it could not take effect until the House had appropriated its part, so we might appropriate our part from the contingent fund.

Mr. GALLINGER. Very well. I think it is very desirable that the resolution should be passed in some form, and I certainly shall not object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is upon agreeing to the amendment to the resolution.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to as follows:

Resolved, That an edition of the Congressional Directory for the first session of the Sixty-third Congress be prepared and published, as provided for in section 73 of an act providing for the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents, approved January 12, 1895, and that the Secretary of the Senate is directed to pay from the contingent fund, for compiling, preparing, and indexing the said edition, the sum of $800: Provided, That the House of Representatives shall pay one-half of the said sum.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM FOR EXTRA SESSION.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, I gave notice the other day that I would address the Senate on a resolution for a legislative program during the extra session. I now call up the resolution from the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nevada calls up from the table Senate resolution No. 4, submitted by Mr. NEWLANDS on the 13th instant.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I will say that I do not think the Senate is disposed to listen to speeches just now, and that all I shall ask will be the reference of this resolution to the Committee on Rules, in the hope that that committee will report upon it early in the next session. The resolution relates to the legislative problems that are before us regarding the tariff and taxation of incomes and inheritances; regarding interstate trade, legislation supplementary to the Sherman Act, and the organization of an interstate-trade commission; regarding interstate banking exchange; regarding public lands and natural resources; regarding economy in military expenses; and regarding enlargement of constructive works in improving waterways and roads.

I believe that if we can outline beforehand in the Senate the leading subjects upon which we desire reports and upon which we desire to take action we shall very much expedite the labors of the extra session, and that if we can pursue this course in the future we shall very much diminish the length of our sessions. As I stated before, we have been gradually expanding the sessions of Congress until now they threaten to take up the entire year. This resolution is in the line of efficiency, and particularly of economy of time.

Mr. GALLINGER. I should like to ask the Senator if he expects the Senate at the coming special session to take up all the subjects he has enumerated?

Mr. NEWLANDS. I will state that the object of this resolution is not to take up for legislation all these subjects, but simply to take up the question of the tariff so far as legislation is concerned, and at the same time to engage the various committees of the Senate having jurisdiction of these subjects in investigations, so that they can report to the Senate in the first days of the regular session in December next.

Mr. GALLINGER. I caught from the Senator the suggestion that the purpose was to expedite the business of Congress, and, I suppose, abbreviate our sessions. I was afraid that if the Senator had this program in view for the special session, we might as well send for our summer clothing.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I wish to say, in that regard—and I think it is a matter of very proper solicitude—that I do not think the extra session will be lengthened at all by the consideration of these subjects by the appropriate committees. We all know that in these extra sessions that are devoted to a specific subject of legislation, when the House is busy the Senate is idle, and when the Senate is occupied the House is idle, and when the Ways and Means Committee of the House on the one side or the Finance Committee of the Senate on the other is engaged in framing legislation all the other committees of the Senate and the House are idle. The result is that none of the Members of the Senate or of the House, outside of the members of the committees having jurisdiction of the tariff, will have anything to do, and yet they will be detained in Washington. The purpose of this resolution is to occupy those committees in investigations with reference to reports which will expedite legislation during the regular session.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator's purpose, then, is to give the committees something to do?

Mr. NEWLANDS. Something to do.

Mr. GALLINGER. I think that is a laudable undertaking, and I trust the Senator's resolution will be considered. The Senator will not object to the Committee on Rules amending it to some extent, and enlarging it if necessary?

Mr. NEWLANDS. No; not at all.

I will simply add that this resolution is, in my judgment, in the interest of economy of time; that it will not extend in any degree the extra session, which I understand will be called for legislative action upon the subject of the tariff, and it will clear the way, in my belief, for quick and decisive action upon matters concerning which public opinion is practically made up during the regular session commencing in December. I believe if we can pursue this course we will diminish the entire length of the session of Congress for the next year a period of at least two or three months. My belief is that the sessions of Congress have been unnecessarily lengthened because of the imperfection of our legislative methods in Congress, and that we will thus clear the way for legislative action at the next regular session by the intermediate action of the committees, when compelled to be in session for a period of at least three months attending to the consideration of the tariff, and we will thus be able to diminish by that period the length of the next regular session.

Next year there will be a congressional election. If the Democratic Party carries that election, it will have the opportunity of continued usefulness in carrying out needed reforms. If it loses that election, it will lose the opportunity for crystallizing in legislation and administration such needed reforms, and there will be a renewal of the legislative deadlock from which we suffered so much during the last administration. Democratic success at the next congressional election will depend upon the state of mind of the American people. If there is a temporary diminution of work and business activity and a temporary depression as the result of it, we may lose the next election. We must therefore move along the lines of progressive legislation with firmness, precision, and caution, taking care neither to disappoint nor to alarm, and we must close this legislation at least six months before the next election. Both celerity and caution are required, and the earlier we adjust ourselves to the past the better our chance of continued public confidence and success.

I ask leave to insert the resolution in the RECORD in connection with these remarks.

There being no objection, Senate resolution 4, submitted by Mr. NEWLANDS March 13, 1913, was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

1. Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that during the approaching extra session for the immediate revision of the tariff Congress should not only consider and pass comprehensive legislation regarding all the schedules of the tariff but should also, through the appropriate committees, consider other subjects of needed legislation, to be taken up for final action at the next regular session of Congress.

TARIFF AND TAXATION.

2. Resolved, That the Senate Committee on Finance report at as early a date as possible during the extra session upon the following questions:

(a) Whether the prices of any farm products in the United States are raised above the international level of prices by the duties now imposed on such products, and if so, what products, and whether such duties on such products can be abolished or materially reduced without injury to American industry, and to what extent. In such inquiry shall be included meats, cheese, wool, sugar, tobacco, wines, citrus fruits, and dried and preserved fruits.

(b) What products now on the dutiable list should be put on the free list.

(c) Whether it is practicable and advisable to change all duties from specific to ad valorem duties.

(d) The average percentage of the duties imposed by the existing tariff, and the average percentage to which it is desirable to reduce the duties imposed under the proposed revision of the tariff, and the maximum and the minimum duties which it is desirable to impose.

(e) Whether it is practicable and desirable to distribute the proposed reduction over a period of four years.

(f) Whether it is practicable and advisable after making the contemplated reduction in the tariff to organize an administrative tariff board, which, acting under rules fixed by Congress, shall have the power, either upon its own initiative or upon the initiative of any importer, producer, or consumer to further inquire into complaints of excessive duties prohibiting or unduly restricting importations, or of diminished duties permitting excessive importations, to the prejudice of existing domestic industries, and to the injury of the capital or labor employed therein, or of excessive duties prejudicial to domestic consumers; such board to present to the President and to Congress such recommendations as it may deem advisable.

(g) Whether it is practicable and advisable to give such tariff board, after full investigation and hearing, the power, with the approval of the President, to make reductions or increases in duties, within certain limitations and under rules prescribed by Congress; and if so, what limitations and rules should be prescribed.

(h) Whether it is practicable and advisable to make such rules and regulations for the action of such a tariff board as will enable the Government to feel its way gradually from a high protective to a revenue basis without readjustments prejudicial both to domestic labor and capital, and without denying to the consumers needed relief from the imposition of excessive taxes upon foreign imports and excessive prices for domestic products.

(i) Whether it is advisable to provide a graduated income tax and a graduated inheritance tax with a view to making up any deficit in revenue caused by a reduction in customs duties, and also with a view to extending the operations of the National Government in cooperation with the States in the improvement of post roads, the regulation of rivers in aid of navigation, irrigation, water-power development, and swamp-land reclamation, and also in cooperation with the States in the advancement of vocational education.

(k) Whether it is practicable and advisable to appoint a budget committee, of which the chairman of the Appropriations Committee and the chairmen of the other supply committees shall be members.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

3. Resolved, That the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce report at as early a date as possible during the extra session upon the following questions:

(a) Whether it is advisable to supplement the existing Sherman Antitrust Act by legislation which will more specifically define restraints of trade, including therein the prevention of unfair competition, stock watering, overcapitalization, excessive size, interlocking directors, and the holding by one corporation of the stock of another.

(b) Whether it is advisable to substitute for the present system of holding companies, by which a corporation organized under the laws of a single State is made the means of federating corporations organized under the laws of other States for the purpose of interstate transportation, a national act for the incorporation of holding companies, under which railway companies organized under the laws of different States may be federated for interstate transportation, such holding companies to be subject in their general conduct to the regulation of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

(c) Whether it is advisable to organize an interstate trade commission, in which shall be merged the officials, powers, and functions of the Bureau of Corporations, with powers of publicity, investigation, correction, and recommendation regarding corporations engaged in interstate trade similar to those conferred upon the Interstate Commerce Commission regarding corporations engaged in interstate transportation, but without the power to fix prices; such interstate trade commission to have the power to aid the courts in the administration of the Sherman Act and other legislation supplementary thereto.

(d) Whether it is advisable to provide for the creation of a board of river regulation which shall bring into cooperation the departments and services of the National Government whose duties in any way relate to waterways in devising and carrying out comprehensive plans for the promotion of interstate commerce by the regulation of river flow, the mitigation of destructive floods, by the promotion of storage above and of bank and levee protection below, the establishment of terminal and transfer facilities, the coordination of rail and water carriers, and the cooperation of the Nation with the States, each within its jurisdiction, in plans and works for the full and, so far as practicable, compensatory development of the rivers for every useful purpose, and the establishment of an ample fund for continuous work during a period of 10 years.

(e) Whether it is practicable and advisable to bring into coordination under the Interstate Commerce Commission the related subjects of interstate transportation, interstate trade, and interstate exchange, by the creation of three boards in such commission, one relating to interstate transportation, one relating to interstate trade, and one relating to interstate exchange, the present Interstate Commerce Commission to constitute the board of interstate transportation, the proposed interstate-trade commission to constitute the board of interstate trade, and the proposed banking commission to constitute the board of interstate exchange, merging into the board of interstate trade the present Bureau of Corporations and merging into the board of interstate exchange the comptroller's office.

INTERSTATE EXCHANGE.

4. Resolved, That the proper Senate committee report as soon as possible during the extra session upon the following question:

(a) Whether it is practicable and advisable to organize under national law in each State a national reserve association, in which the State banks engaged in interstate exchange and complying with the national legislation as to capital and reserves shall be united with the national banks as members, such associations to have the powers of issue relating to emergency currency now enjoyed by the constituent national banks; such associations to have such of the powers proposed by the National Monetary Commission to be conferred upon a central national reserve association as are necessary and advisable; such State associations to have the powers of investigation and correction regarding the affairs of the constituent banks; such State associations to be brought into federation for the protection of interstate exchange and the prevention of bank panics through a national banking commission fairly representative of the different sections of the country, part of which shall be selected by such associations and part by the President of the United States; such national banking commission to have powers of investigation and correction over the State associations, and to report to the President and Congress annually such recommendations as it deems advisable regarding legislation and administration concerning monetary affairs.

PUBLIC LANDS AND NATURAL RESOURCES.

5. Resolved, That the Senate Committee on Public Lands report at as early a date as possible during the extra session upon the following questions:

(a) Whether it would be advisable for the National Government to promote the development of Alaska by the construction of a railroad or railroads; and if so, the probable cost and plans for construction and operation.

(b) Recommendations regarding the protection of our natural resources in timber, coal, iron, and oil against monopolistic control.

(c) The applicability of the land laws of Canada to the conditions of our public domain, and particularly those provisions regarding the grant of the surface to settlers, excluding from the operation of the grant timber, coal, iron, oil, and water-power sites.

MILITARY EXPENSES AND AUXILIARY NAVY.

6. Resolved, That the Committee on Military and Naval Affairs report at as early a date as possible during the extra session upon the following questions:

(a) The preparation of a plan for the more efficient administration and cooperation of the Army and Navy, and the reduction of the total Army and Navy expense for the next four years to not exceeding $225,000,000 annually, with the aid of a board of Army and Navy officers to be selected by the President.

(b) A plan for the construction of auxiliary ships for the Navy, to be used in time of war in aid of the fighting ships and in time of peace in establishing necessary service through the Panama Canal and new routes of commerce to foreign countries through lease to shipping companies; such legislation involving the temporary diminution of the construction of fighting ships and the substitution of auxiliary ships with a view to the organization of a well-proportioned and efficient Navy.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I move that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Rules.

The motion was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. BACON. If there is no other legislative matter to be brought to the attention of the Senate, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 12 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON PRIVILEGES AND ELECTIONS.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate I report back favorably, without amendment, the resolution indorsed by the Committee on Privileges and Elections, submitted by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN]. I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration. (S. Res. 17.)

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the resolution, which was read and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Privileges and Elections, or any subcommittee thereof, be authorized to send for persons and papers and to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee; that the committee may sit during the sessions or recesses of the Senate; and that the expenses thereof be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. KERN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 21), which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That a committee of two Senators be appointed by the Vice President to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that the Senate, having completed the business of the present session, is ready to adjourn unless the President has some other communication to make to it.

The VICE PRESIDENT appointed Mr. KERN and Mr. GALLINGER the committee under the resolution.

RECESS.

Mr. FLETCHER. I move that the Senate take a recess for 30 minutes.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia and others. Make it until 2 o'clock.

Mr. FLETCHER. Very well; I move that the Senate take a recess until 2 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 1 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until 2 o'clock p. m., when it reassembled.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. KERN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 5 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. KERN and Mr. GALLINGER appeared, and

Mr. KERN said: Mr. President, your committee appointed to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that the Senate is ready to adjourn unless he has some further communication to make have performed that duty, and they were informed by the President of the United States that he has no further communication at present to make to this body.

PROHIBITION OF SMOKING IN THE SENATE CHAMBER.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, I send to the desk a notice which I wish to give of an amendment to the rules.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Carolina presents a notice, which will be read.

The SECRETARY. The Senator from South Carolina gives notice that he will move the following amendment to the rules of the Senate (S. Res. 22):

Resolved, That Rule XXXIV be amended as follows:

"Strike out the period at the end of the first clause and insert a semicolon, and then add the following: 'no smoking shall be permitted at any time on the floor of the Senate, or lighted cigars be brought into the Chamber.'"

Mr. TILLMAN. I ask that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Rules and printed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will be so ordered.

ADJOURNMENT SINE DIE.

Mr. KERN. I move that the Senate adjourn sine die.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 2 o'clock and 9 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned without day.

SIXTY-THIRD CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE SIXTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

FIRST SESSION.

SENATE.

MONDAY, April 7, 1913.

The first session of the Sixty-third Congress commenced this day at the Capitol, in the city of Washington, in pursuance of the proclamation of the President of the United States of the 17th day of March, 1913.

The Vice President (THOMAS R. MARSHALL, of Indiana) took the chair and called the Senate to order at 12 o'clock noon.

PRAYER.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we worship Thee, Thou who dwellest in ineffable light, creator and judge of all men. Thou art worthy to receive our adoration and praise. Thy name is glorious in all the earth.

We come unto Thee to-day under a sense of a mighty responsibility and obligation. We look to Thee for Thy guidance and commit our ways unto Thee and pray that Thou wilt order our steps. If Thy presence go not with us, send us not up hence; but if Thou wilt guide Thy servants, we will find our place in the order of a divine government whose lord is God. To this end we submit ourselves to Thee in Jesus' name. Amen.

THE PROCLAMATION.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the proclamation of the President of the United States convening Congress in extraordinary session.

The Secretary (James M. Baker) read the proclamation as follows:

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES—A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas public interests require that the Congress of the United States should be convened in extra session at 12 o'clock noon on the 7th day of April, 1913, to receive such communication as may be made by the Executive:

Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the Congress of the United States to convene in extra session at the Capitol in the city of Washington on the 7th day of April, 1913, at 12 o'clock noon, of which all persons who shall at that time be entitled to act as Members thereof are hereby required to take notice.

Given under my hand and the seal of the United States of America the 17th day of March, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and thirteen, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and thirty-seventh.

[SEAL.] WOODROW WILSON.

By the President:

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN,
Secretary of State.

SENATORS FROM ILLINOIS AND WEST VIRGINIA.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. President, I present the credentials of Hon. LAWRENCE Y. SHERMAN, a Senator elect from Illinois, and ask that they may be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The credentials will be read by the Secretary.

The credentials of LAWRENCE Y. SHERMAN, chosen by the Legislature of the State of Illinois a Senator from that State for the unexpired portion of the term ending March 3, 1915, were read and ordered to be filed.

Mr. CHILTON. Mr. President, the Senator elect from the State of West Virginia [Mr. GOFF], whose credentials have been presented and filed, is present and ready to take the oath of office as a Senator from that State.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator elect from West Virginia will present himself at the desk for that purpose.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. SHERMAN is also present and ready to take the oath.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator elect from Illinois will also present himself at the desk.

Mr. GOFF and Mr. SHERMAN were escorted to the Vice President's desk by Mr. CHILTON and Mr. BURTON, respectively, and the oath prescribed by law having been administered to them they took their seats in the Senate.

NOTIFICATION TO THE HOUSE.

Mr. BACON. I present a resolution for which I ask present consideration and action by the Senate.

The resolution (S. Res. 24) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary inform the House of Representatives that a quorum of the Senate is assembled and that the Senate is ready to proceed to business.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. KERN. I offer the following resolution and ask for its adoption.

The resolution (S. Res. 23) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That a committee consisting of two Senators be appointed to join such committee as may be appointed by the House of Representatives to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that a quorum of each House is assembled and that Congress is ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make.

The VICE PRESIDENT appointed Mr. KERN and Mr. GALLINGER the committee on the part of the Senate.

HOUR OF DAILY MEETING.

On motion of Mr. HITCHCOCK, it was Ordered, That the hour of the daily meeting of the Senate be 12 o'clock meridian until otherwise ordered.

RECESS.

The VICE PRESIDENT. What is the further pleasure of the Senate?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I should like to ask whether regular morning business would be now in order?

Mr. OVERMAN. I move that the Senate take a recess until 2 o'clock.

Mr. BRISTOW. Is it not in order to have regular morning business transacted?

Mr. OVERMAN. I think not until we hear from the committee appointed to wait on the President. That is the usual course, and I therefore move that the Senate take a recess until 2 o'clock.

Mr. KERN. I suggest that the House not yet having organized it may not have a committee appointed to wait on the President by that time.

Mr. OVERMAN. I think there will be appointed by that time a committee to act with the committee appointed here. I do not see what else we can now do but take a recess.

Mr. SMOOT. We could take another recess at 2 o'clock if it should be necessary.

Mr. OVERMAN. If the other House has not been organized by 2 o'clock another recess can be taken.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from North Carolina, that the Senate take a recess until 2 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to, and (at 12 o'clock and 16 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until 2 o'clock p. m., when it reassembled.

CALLING OF THE ROLL.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Missouri suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gronna	Newlands	Smith, Ga.
Bacon	Hitchcock	O'Gorman	Smith, S. C.
Bankhead	Hollis	Oliver	Smoot
Bradley	Hughes	Overman	Sterling
Brady	James	Owen	Stone
Brandegee	Johnson, Me.	Page	Sutherland
Bristow	Johnston, Ala.	Perkins	Swanson
Burton	Jones	Pittman	Thomas
Chamberlain	Kenyon	Ransdell	Thompson
Chilton	Kern	Reed	Thornton
Clapp	La Follette	Robinson	Tillman
Clark, Wyo.	Lane	Root	Townsend
Colt	Lippitt	Saulsbury	Vardaman
Culberson	Lodge	Shafroth	Walsh
Cummins	McCumber	Sheppard	Warren
Fall	McLean	Sherman	Williams
Fletcher	Martin, Va.	Shields	Works
Gallinger	Martine, N. J.	Shively
Goff	Myers	Simmons
Gore	Nelson	Smith, Ariz.

Mr. FLETCHER. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. BRYAN] is necessarily absent on account of some public matters. I wish to have this announcement stand for the day.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Seventy-seven Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum of the Senate present.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. OVERMAN. I moved that the Senate take a recess until 2 o'clock, taking the position that we ought not to do anything—as the President has called us in extraordinary session—until the President is communicated with and we shall have a communication from him. I thought at the time that I was following the usual custom, and I desire to read a short extract from the RECORD of the Fifty-seventh Congress, first session:

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MCLAURIN. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina asks that the resolution submitted by him shall be received at this time. If there is no objection, it will be received. He asks for the present consideration of the resolution. It will be read to the Senate for its information.

The Secretary proceeded to read the resolution, and read as follows:

"Joint resolution allowing the importation free of payment of duty, customs fees, or charges of articles from foreign countries, and the transfer of foreign exhibits from the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo, for the purpose of exhibition at the South Carolina Interstate and West Indian Exposition at Charleston, S. C.

"Resolved by the Senate, etc., That all articles which shall be imported from foreign countries"——

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I think it is the universal etiquette not to enter upon any business until the President has been informed that the two Houses are in session and his communication has been received. I hope the Senator from South Carolina will, under the usual practice, allow the resolution to lie over. I shall object to any resolution of the kind being received.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from South Carolina withdraw the resolution?

Mr. MCLAURIN. Yes, sir; for the present I will withdraw it.

Then the Senate took a recess, and after the recess the then Senator from Ohio, Mr. Foraker, said:

Mr. President, pending a report from the other House of the appointment of a committee to notify the President in conjunction with the committee of the Senate that Congress is in session and ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make, I move that the Senate take a recess for 30 minutes.

The Senate took another recess, and no communication having been received on that day, the Senate adjourned.

At the special session of the Senate, Fifty-eighth Congress, March 5, 1903, I find from the RECORD that the following occurred:

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, pending the report of the committee which has just been appointed, I desire to rise to a question of privilege.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina is recognized for that purpose.

Mr. TILLMAN. In the second or continued part of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of March 3, which did not come from the Printer until late yesterday morning, I find a very remarkable speech, so remarkable——

Mr. PETTUS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. TILLMAN. With pleasure.

Mr. PETTUS. It is the universal custom, Mr. President, to transact no business until the President has been informed that the Senate is in session.

Mr. TILLMAN. If the Chair shall so rule, I will very quietly subside and wait until we get into working order. I simply wanted to save some time. It will take half an hour or more to go to the White House and return. I will await the decision of the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair knows of no parliamentary rule which prevents a Senator from addressing the Senate under such circumstances.

Mr. PETTUS. It is not a parliamentary rule, I admit; but it is a custom of the Senate and a rule of courtesy.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks it is the custom of the Senate.

Mr. SMOOT. I hardly think the Senate could do any business before it received notice from the House that that body was in session and organized. I think perhaps if the House gave notice that it was in session and organized we could transact business without waiting for a message from the President of the United States. But as the matter now stands, officially the Senate has not been notified that the House is in session, and until that notification has been received I doubt very much whether it would be proper to go on with business.

Mr. STONE. I think we could proceed if we had been informed that the House was in session, organized, and ready for business. We have had no such communication. As a matter of courtesy at least I think it has been the rule that no business should be transacted until the President has likewise been informed that the two Houses were organized and ready to proceed with business. Without information as to when the House will be organized and ready to report to the Senate, I suggest to my friend the Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN] that it might be advisable now to move an adjournment until to-morrow. I submit the matter, however, to his discretion.

RECESS.

Mr. BACON. It is possible that there may be a communication from the other House after it shall have organized which will require some action on the part of the Senate this afternoon. In view of that fact, at the suggestion of Senators I move that the Senate take a further recess until 4 o'clock.

I will state, Mr. President, that the hour suggested by me is not one which has been originated by me, but I do so at the suggestion of Senators who have had the matter under consideration. I make the motion that the Senate take a further recess until 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Georgia, that the Senate take a further recess until 4 o'clock.

Mr. BACON. Some Senators around me suggest 3 o'clock, and possibly it may be better to make it 3. If in the meantime the House shall be organized we will have gained that much time. I will therefore, with the permission of the Senate, change the hour to 3 o'clock.

Mr. SMOOT. It is now 10 minutes past 2, and that would be a recess of only 50 minutes.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. That may be enough.

Mr. SMOOT. If it were a recess until 4 o'clock we could go to work during that time.

Mr. BACON. Very well; I will adhere to the original hour named in the motion made by me.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Georgia, that the Senate take a further recess until 4 o'clock.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I rose to make an inquiry. The question is not debatable, I suppose, but I wish to ask the Senator from Georgia whether in view of the fact that we have a caucus called for this afternoon it would not be well to adjourn until to-morrow morning?

Mr. BACON. I moved a recess only in view of the suggestion which I made, that there will probably come from the House during the afternoon a resolution which will require that the Senate shall act upon it this afternoon, if it shall be practicable to do so. It is only upon that ground that the suggestion of a further recess is made. I presume there is no probability of any other business being transacted by the Senate to-day.

Mr. GALLINGER. Regular order, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Georgia, that the Senate take a further recess until 4 o'clock p. m.

The motion was agreed to, there being, on a division, ayes 51, noes 15; and (at 2 o'clock and 12 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until 4 o'clock p. m., when it reassembled.

CALLING OF THE ROLL.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah suggests the absence of a quorum, and the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Clapp	James	McLean
Bacon	Clark, Wyo.	Johnson, Me.	Nelson
Bankhead	Clarke, Ark.	Johnston, Ala.	Newlands
Borah	Colt	Jones	Norris
Bradley	Fall	Kenyon	O'Gorman
Brady	Fletcher	Kern	Overman
Brandegee	Gallinger	La Follette	Page
Bristow	Goff	Lane	Pittman
Burton	Gore	Lodge	Ransdell
Chamberlain	Hollis	Martine, N. J.	Reed
Chilton	Hughes	McCumber	Robinson
Saulsbury	Simmons	Sutherland	Walsh
Shafroth	Smith, Ariz.	Thomas	Warren
Sheppard	Smith, S. C.	Thompson	Williams
Sherman	Smoot	Thornton	Works
Shields	Sterling	Townsend
Shively	Stone	Vardaman

The VICE PRESIDENT. Sixty-six Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum of the Senate present. The Senate will receive a message from the House of Representatives.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

Mr. South, the Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives, appeared and delivered the following message:

Mr. President, I am directed by the House of Representatives to inform the Senate that a quorum of the House of Representatives has assembled; that CHAMP CLARK, a Representative from the State of Missouri, has been elected Speaker; that South Trimble, a citizen of the State of Kentucky, has been elected Clerk; and that the House is ready for business.

Also, that a committee of three were appointed by the Speaker on the part of the House of Representatives to join the committee appointed by the Senate to wait on the President of the United States and notify him that a quorum of the two Houses has assembled and that Congress is ready to receive any communication that he may be pleased to make, and that Mr. UNDERWOOD, Mr. FITZGERALD, and Mr. MANN were appointed such committee on the part of the House.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. KERN and Mr. GALLINGER, the committee on the part of the Senate appointed to wait upon the President of the United States, appeared; and

Mr. KERN said: Mr. President, the committee appointed by the Senate and House of Representatives to wait upon the President of the United States and to inform him that the two Houses of Congress have assembled and are ready to receive any communication he might be pleased to make have attended to their duty, and we, the Senate members of that committee, beg leave to report that the President will present in person a communication to Congress to-morrow at 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION—THE TARIFF.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, if I am not violating a precedent or a rule, I desire to make a personal statement. I ask the Chair whether it is proper at this particular time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair rules that it is proper.

Mr. ASHURST. I notice in a New York newspaper this morning, to wit, the Times, and I should observe that the paper to which I refer is usually correct in its news dispatches, therefore I assume it must be an error, unwittingly made, of course, this paper and some others state that the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] is one of five Senators who will be in opposition to the Democratic plan of reducing the tariff.

I feel, in justice to myself and the Democratic Party, of which I am a member, which is pledged to an immediate and a downward revision of the tariff, that I should at once and for all time make my position clear and thus correct the erroneous impression conveyed by these dispatches to the New York papers. I feel that I may do so more succinctly and at least more specifically by reading the following telegraphic dispatches. First, I read a telegraphic dispatch from the Flagstaff Board of Trade, of Flagstaff, Ariz., as follows:

FLAGSTAFF, ARIZ., April 5, 1913.

HENRY F. ASHURST,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

We urge you to stick for fair measure of protection on wool and meats. All business of State, especially central and northern Arizona, dependent on success of live-stock industry.

FLAGSTAFF BOARD OF TRADE.

My reply was as follows, which I transmitted by telegraph:

APRIL 6, 1913.

FLAGSTAFF BOARD OF TRADE,
Flagstaff, Ariz.:

Your telegram would indicate you think I am a standpat Republican instead of a Progressive Democrat. I believe you are intelligent, honest, and brave enough to get along very well without any bounty or gift from the Government, and you may be sure that the Democratic Party will keep its promises and that it will not destroy the cattle or sheep industry.

HENRY F. ASHURST,
United States Senator.

A gentleman in the State of Arizona transmitted a letter to me urging that I should vote against any bill which had for its purpose the reduction of the tariff on meats, cattle, sheep, or wool, and I transmitted to him the following letter, which I ask the Secretary to read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

MARCH 28, 1913.

MY DEAR FRIEND: This is reply to yours of the 10th instant.

In asking me to oppose any reduction in the tariff on beef, mutton, cattle, sheep, raw wool, woolen goods, and leather goods you surely must have been under the impression that I was a standpat Republican instead of a progressive Democrat. The Democratic Party is committed, so far as faith and honor can bind men, to reduce the tariff on the necessaries of life; and I could not take the action you request me to take unless I turned traitor to every principle I have been advocating since I reached majority. Every person in the world is a free trader after he gets his own interests protected. The cattlemen want cattle, meats, and hides protected, but want to buy everything else as cheaply as possible. The woolgrowers want wool protected, but naturally desire to purchase everything else as cheaply as they may. The pineapple growers want everything on the free list but pineapples; the sewing-machine manufacturer wants sewing machines protected and everything else on the free list, and so on down the line.

I am always glad to please my friends in Arizona, but I can not do what you ask. I shall not vote to permit one set of men to make money improperly at the expense of the whole public. No legitimate business should require a gift, bounty, or largess from the Government. If the Democratic Party, after the promises it has made to the people to reduce the tariff, should then begin to equivocate, it would be the end—and ought to be the end—of the Democratic Party.

With kindest personal regards,

Yours, cordially, HENRY F. ASHURST.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, many of the gentlemen asking me to vote against a reduction of the tariff on beef, cattle, meat, wool, and sheep are my close personal friends and have been for many years. Naturally it is not pleasant for me to cast a vote directly against what they believe to be their best interests, but the time has come when a public man must give up his personal interests and the interests of a few men of his own particular State for the larger good and general good of all the people.

The other day some gentlemen urged me to oppose a reduction of the tariff on sugar. My reply was that I am concerned with seeing to it that the 300,000 sugar consumers in the State of Arizona shall have consideration above the few men raising sugar beets in Arizona.

Mr. President, I make this statement and correction in no spirit of resentment against the newspapers that have so completely misstated my position. There is not a Senator here who owes the newspapers more than I do. As a distinguished Senator sitting before me once said, the only way the newspapers have ever abused me was to overpraise me and to say good things about me that I did not deserve.

I trust I have made my position clear, and thank the Senate for its attention.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I wish in a word to say that, in my opinion, the exploitation of individual views on the tariff question might well be delayed for a while. This is a great question we are confronting, and for the manner of dealing with it the Democratic Party is responsible. I think we could very well await with patience a time when this whole question is brought before the Senate in some form that will challenge our serious consideration.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I arose with much deliberation and asked if it was proper for me to make this statement. The distinguished Senator from Missouri seems to think that I should have waited for a more convenient season. I was very careful not to violate a precedent. I asked in advance if it would be a violation of precedent. Our distinguished and beloved Vice President ruled correctly, as I believe, and held it would not be a violation of the precedents and rules for me to make this personal statement, and in all kindness to the Senator from Missouri, I am bound to say that I am a very accurate umpire as to time, place, and manner in which I should exploit my individual views.

RELIEF OF FLOOD SUFFERERS IN OHIO.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. President, I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry. I desire to introduce a rather urgent resolution relating to the floods in Ohio. Is it in order to introduce the resolution?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair rules that it is.

Mr. BURTON. I ask unanimous consent to introduce a joint resolution in the name of my colleague [Mr. POMERENE], who is unavoidably absent to-day. We are, however, equally interested in it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the joint resolution introduced by the Senator from Ohio, and the Chair understands that the Senator from Ohio asks unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

Mr. BURTON. I do not feel justified in asking for its immediate consideration. I desire to introduce it and have it referred to the appropriate committee.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I should like to suggest that unless the Senate takes some other action the regular order is the transaction of morning business.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Massachusetts object to the introduction of the joint resolution?

Mr. LODGE. Oh, no; I do not object. I am very glad to have the joint resolution introduced; but all morning business is in order, I should think.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Ohio introduces a joint resolution which will be read by title.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let the joint resolution be read in full, if it is not too long, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 2) for the relief of destitute persons within the State of Ohio in the districts devastated by the recent floods was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the sum of $2,000,000 is hereby appropriated, to be immediately available, of which sum so much as is necessary shall be used to reimburse the War Department for such expenditures as have been made for the relief of flood sufferers within the State of Ohio, and the balance shall be placed in the hands of the American National Red Cross Society, to be expended in cooperation with the State and local authorities within the State of Ohio, for the further relief of people rendered destitute by the devastation of the floods in that State.

The officers of the American National Red Cross Society are hereby authorized to expend the amount available for the purpose of this resolution in their discretion and in cooperation with the State and local authorities; and an accounting of such funds shall be made to and audited by the Auditor for the War Department.

Mr. STONE. I am uncertain as to just what committee that joint resolution ought to go.

Mr. WARREN. I think it should go to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. STONE. I should think it should be referred to the Committee on Appropriations. Then I move, if it is necessary for me to do so, that the joint resolution be referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. WARREN. I understood the Chair to direct that the joint resolution be referred to that committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will take that course, if there is no objection.

Mr. STONE. I rose under the impression that the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BURTON] desired immediate consideration for the joint resolution.

Mr. BURTON. I have conferred with some of my fellow Senators to obtain their opinions in regard to it, and, in deference to them, I do not feel justified in asking for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution. I give notice, however, that I shall call it up at the earliest possible date. I trust it will receive very early consideration by the Committee on Appropriations, and that that committee will be called to meet not later than to-morrow morning.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I ask leave to introduce a bill for reference to the proper committee.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks he will be compelled to rule that petitions and memorials shall first be presented.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I present a joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, which I ask may be read and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

There being no objection, the joint resolution was read and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, as follows:

Whereas it appears from investigation recently made by the Senate of the United States, and otherwise, that polygamy still exists in certain places in the United States, notwithstanding prohibitory statutes enacted by the several States thereof; and

Whereas the practice of polygamy is generally condemned by the people of the United States, and there is a demand for the more effectual prohibition thereof by placing the subject under Federal jurisdiction and control, at the same time reserving to each State the right to make and enforce its own laws relating to marriage and divorce: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate (the assembly concurring), That the application be made, and hereby is made, to Congress under the provisions of Article V of the Constitution of the United States for the calling of a convention to propose an amendment to the Constitution of the United States whereby polygamy and polygamous cohabitation shall be prohibited, and Congress shall be given power to enforce such prohibition by appropriate legislation.

Resolved further, That the legislatures of all other States of the United States, now in session or when next convened, be, and they hereby are, respectfully requested to join in this application by the adoption of this or an equivalent resolution.

Resolved further, That the secretary of state be, and he hereby is, directed to transmit copies of this application to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States and to the several Members of said bodies representing this State therein; also to transmit copies hereof to the legislatures of all other States of the United States.

THOMAS MORRIS,
President of the Senate.
MERLIN HULL,
Speaker of the Assembly.
A. C. TRETOW,
Acting Chief Clerk.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

Received March 26, 1913, 9.10 a. m.

J. S. DONALD,
Secretary of State.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE presented a resolution adopted at a meeting of the Wisconsin Woman's Suffrage Association, which was referred to the Committee on Woman's Suffrage and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolved, That this meeting of the Wisconsin Woman's Suffrage Association deplores the treatment accorded Wisconsin women during the procession March 3, as well as the treatment accorded the women of other States, and we believe that the proper person or persons should be held responsible.

Mrs. Henry M. Youmans, president, Waukesha, Wis.; Mrs. H. W. Chynoweth, president, Dane County, Madison, Wis.; Miss Harriett F. Bain, president, Kenosha, Kenosha, Wis.; Mrs. Rex McCreery, Brown County, Green Bay, Wis.; Mrs. Frank Eggers, president, Manitowoc County, Manitowoc, Wis.; Mrs. Mary D. Bradford, past president Wisconsin State Teachers' Association; Mrs. Gustav A. Hipke, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. C. W. Steele, president, Whitewater, Whitewater, Wis.; Mrs. W. M. Waters, Richland Center; Miss Ada L. James, ex-secretary Wisconsin Woman's Suffrage Association, Richland Center, Wis.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, do I understand now that we are proceeding in regular order under the head of morning business?

The VICE PRESIDENT. We are.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. If so, at the proper time I shall present certain matters.

Mr. WORKS presented a memorial of the Legislature of the State of California, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Assembly joint resolution 2, relative to requesting the United States Congress to authorize and direct the postal savings system to loan its funds to school districts.

Whereas under the act of Congress now in force, which establishes a postal savings system throughout the United States, there is no authority by which the board of trustees of said postal savings system is permitted to loan the funds of said system to the various school districts throughout the Nation; and

Whereas it appears that, if such authority existed, the school districts of this State and every State would be able thereby to obtain money directly from the funds of said postal savings system with more facility and at lower rates of interest; and

Whereas it appears that, by their ability to borrow money more easily and under better conditions, the school districts of this State and of every State will receive great benefits of economy, saving, and financial prosperity, which will consequently afford the rising generation of our Nation better education and development: Be it therefore

Resolved, That the Senate and Assembly of the State of California hereby join in requesting the Congress of the United States to amend the act establishing the postal savings system in such manner as will authorize and direct the board of trustees of said postal savings system to invest the funds of said system in school-district bonds of the various school districts of the several States, and that our representatives in the Senate and the House of Representatives of Congress do their utmost to further such legislation as will effect the above result; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be forthwith transmitted by the clerk of the assembly to the President of the Senate of the United States and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and a copy hereof to each Member of Congress and to each newly elected Member of Congress.

C. C. YOUNG,
Speaker of the Assembly.
L. B. MALLORY,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.

Mr. WORKS presented a memorial of the Legislature of the State of California, which was referred to the Committee on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Assembly joint resolution 19, relative to establishing game refuges in the national forest reserve in the State of California.

Whereas there is in the State of California over 25,000,000 acres of national forest reserves, containing a large variety of wild game animals and birds; and

Whereas, because of the largely increasing population adjacent to such forest reserves, many species of wild animals and birds are facing extinction and there is a necessity for the protection and preservation of such game animals and birds, that they have places of refuge where they can propagate and increase unmolested:

Resolved, That the Senate and Assembly of the Legislature of the State of California in joint action, memorialize Congress to set aside all or part of each of the national forest reserves in California as game refuges in which the taking or hunting of game animals and birds shall be prohibited.

Resolved, That our Senators and Representatives in Congress be requested to use all honorable means to secure the passage of a measure, or such other action as may be necessary, declaring said lands as game refuges for the protection and conservation of the game therein.

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States, the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Agriculture, the respective Houses in Congress, and to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress now in office, and those who will assume office on March 4, 1913.

Mr. McCUMBER. I present a concurrent resolution passed by the Legislature of North Dakota which I ask may be read and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

There being no objection, the concurrent resolution was read and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, as follows:

Mr. Hoge introduced the following concurrent resolution urging Congress to enact a law prohibiting the use of the parcel post for the mailing of cigarettes, snuff, etc., within States prohibiting the sale thereof:

Whereas the Thirteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of North Dakota has passed laws prohibiting the sale of cigarettes and snuff in this State; and

Whereas several other States have passed similar laws; and

Whereas the common violators of these and any other prohibition laws are now planning the importation of cigarettes and snuff by parcel post in defiance of the laws of this and other States; and

Whereas said laws have been enacted for the purpose of being enforced: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of North Dakota (the Senate concurring), That we urge upon our Senators and Representatives in Congress of the United States to use their best efforts and influence toward securing the passage of an act of Congress prohibiting the use of the parcel post for the mailing of cigarettes or snuff or any substitute therefor addressed to any post office within the State of North Dakota or any other State having such anti-cigarette and antisnuff laws, and to prevail upon the Postmaster General to promulgate rules and regulations of the Post Office Department that will prevent the use of the parcel post to evade State laws: Be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be mailed by the secretary of state to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress of the United States.

This is to certify that the foregoing resolution originated in the house and was adopted on the 6th day of March and was concurred in by the senate on the 7th day of March, 1913.

J. H. FRAINE,
Speaker of the House.
M. J. GEORGE,
Chief Clerk of the House.
A. T. KRAABEL,
President of the Senate.
W. D. AUSTIN,
Secretary of the Senate.

Mr. WALSH presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial 6.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives in the Congress of the United States:

Your memorialists, the Thirteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, do hereby submit for your consideration the following memorial:

Whereas there is now pending in the Congress of the United States a bill for an act providing, among other things, that if the State of Montana shall agree to establish and maintain an agricultural, manual training, or other educational or public institution upon a section of land upon which the buildings at Fort Assinniboine are located, the President is authorized to grant the lands and buildings to the State on payment of $2.50 per acre therefor; and

Whereas there is now pending before the Thirteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana a bill for an act entitled "An act to establish and locate the Northern Montana Agricultural and Manual-Training School, and an agricultural experimental substation in connection therewith; appropriating money to pay the United States Government for the land upon which the same is to be situated, and to start and institute said institution," which is to be located at Fort Assinniboine aforesaid; and

Whereas in the judgment of your memorialists one section of arid land is not a sufficient area to be devoted to the purpose aforesaid, and with 2,000 acres the efficiency of said school would be greatly increased, and it would soon become almost, if not entirely, self-supporting:

Therefore, we respectfully request your honorable body to increase the area of land to be devoted to the purposes aforesaid from one section to 2,000 acres, to be granted to the State of Montana under the same conditions and for the same consideration per acre as in said bill already provided.

This memorial shall be in force from and after its adoption by both houses and approval by the governor.

W. W. McDOWELL,
President of the Senate.

Mr. WALSH presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of the State of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint resolution 5, relative to suspending entries on Flathead Reservation.

Whereas a large number of citizens on what was formerly the Flathead Reservation in Montana have presented filings on lands which are unoccupied and unallotted; and

Whereas said filings have been rejected and suspended by reason of the fact that the said land has not been classified or appraised; and

Whereas many of these settlers have made their applications several years ago and said applications have been rejected or suspended, awaiting the action of the department, which action has not yet been taken; be it therefore

Resolved, That the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana does hereby protest against the dilatory action of the Department of the Interior and does hereby demand that the said Department of the Interior take steps to immediately classify and appraise said lands to the end that settlers may have proper filings accepted and that the land in question may be cultivated and become homes for citizens of the United States who have applied for and desire the same; be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be presented to the President of the United States, the Secretary of the Interior, and to the Members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives from Montana.

Senate joint memorial 4.

Petition to Congress to enact such legislation as will be necessary for the establishment and the maintenance of an agricultural building for the display of agricultural products.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives in Congress of the United States assembled:

Whereas the State of Montana desires to stimulate interest in and direct attention to agricultural pursuits, and we believe that an attractive display of agricultural products will render good results in the matter of the settlement and cultivation of unoccupied lands in Montana and other States: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we the Thirteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, the senate and house concurring, do hereby petition the Congress of the United States for the passage of legislation providing for the establishment and maintenance, under the supervision and regulation of the Department of Agriculture of the United States, of an agricultural building in the city of Washington, D. C., for the permanent and conspicuous display of agricultural products of every kind and description from every State and Territory of the United States. That said building be kept open during business hours of all legal days, and that an examination and inspection of said products be permitted by visitors from all parts of the world.

Resolved further, That a copy of this memorial be forwarded by the secretary of state to the honorable Secretary of Agriculture of the United States and to our Senators and Representatives in Congress, with the request that they use every effort within their power to secure the enactment of such legislation as is necessary to carry out the purposes herein expressed.

Senate joint memorial 3.

Petition to Congress to enact such legislation as will be necessary for the construction of a system of paved public highways connecting the capitol of the several States of the Union with the National Capitol and with each other, and also with the principal national parks.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives in the Congress of the United States assembled:

Whereas a uniform system of national public highways or roads, connecting the capitols of the several States of the Union with the National Capitol at Washington and with each other and also with the principal national parks, will vastly promote commerce between the several States and reduce the cost of transportation thereof; facilitate and cheapen travel and social intercourse between the people; discourage sectionalism, and render the entire people more cosmopolitan intellectually, morally, and politically; aid the farmer in marketing his produce and make farm life more agreeable, attractive, and profitable; induce Americans to see and know America; beautify all parts of the Union; intensify industrial activities; encourage good road building throughout the continent; and bring the entire people countless blessings, conveniences, and joys known only to a highly developed country; and

Whereas to secure uniformity, thoroughness, and economy in construction, fitness, and adaptability of grades and avoidance of such local controversies in the selection of routes as would probably delay, if not defeat, the entire enterprise, and the cost of such a system of highways being beyond the probable financial resources of the several States, it would be necessary that it be constructed at the expense and under the supervision of the General Government: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved (the house concurring), We, the Thirteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, do hereby petition and earnestly pray the honorable Congress of the United States for the passage of legislation for the location and construction, under the supervision and by the General Government, of a system of national highways or roads which shall connect the capitols of the several States of the Union with the National Capitol at Washington and with each other, and also with the principal national parks; that such national highways be constructed on firm concrete bases with hard surfaces and as nearly dustless as possible; that they be located solely with regard to the greatest public good and feasibility of route and grades; and be it further

Resolved, That Congress provide in such legislation means of raising the necessary money for the location and construction of such national highway by the restoration of the internal-revenue tax of 1879 on tobacco, or in some other manner as to it shall seem meet and proper, and that the location and construction of such system of highways be commenced, as means can be provided, throughout the country generally without giving priority to any sections or locations; and it is further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be forwarded by the secretary of state of the State of Montana to the Senate of the United States, and that copies of this memorial be forwarded by the secretary of state of the State of Montana to the House of Representatives of the United States; and be it further

Resolved, That copies thereof be transmitted by the secretary of state of the State of Montana to the Senators and Representatives in Congress of the State of Montana, with the request that they use every effort within their power to bring about a speedy action for the accomplishment of the ends and purposes herein indicated.

House joint memorial 1.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas the settlers under the Lower Yellowstone project, Montana and North Dakota, organized under the supervision and direction of the Reclamation Service, the Lower Yellowstone Water Users' Association, a corporation, and executed and delivered a contract to said corporation subscribing for stock in said corporation, which empowered said corporation, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, to sell their homesteads and their lands unless the owners made application for water rights and complied with the provisions of the act of Congress of June 17, 1902; and

Whereas said contracts were entered into and executed with the understanding that the final estimated cost of the project was $30 per acre, and that the cost to them should not exceed that amount per acre on their holdings, and that the farm unit under said project was 160 acres; and

Whereas the provisions of the act of Congress of June 17, 1902, provided that the payments should be made with a view of returning to the reclamation fund the estimated cost of construction, and also that the farm unit should be fixed at the time the project is determined feasible by the Secretary of the Interior; and

Whereas the cost of construction of said project has exceeded the original estimated cost of $750,000, increasing the cost thereof to the settlers to $42.50 per acre; and

Whereas many settlers prior to the initiation of said project have secured from the Government tracts of land embracing more than 80 acres, and the Secretary of the Interior by his ruling has required that such settlers reduce their holdings to 80-acre tracts, the same being adopted as the farm unit under said project, which said ruling the said settlers denounce as contrary to the provisions of the reclamation act: Now therefore be it

Resolved (the senate concurring), That we, the Thirteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, do hereby petition the Congress of the United States for the passage of necessary legislation and the abrogation of unjust rulings, providing that the settlers under said Yellowstone project shall not be required to return to the reclamation fund an amount exceeding the original estimated cost of $30 per acre; and, further, that said settlers under said project who acquired from the Government prior to the initiation thereof tracts of land embracing more than 80 acres be permitted to hold the same under said project, not exceeding 160 acres each, and to acquire water rights thereunder for the whole of said holdings; further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be forwarded by the secretary of state to the President of the United States and to the Secretary of the Interior and our Senators and Representatives in Congress, with the request that they use their every effort to bring about speedy action for the accomplishment of the ends and purposes herein indicated.

Mr. THOMAS presented a memorial of the Legislature of the State of Colorado, which was referred to the Committee on the Conservation of National Resources and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 5.

To Hon. Woodrow Wilson, President elect, and the Congress of the United States:

Your memorialist, the General Assembly of the State of Colorado, respectfully represents that under the present Federal policy of control of the public domain the following conditions obtain:

1. The people of Colorado are in favor of conservation in the meaning of prevention of waste and monopoly, but are unalterably opposed to it in the definition of preserving our lands and resources in their present state for future generations. We agree that these natural resources belong to all the people, but this ownership is not now different from what it always has been, namely, subject to the right of the citizen to acquire the same under liberal laws to the extent necessary to satisfactory settlement and the building of permanent homes.

2. It has been charged that the Western States have failed in the past to do their duty in the conservation of these resources, but those who make these charges utterly fail to consider that any unlawful acquisition or waste was committed under Federal laws and on public lands, and that the States, having no control, were powerless to prevent it. They also fail to recognize the fact that the amount of lands unlawfully acquired was a mere trifle compared with that lawfully acquired by bona fide settlers and others.

3. The older States have had, and still have, the benefits arising from private acquisitions of all the public lands within their boundaries, receiving revenue therefrom through taxation and otherwise, and it is therefore a great injustice that they should now seek to impose upon the Western States obstructions and burdens with which they themselves did not have to contend.

4. We deny that it is right or advisable for the Federal Government to retain the title to and lease the public lands for any purpose, as the history of the country shows that in 1807 Congress authorized the War Department to lease the lead mines in the territory afterwards embraced in the States of Missouri, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Iowa, reserving to the United States a royalty of one-sixth of the product.

5. This system was vigorously opposed by the residents of the region involved from the very beginning, and after a few years' trial the Missouri Legislature and the governor of Illinois protested against it. Presidents Polk and Fillmore urged its abandonment. The Secretary of War condemned it, saying that the benefit to the Government bore "no just proportion to the injury done to the country, first, by retarding the settlement of the country and, second, by the demoralizing influence of the system."

Year after year congressional Committees on Public Lands reported against it. One of these reports concludes as follows:

"When the United States accepted the cession of the northwestern territory the acceptance was on the express condition and under a pledge to form it into distinct republican States and to admit them as members of the Federal Union, having the same rights of freedom, sovereignty, and independence as the other States. This pledge your committee believes would not be redeemed by merely dividing the surface into States and giving them names, but it includes a pledge to sell the lands, so that they may be settled and thus form States. No other mode of disposing of them can be regarded as a compliance with that pledge."

For nearly 40 years this controversy was waged with increasing intensity, until 1846, when an act was passed directing the sale of these lands.

This condemned and discarded policy is now sought to be resurrected; and in pursuance thereof there have been withdrawn forest, coal, oil, phosphate, and power-site lands, aggregating in Colorado over 21,000,000 acres, equal to 33 per cent of the total area of the State, together with similar amounts in other Western States, so that in all the area thus withdrawn is greater than the combined area of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, both Virginias, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, and Illinois, and thus nearly 300,000,000 acres are now, and have been for several years, practically out of reach of individual enterprise or taxation for the support of the State government. This obstructive policy is a departure from the policy of the past 50 years and in violation of the rights of these States as provided in their enabling acts admitting them into the Union, their constitutions, and the fundamental principles on which the Union of the States is predicated.

The idea that the leasing of the forests and other public lands for grazing purposes to stockmen, reserving to the settler and miner a right to enter them, will give the latter adequate protection is a fallacy for the reason that it is obvious that such entries will necessarily interfere with the proper handling of stock. Where a stockman has 1,000 acres or more under such a lease, and a homesteader should undertake to enter 160 or 320 acres of the best of it, it is a certainty that the stockman would in every way not positively unlawful discourage the settler, unless we credit the stockman with less than ordinary sense of self-protection. And it is equally certain that he would succeed in preventing the entry, even if he had to buy the settler off.

The inevitable result of such leases will be to substantially end homesteading and mining on the public lands.

6. We assert that the States are vested with the right to control the waters within their respective borders (subject only to the right of the Federal Government to protect navigation on those streams that are navigable), to dispose of them to those who will use them for beneficial purposes, and that all returns therefrom, direct or indirect, justly belong to the States and not to the Federal Government.

7. Experience has shown that the methods of the Reclamation Service in the irrigation of arid lands have been less expeditious and more arbitrary and unjust in the disregard of the equitable rights of its own water users and other competitive projects than those of private enterprises. Not only so, but these projects have been made the excuse by officers of the departments concerned for refusal and interminable delays in approving the rights of way and occupancy of private irrigation projects, to which the latter are unquestionably entitled under the laws of the United States.

Reclamation of arid lands when undertaken by the United States Government should in all cases recognize the rights of the States to control the waters within their borders and should also recognize the equitable rights of its water users and other competitive projects and those of private enterprises.

These projects and enterprises should not be made by officers of the Reclamation Service an excuse for refusal to approve of rights of way and occupancy of lands under private irrigation projects; such delays seriously obstruct private enterprise and the development and improvement of lands belonging to the States, and we ask that any such refusals be revoked.

We further ask that the Reclamation Service take immediate steps looking toward the early completion of all projects now under way within this State, in order that early settlement under these projects may take place.

8. The great descent and general character of mountain streams gives such endless opportunities for water plants that any monopoly of the same is physically impossible. Indeed, the idea is growing rapidly that the small power plant is the coming one. When water has served its purpose for one power plant it continues its descent. It is not consumed nor does it vanish. Its volume is as great after as before, and therefore but a little lower down in the mountains another power plant may be constructed and so on while the stream shall last.

These delays have seriously obstructed not only these private projects but have also interfered with the irrigation and improvement of several hundred thousand acres of land belonging to the State of Colorado and granted under the laws of the United States for the purpose of improvement and sale by the State.

9. We recognize that some good has been accomplished by the Forest Service, yet at the same time its cost has been many times greater than its benefit; it has materially hindered the settlement and development of the country chiefly because of the hard and fast rules made at Washington by chiefs unfamiliar with actual conditions, and administered by subordinates, many of whom are equally unfamiliar with such conditions.

As to the scientific forestry promised, it is only necessary to refer to the reports of the forester to show that his management in many respects is most unscientific. His reports show that billions of feet of timber in the national forests are overripe, decaying and decayed, and are an actual fire menace to the remainder and ought to be cut. Yet the high prices he asks and the rules and regulations enforced are greatly restricting sales and cutting.

We urge that a committee, congressional or otherwise, be immediately appointed to visit Colorado and investigate the conditions referred to above and report on the same. It seems necessary to have the committee pursue its investigation on the ground, as few of those who suffer by the methods in force would be able to advance the expenses of a trip to Washington. Besides, an actual view of many of these things will disclose features which it would be difficult to make clear by testimony.

10. An unjust discrimination is made between grazing and other agricultural lands. The major portion of this State is composed of what is termed grazing lands, and grass is the greatest agricultural crop known and the most indispensable. All lands at present chiefly valuable for grazing should be as freely open to entry as are "farm" lands, but in sufficient quantities to support families. More than three-fourths of our present cultivated area was originally located as pasture.

and it was largely through this privilege that our present cultivated area was developed.

There is hardly an acre of grazing land on the plains that will not ultimately become agricultural lands with the development of storage of water and the economical use thereof.

11. Nearly all of our metalliferous lands have been included in forest reserves, since which time not a single important mining camp has been opened. The unwarranted interference by the Forest Service is largely responsible for the falling off of approximately $20,000,000 in the annual metal output. The man who is willing to put his labor and money into the development of a mining claim is the person best fitted to classify the land and should be permitted to acquire it.

We venture the assurance that if 40 years ago the forest reserves had been established neither Leadville nor Cripple Creek nor a score of other mining camps would have been discovered or developed.

Although our lands are of great variety they are open to entry for but few purposes and in unsuited quantities. For instance, a piece of land can not be taken merely for a home.

12. In territorial days Congress gave us the water of our natural streams and confirmed that right in the acceptance of our State constitution. Certain Federal bureaus are trying to take away that right by denying rights of way over the public domain. The contention of Federal authority, as in the case of the Eagle Dam, for the first storage of water at the lower end of the stream, instead of near the source of supply, would prevent the repeated use of water for power and irrigation upstream, would uselessly deprive large areas of development and would therefore be contrary to the principle of the "best use" as demonstrated by the experience of more than half a century.

The diversion and use of water when streams are high equalize the flow, furnish a better supply of water during the dry season, and by lessening floods save lives and property on the rivers below.

Special agents are permitted to protest against the validity of entries without any knowledge of facts relating thereto. They should be required to make their objections at the time of final proof, that the entryman may face his accusers.

13. The courts should be opened to land disputes, that citizens may be afforded an opportunity to enforce their rights, instead of the system now in vogue of determination through star-chamber proceedings by administrative officers.

14. Under the express terms of the enabling act, Colorado was admitted to the Union on an equal footing in all respects whatsoever with the original States. To be on an equal footing we must have the power to tax the land and other property within the State, for without that power we can not maintain State and local governments and institutions. The present policy of the Federal Government is to place our lands and resources on a revenue basis, paying taxes in the form of royalties into the Federal Treasury, thereby seriously interfering with the means of supporting our needy growing institutions. The effect of the present policy is to permit local taxation, only upon farm and city and town lands now privately owned. This might be less objectionable in Iowa and Illinois, where practically all of the land is tillable. More than half of the area of Colorado is not tillable under any known method, but is composed of mineral, grazing, and timbered areas which take the place of farm lands, and which are just as expensive to govern, if not more so, than are the farm lands. The policy, therefore, which withdraws these from taxation is a serious handicap to the State.

While our resources are of great variety they are not naturally ready for use. On the average there has been a dollar in expense for every dollar in precious metals taken from the mountains, and the value of our lands is measured by the labor required for their irrigation and development. Without the value the presence and industry our people have added to them, there is not a dollar's worth of value on any of our mineral resources. Every dollar, therefore, charged in the form of royalty on the products of these resources is a tax on human toil.

We can not hope to secure the best settlement of our lands nor development of our resources upon a tenantry basis. The man who is permitted to lease lands cheaply for grazing will try to keep them for pasture.

15. There is but one-third of our area on the tax rolls, with extraordinary educational requirements to equip our people to meet mining, industrial, irrigation, and other agricultural development. We must, therefore, increase the taxable area to include all the lands if every portion of the State shall bear its just share of this burden.

A large part of our territory is included in the Louisiana Purchase, in the treaty ratifying which it is decreed:

"The inhabitants of the ceded territory shall be incorporated in the Union of the United States, and admitted as soon as possible, according to the principles of the Federal Constitution, to the enjoyment of all the rights, advantages, and immunities of citizens of the United States."

If this provision were complied with the present bureaucratic government over large areas of our State would be impossible. Is there any reason why people who must live in and do business with the said reservations should be deprived of the same rights and privileges enjoyed by the citizens of the older States, and what reason is there to suppose that forests can not be grown and protected or monopolies prevented under the republican form of government?

The incentive of ownership is necessary to secure the best development of our mineral territory, and we can not expect the best citizenship unless people are permitted to own their own homes, no matter in what business they engage.

The private-owned land in the State is scattered promiscuously amongst the Federal-owned land, and there can be no hope of harmonious action or good feeling through the intermingled double jurisdiction over our territory.

The Government proposes as a landlord to go into almost every kind of business within the State on untaxed property in competition with private owned and taxed property. The public business does not need to pay expenses, but the owner of the private property must pay taxes to make up the loss of his Federal competitor. The Federal Government engaging in business as a proprietor must necessarily occupy a contractual relation with the citizen under which the Government may enforce its contract against the citizen, whereas the citizen may not enforce his contract against the Government.

Under the present administration of the forest reserves the Government acknowledges the moral right of the State to tax the property by returning to the State 25 per cent of the proceeds from sales, rentals, and special privileges. It assumed the right, however, to dictate the disposition of this rebate by decreeing that it shall go to the support of roads and schools—two popular purposes—but ignoring the necessity of the State to protect in the courts the very lives of those living upon Federal-owned property and the necessity for the maintenance of educational, charitable, and penal institutions by the State.

16. The continued withdrawal of our lands and resources from entry and placing them upon a revenue basis to pay royalties into the Federal Treasury means their control by Congress, and that Texas, which never had any public lands, would in the House of Representatives have four times the legislative power over our territory that we ourselves could exert; and that New York, which has no public domain, would have ten times the legislative power over our territory that we ourselves possess, and that, too, without any adequate knowledge of local conditions and necessities.

The double jurisdiction over the territory of the State has led to strong opposition to Federal officials, against whose orders and rules there is no recourse in the courts, and employees of the Federal bureaus defending their position have been constantly doing missionary work in behalf of the general principle of Federal control of our lands and resources. The Forest Service, for instance, through its numerous employees, has been able to enlist the Eastern press in praise of its work and to create a sentiment against the West.

The Federal Constitution declares, "The United States shall guarantee to each State in the Union a republican form of government," not a republican form of government over part of the State but over it all. Certainly no man can contend that a republican form of government exists under the bureaucratic control already in force over a large part of our territory, and sought to be enforced over two-thirds of our area, with its arbitrary rules and regulations enforceable at the pleasure of the bureau with discretionary power, with its natural antagonism to State laws and State control, with a long list of special privileges to enlist support, and with all the evils therefore of a system of favoritism.

"Republicanism and bureaucracy are incompatible existences."—Century Encyclopedia.

Our laws and customs are built upon experience, and our people are better acquainted with local conditions and necessities and more interested in building the State aright than are the people of the East. If there is fear of monopolization, Congress in the act of cession could provide effective means for reversion of title to the State whenever monopoly is attempted. The administration of our public lands and resources should be under the jurisdiction of Secretaries of the Interior and Agriculture, familiar from experience with the local situation, in order that it may be for the settlement of our lands, the development of our institutions, and the betterment of social conditions.

17. We therefore earnestly request, under existing or more appropriate laws, such an administration as will secure the settlement of our public lands and the development of our resources, placing them upon the tax rolls with effective provisions against monopolization and waste. We ask for no advantage or privilege not enjoyed by the older States, but feel we have a right to insist that we be placed on an equal footing in all respects whatsoever with the original States to own and use our lands and resources to build our State and support its government and institutions.

Mr. BRADY presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Idaho, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF IDAHO,
DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

I, Wilfred L. Gifford, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of house joint memorial No. 5, by Koelsch, passed the house March 4, 1913, passed the senate March 8, 1913, which was filed in this office on the 10th day of March, A. D. 1913, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 10th day of March, A. D. 1913, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-seventh.

Secretary of State.

House joint memorial 5.

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Idaho (the Senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States be memorialized as follows:

Whereas from the time of the organization of the Territory of Idaho until it became a State there were numerous Indian wars within its boundaries; and

Whereas a number of the citizens of the Territory of Idaho participated in such wars and have never been paid for their services: Now therefore be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States is hereby requested to take measures by appropriate legislation to cause payment to be made to all those of our citizens who participated in the Indian wars within the boundaries of Idaho while it was a Territory and who have not been paid for such services.

This joint memorial passed the house of representatives on the 4th day of March, 1913.

C. S. FRENCH,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

This joint memorial passed the senate on the 8th day of March, 1913.

HERMAN H. TAYLOR,
President of the Senate.

I hereby certify that the within house joint memorial No. 5 originated in the house of representatives during the twelfth session of the Legislature of the State of Idaho.

[SEAL.] DAVID BURRELL,
Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Mr. BRADY presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Idaho, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF IDAHO,
DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

I, Wilfred L. Gifford, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of senate joint memorial 9, by Fairchild. Passed the senate March 7, 1913. Passed the house March 8, 1913, which was filed in this office on the 10th day of March, A. D. 1913, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 10th day of March, A. D. 1913, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-seventh.

[SEAL.] WILFRED L. GIFFORD,
Secretary of State.

Senate joint memorial 9.

To the honorable, the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent: That—

Whereas the United States military post located near the city of Boise, State of Idaho, known as Boise Barracks is about to be abandoned by the United States for military or Army purposes; and

Whereas the said Boise Barracks by such abandonment would soon assume a dilapidated appearance unless properly maintained at heavy expense to the Government; and

Whereas the State of Idaho is greatly in need of a site at or near its capitol for the establishment of experimental stations whereby the advancement and development of its resources may be aided through scientific research:

We therefore pray that said Boise Barracks be donated to the State of Idaho for such uses and purposes as the legislature of the State may deem proper. The secretary of state of the State of Idaho is instructed to forward copies of this memorial to the House of Representatives of the United States and copies of the same to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

This senate joint memorial passed the senate on the 7th day of March, 1913.

HERMAN H. TAYLOR,
President of the Senate.

This senate joint memorial passed the house of representatives on the 8th day of March, 1913.

C. S. FRENCH,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

I hereby certify that the within senate joint memorial 9 originated in the senate during the twelfth session of the Legislature of the State of Idaho.

[SEAL.] SUMNER C. BROWN,

I, Wilfred L. Gifford, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of house joint memorial No. 8, by Oversmith, passed the house February 21, 1913, passed the senate March 3, 1913, which was filed in this office on the 5th day of March, A. D. 1913, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 6th day of March, A. D. 1913, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-seventh.

[SEAL.] WILFRED L. GIFFORD,
Secretary of State.

House joint memorial 8.

To the honorable the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists the Legislature of the State of Idaho respectfully represent that—

Whereas a large portion of the State of Idaho has been set aside by the United States Government and placed in forest reserves; and

Whereas it is necessary on the part of several counties of the State of Idaho in which a part of the forest reserves are situated to maintain and construct roads and bridges in such forest reserves; and

Whereas the cost of the construction and maintenance of such roads and bridges is a grievous burden upon the taxpayers of said counties and there being no revenue derived by such counties from such forest reserves commensurate with such cost,

We therefore pray and earnestly urge that the Department of the Interior be required to make a thorough investigation of the roads and bridges which should be constructed and maintained in such forest reserves, and a sufficient appropriation be made by the United States for the purpose of building and maintaining all necessary roads and bridges in such forest reserves.

The secretary of state is hereby instructed to forward copies of this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, and copies of the same to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

This memorial passed the house of representatives on the 21st day of February, 1913.

C. S. FRENCH,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

This memorial passed the senate on the 3d day of March, 1913.

I, Wilfred L. Gifford, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true and complete transcript of senate joint memorial No. 7, by Macbeth and Hart, relating to the restoration of Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson—passed the senate February 28, 1913; passed the house March 1, 1913—which was filed in this office on the 4th day of March, A. D. 1913, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 4th day of March, in the year of our Lord 1913, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-seventh.

[SEAL.] WILFRED L. GIFFORD,
Secretary of State.

Senate joint memorial 7.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent, that—

Whereas the members of the twelfth session of the Legislature of the State of Idaho, united by feelings of deepest affection and national bonds to Thomas Jefferson, the author of the Declaration of American Independence, heartily indorse the action of the Jefferson-Monticello Association in endeavoring to restore to a position of national dignity his home, Monticello, where he lived, died, and is buried.

The secretary of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States and copies of the same to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

This senate joint memorial No. 7 passed the senate on the 28th day of February, 1913.

I, Wilfred L. Gifford, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of senate joint memorial No. 5, by Edgington; passed the senate February 26, 1913; passed the house February 26, 1913; which was filed in this office on the 28th day of February, A. D. 1913, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 28th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1912, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-seventh.

[SEAL.] WILFRED L. GIFFORD,
Secretary of State.

Senate joint memorial 5.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represents that—

Whereas agriculture in its various forms is the basis of our national prosperity; and

Whereas, as clearly shown by President Taft's letter of October 11, 1912, directed to the governors of the various States of the Union, there are over 12,000,000 farmers in the United States who raise crops each year of the aggregate value of $8,400,000,000 and are operating upon a borrowed capital of $6,040,000,000, on which yearly interest in the amount of $510,000,000 is paid, the average rate of interest, including commissions and renewal charges, being about 8½ per cent per annum as against 3½ or 4½ per cent paid upon loans of this character in Europe; and

Whereas this economic waste is due to the difficulties surrounding the farmer in borrowing money to pay part of the purchase price of his holdings or improve his land after its acquisition; and

Whereas in both Germany and France, as well as other countries of continental Europe, a system of rural banks has been organized whose object it is to grant loans in the interest of agriculture and that the experience of half a century of operation of this class of banks has demonstrated the benefits derived therefrom by persons engaged in agricultural pursuits, and the soundness of the underlying principles upon which such banks are founded; and

Whereas, in our judgment, this system of banking could be applied in the United States to the great advantage of our people engaged in agricultural pursuits by lessening the difficulties of borrowing money at a low rate of interest and would enable prices to be lowered to the consumer, and thus benefit all of our people; and

Whereas, in order to insure the economical and honest conduct of institutions of this kind, to give proper understanding of their methods and the proper standing to their debentures, National as well as State legislation is needed: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be requested to enact such laws as will permit the organization of national land-mortgage banks, with such privileges only as will necessarily pertain to their effectiveness and the security of those dealing with them, and so guarded and strictly supervised as to protect alike the stockholders and the customers of such banks, with power to guarantee and market guaranteed debenture bonds of State mortgage banks or cooperative credit associations; with such limitations and restrictions as will insure practical uniformity in the laws of the several States in the matter of establishing and carrying on rural credit banks and similar associations.

I, Wilfred L. Gifford, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of senate joint memorial No. 3, by Goodnight, memorializing Congress of the United States to make certain appropriation for completion of the Celilo Canal—passed the senate February 26, 1913; passed the house February 27, 1913—which was filed in this office on the 28th day of February, A. D. 1913, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 28th day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirteen, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-seventh.

[SEAL.] WILFRED L. GIFFORD,
Secretary of State.

Senate joint memorial 3.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, Washington, D. C.:

Whereas the opening of the Panama Canal will bring to the Pacific seaboard a largely increased volume of waterway traffic, necessitating the thorough improvement of our waterways and the enlargement of our harbor and dockage facilities; and

Whereas the Columbia River and its tributaries constitute the greatest inland waterways system of the Pacific coast of America and the second greatest of the Nation; and

Whereas the preeminent importance of this waterway has been recognized by the National Government hitherto by large appropriations, covering its improvement from its mouth inland; and

Whereas one of the great steamship lines of the world, namely, the Hamburg-American Line, has selected the Columbia River as the Pacific coast terminal for its trans-Pacific-Oriental service; and

Whereas the volume of traffic tributary to the Columbia gateway virtually embraces in actual freight carried or directly affected by its water craft the entire coast business, inward and outward, of the Columbia and Snake River basins, a territory almost 250,000 square miles in extent; and

Whereas the full benefits to be obtained from the operation of this waterway can only be secured by its complete and adequate improvement: Therefore

Resolved, That we hereby memorialize the Congress of the United States, at its present session, to appropriate the sum of $1,400,000, to be immediately available, for the completion of the Celilo Canal and the opening of the Columbia and Snake Rivers to free navigation, this sum being, in reality, only an increase of $800,000 over the amount necessary to carry on this work on the continuous-contract basis already in operation.

Resolved, That we urge upon Congress the importance of this appropriation in order to save the net sum of $100,000, according to the estimate of the United States engineers in charge of this work.

Resolved, That the opening of the Celilo Canal and the Columbia and Snake Rivers to free navigation during the year 1915 will stimulate the building of municipal docks, the extension of feeder lines of railway, and the construction of steamboats, barges, etc., essential to the development of a vast traffic territory.

Resolved further, That the completion of these improvements at the time indicated will enable the people of the Pacific Northwest, both American and Canadian, to fittingly celebrate the opening of the Celilo Canal and the Columbia River in conjunction with the international ceremonies in honor of the Panama Canal in 1915, thus giving notice to the world of an all-water route from the ports of the world to the interior of western America and British Columbia.

Senate joint memorial 1.

To the Congress of the United States:

We, the Legislative Assembly of the State of Idaho, respectfully submit the following memorial:

Whereas a bill is now pending before Congress which provides for the leasing of the remaining unappropriated public domain; and

Whereas we believe this bill to be inimical to the best interests of the State; and

Whereas it is necessary for the growth and advancement of this State that the public lands be settled by bona fide homesteaders, your memorialists believe that the leasing of the public domain will result in irreparable injury to the proper development of this State by reason of retarding the freedom of home builders, regardless of any theoretical rights they may be given in and to leased lands: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we, your memorialists, the Legislative Assembly of the State of Idaho, impelled by our interest in the future welfare of our Commonwealth and in the equity and rights of our coming citizenship, do most respectfully urge and petition that the bill providing for the leasing of our public domain be not enacted into law.

This senate joint memorial passed the Senate on the 19th day of February, 1913.

House joint memorial 7.

To the honorable the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent and petition as follows: That—

Whereas, on the 19th day of April, 1911, there was introduced in the National House of Representatives House bill No. 5966, providing for the permanent location of and for the marking and monumenting of the old Oregon Trail, from the Missouri River to the Puget Sound, as a memorial to the brave and hardy pioneers, whose hardships, suffering, and brilliant achievements saved the Oregon country, of which Idaho was a part, to the Union and opened the way for the further development of this vast territory: Now, therefore,

Your memorialists, in the name of and for the people of the State of Idaho and speaking in behalf of all of the people living in the territory traversed by the old Oregon Trail, earnestly and respectfully petition and urge that said House bill No. 5966 be passed by Congress.

The secretary of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward copies of this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States and copies of the same to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

Senate joint memorial 2, memorializing Congress of the United States to transfer 50,000 acres of timbered land now held within the national forests by the United States within the boundaries of the State of Idaho to this State for the purpose of creating a fund for establishing and maintaining good roads in the said State of Idaho.

Be it resolved by the Senate of the State of Idaho (the House concurring), That the Congress of the United States be memorialized as follows:

Whereas good roads are an important factor and one of the great first needs of every State, and also one of the surest means of aiding the material prosperity and advancing the settlement thereof, this being especially true in Idaho, where the country is not thickly populated and where the means of communication between the several parts of the State are not numerous: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States is hereby requested to transfer 50,000 acres of timbered lands from within the national forests now existing and now held by the United States within the boundaries of the State of Idaho to this State for the purpose of creating a fund to be used by the State of Idaho solely for the establishment and maintenance in good repair of a system of public roads within its borders, said selection to be made jointly and agreed upon by the Department of Agriculture and the State land board: Be it further

Resolved, That a certified copy of this memorial be sent to each of the members of the congressional delegation from this State in Congress, with a request that they employ their best efforts to secure action in the premises.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
STATE OF OREGON,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

I, Ben W. Olcott, secretary of state of the State of Oregon and custodian of the seal of said State, do hereby certify that I have carefully compared the annexed copy of senate journal memorial No. 18, with the original thereof filed in the office of the secretary of state of the State of Oregon on the 27th day of February, 1913, and that the same is a full, true, and complete transcript therefrom and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed hereto the seal of the State of Oregon.

Done at the capitol at Salem, Oreg., this 27th day of February, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.]

BEN W. OLCOTT,
Secretary of State.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, in legislative session assembled, respectfully represent that—

Whereas it appears from reliable information that the price of grain bags, wool bags, and jute cloth is excessive and unreasonably high; and

Whereas the jute crop for the year 1912 was as large as that of the year 1907 (the former high-water mark in the production of jute), and that there was carried over from last year several millions of grain bags, thus indicating that a shortage of raw material and reserved manufactured product can not be the cause of the recent high prices for bags; and

Whereas it is reported that the price of jute grain bags, wool bags, and cloth has been unreasonably advanced by a few large corporations and dealers of the Pacific coast brought about by cornering the market and so manipulating the sale thereof that they have been able to force all prices to almost double that paid by consumers in previous years; and

Whereas it is believed these high and exorbitant prices exist by reason of the large corporations on the Pacific coast entering into an illegal combination in restraint of trade and by uslug other artificial means which have enabled them to fix the price of jute grain bags, wool bags, and cloth at an exorbitant and unreasonable price and in violation of the laws of the United States, and thereby forcing the consumers to buy all jute products at a very high, exorbitant, and unreasonable price; and

Whereas it is estimated that the alleged jute bag and cloth trust has completely cornered and controlled the price of jute bags and cloth, enabling the trust to obtain enormous profits, amounting to at least 50 per cent: Be it

Resolved, That your memorialists respectfully and earnestly petition and request the Congress of the United States to thoroughly investigate and probe the grain-bag monopoly existing on the Pacific coast, and should this probe and investigation disclose violation of the Federal laws, the proper officials of the United States be instructed to use all just means to punish such individuals, firms, or corporations participating in any grain-bag monopoly or illegal acts in violation of the Federal laws.

Adopted by the house February 26, 1913.

Senate joint memorial 14.

Whereas Harry Hill and other settlers, known as the "Sherman County Settlers," have suffered great damages by reason of the erroneous restoration to homestead settlement of certain lands in the State of Oregon by the Secretary of the Interior, from which lands said settlers were afterwards ousted as a result of a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, as set forth in the report made by Special Agent Thomas B. Neuhausen, of the Department of the Interior; and

Whereas the honorable Senate of the United States on August 19, 1911, passed an act to adjust the claims of said settlers, and appropriating therefor the sum of $250,000; and

Whereas the Committee on Claims of the honorable House of Representatives of the United States has favorably reported a like bill for the settlement of the claims of said settlers, which is now pending on the Private Calendar of the House of Representatives as No. 123: Be it

Resolved by the senate (the house concurring), That the honorable House of Representatives of the United States is hereby memorialized to pass the said bill for the relief of said settlers, and the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Oregon are hereby urged to use their influence in behalf of the passage of the said bill; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be mailed to the honorable Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States and to each of the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Oregon.

House joint memorial 13.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America:

Whereas the English walnut industry of the United States is of commercial importance inasmuch as the use of walnuts as a food is increasing among the civilized nations faster than that of any other product that the importation of walnuts into this country increased from 11,000,000 pounds in 1902 to 32,000,000 pounds in 1910; and

Whereas your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Oregon, have recognized the importance of the industry in this State by appropriating the sum of $2,000 for a walnut experimental station at McMinnville, Yamhill County, in this State, and the county court of Yamhill County has given 10 acres, or so much as may be needed, of good walnut land for such experimental purposes: Therefore,

We, your memorialists, favor an appropriation of such funds as may be necessary to facilitate this work.

Further, we recommend that the secretary of state be instructed to forward a copy of this memorial to each of our Members in Congress.

Adopted by the house March 4, 1913.

Mr. BRISTOW presented a concurrent resolution adopted by the Legislature of Kansas, which was referred to the Committee on Pensions and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House concurrent resolution 27.

Whereas 12,000 citizens of Kansas served as militia-men during the War of the Rebellion in suppressing Price raid and other warlike invasions and border disturbances; and

Whereas the men so serving were ordered into active service by Gen. Curtis under martial law, and ordered into the State of Missouri in 1864 to repulse the invasion by Gen. Price's army, and they do not now have pensionable status under the United States pension laws, although they rendered valuable and valiant service in the preservation of the Republic: Therefore be it

Resolved by the house (the senate concurring therein), That the Senators and Members of Congress be, and they are hereby, requested to propose and secure the passage of proper legislation by Congress fixing and establishing for such militia-men a pensionable status the same as though they had been regularly mustered into regular service, and allowing to such men suitable pensions; be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the Senators and Members of Congress from this State.

By ———,
Assistant Secretary of State.

Mr. BRISTOW presented a petition of sundry citizens of Conway Springs, Kans., and a petition of sundry citizens of Spring Hill, Kans., praying that an investigation be made into the prosecution of the Appeal to Reason, a socialist newspaper published at Girard, Kans., which were referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Downs, Kans., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation compelling the observance of Sunday as a day of rest in the District of Columbia, which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona presented a joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of Arizona, which was referred to the Committee on Public Health and National Quarantine and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint resolution 1.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of Congress of the United States:

Whereas the statistics prepared by the registrar of vital statistics of the State of Arizona show a serious condition existing within our borders resulting from the immigration from other States to Arizona of people afflicted with tuberculosis, and further show that the number of deaths in Arizona of people afflicted with tuberculosis coming from other States is constantly on the increase, thereby endangering the lives of the people of Arizona; and

Whereas at the present time adequate care of these unfortunate people is impossible without great drain on the State's finances; and

Whereas a movement is now on foot among the executives of several Southwestern States having as its object the setting aside by Congress of certain abandoned military posts in the Western States to be used as sanatoria for the sufferers from tuberculosis: Therefore be it

Resolved by your memorialists, the Senate and House of Representatives of the First Legislature of the State of Arizona, That the Congress of the United States is hereby requested to appoint a committee to investigate conditions in the Southwestern States having in view the setting aside of certain abandoned military reservations to be used as the sites for proposed sanatoria to be established, at Government expense, for the care of tubercular patients, and the making of an adequate appropriation by the Congress of the United States to relieve the present deplorable conditions mentioned above: Be it further

Resolved, That the chief clerk of the house of representatives of the State legislature be instructed to send one copy of this resolution to Hon. MARCUS A. SMITH, Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST, and Hon. CARL HAYDEN; also one copy to the Senate and to the House of Representatives of Congress.

Mr. WARREN presented a memorial of the Legislature of Wyoming, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE STATE OF WYOMING,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of Wyoming, ss:

I, Frank L. Houx, secretary of state of the State of Wyoming, do hereby certify that the following and hereto attached copy of enrolled joint resolution No. 3, House of Representatives, State of Wyoming, has been carefully compared with the original, filed in this office on the 28th day of February, A. D. 1913, and is a full, true, and correct copy of the same and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Wyoming.

Done at Cheyenne, the capital, this 1st day of March, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] FRANK L. HOUX,
Secretary of State.
By F. H. WESCOTT,
Deputy.

Enrolled joint resolution 3.

A joint resolution relating to the refunding of certain moneys now lying in the Treasury of the United States, being paid therein by certain citizens of the United States in attempting to make final proofs on the public domain, and memorializing the Congress of the United States to pass such legislation as may be necessary for the refunding of these moneys to those who have so paid them into the Treasury of the United States, and thereby relieving the distress caused to certain citizens of the United by both denying patent on public lands for different causes and then retaining the money paid, as provided by law, preliminary to perfecting such proofs.

Whereas certain citizens of the United States have filed on portions of the public domain pursuant to the several acts of the Congress of the United States providing for the filing on and for the making of final proof and the securing of patent on the said public domain of the United States so set apart for such purposes; and

Whereas these citizens, in attempting to make final proof previous to perfecting patents on the public domain filed on under the several acts of Congress providing for the securing of patents on the public domain, to wit, under the homestead act, the stone-and-timber act, the desert-land act, and the coal-land act, have been unsuccessful, and for one cause or another have been denied patent; and

Whereas these citizens have paid different sums of money into the Treasury of the United States previous to their attempts to make final proofs, as provided by the acts of the Congress of the United States, and which proofs were unsuccessful and patents were denied; and

Whereas these moneys have never been refunded to the citizens who have so paid them into the Treasury of the United States previous to their unsuccessful attempts to make final proofs; and

Whereas both the failure to secure title to the lands on which these attempts to make final proofs were made and the loss of the moneys so paid into the Treasury of the United States have wrought untold hardship and loss to these citizens: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Legislature of the State of Wyoming, That the Congress of the United States be, and is hereby, memorialized and requested to enact such legislation as may be necessary for the refunding of these moneys so paid into the Treasury of the United States to the citizens so paying them in, and thus relieve the hardship and loss which the withholding of these moneys is causing these citizens; be it further

Resolved, That engrossed copies of this memorial and request be sent to the President of the United States, the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the Secretary of the Interior, asking their aid in bringing the object of this memorial and request before Congress and in securing from same adequate legislation for the purpose herein set forth; and be it further

Resolved, That engrossed copies of this memorial and request be sent to the Senators from Wyoming in the Congress of the United States, viz, Hons. CLARENCE D. CLARK and FRANCIS E. WARREN, and our Representative in said Congress, Hon. FRANK W. MONDELL, asking them to use their best efforts to secure a favorable action upon the request embodied herein.

BIRNEY H. SAGE,
President of the Senate.
MARTIN L. PRATT,
Speaker of the House.

Approved February 28, 1913, at 11 a. m.
JOSEPH M. CAREY, Governor.

Mr. WARREN presented resolutions adopted by Local Union 2312, United Mine Workers of America, of Dietz, Wyo., which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED MINE WORKERS OF AMERICA,
DISTRICT NO. 22,
Dietz, Wyo., March 25, 1913.

To the Hon. Senator FRANCIS E. WARREN, greeting:

At a regular meeting of Dietz Local Union, No. 2312, United Mine Workers of America, at Dietz, Wyo., the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas there is a labor struggle in the State of West Virginia between the union miners and coal operators which has been in existence for the past 11 months; and

Whereas the miners are only demanding a living wage and the right to organize a labor union the same as miners in other States; and

Whereas the coal operators of West Virginia, with the aid of the governor and militia and Baldwin thugs, are doing all in their power to deprive these people of their rights by violation of the Constitution of the State of West Virginia and the United States; and

Whereas they have caused the arrest of Paul J. Paulsen, national board member of district No. 22, United Mine Workers of America, an honored and law abiding citizen of the State of Wyoming with other labor leaders, and placed them in a military bull pen and have denied them the right of being tried by a jury of their peers in the civil courts which are open and accessible: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we ask our Representatives in Congress to take immediate steps to prevent any further persecution of said labor leaders; and be it further

Resolved, That we demand of them to introduce a measure in Congress demanding a thorough investigation into the strike situation in West Virginia; and be it further

Resolved, That we condemn the governor and the judges of the Supreme Court of West Virginia for their actions and unconstitutional decisions rendered toward these men and women; and be it further

Resolved, That we send a copy of these resolutions to our Representatives in Congress, the Hon. Senators F. E. WARREN, C. D. CLARK, and F. W. MONDELL, also to the Wyoming Labor Journal and United Mine Workers Journal for publication.

JOHN MCMANUS,
President.
CHAS. WONTSKY,
Recording Secretary.
GEO. E. BATEMAN.
WM. EYNEN.

Mr. WARREN presented resolutions adopted by Local Union 2335, United Mine Workers of America, of Hanna, Wyo., which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED MINE WORKERS OF AMERICA,
LOCAL UNION NO. 2335,
Hanna, Wyo., March —, 1913.

To the Hon. F. E. WARREN,
United States Senator for Wyoming, Washington, D. C.:

At a regular meeting of Hanna Local Union 2335, United Mine Workers of America, Hanna, Wyo., the following resolutions were unanimously adopted, to wit:

Whereas the mine workers of West Virginia are fighting for their rights, which belong to every free American citizen, namely, the right of free speech, the right to belong to a labor union, and a living wage, whereby they can exist and live as free Americans and not as serfs; and

Whereas the coal barons of West Virginia, with the aid of the governor and militia, are doing all in their power to deprive these people of their rights by violations of the constitution of the State and the United States; and

Whereas they have caused to be arrested Mother Jones, Charles H. Boswell, Charles Battey, also Paul J. Paulson, national board member of our District 22, Wyoming, on some trumped-up charges on account of their activities in behalf of the striking miners of West Virginia, who are fighting to receive what rightfully belongs to them, namely, the right to organize for a living wage and the abolishment of the Siberian methods in that State, which is the guard system; and

Whereas the Supreme Court of West Virginia has refused the rights of these men and woman to a trial by jury, which is theirs by constitutional provisions of that State, and turned them over to the military authorities to have them say what shall be done with them, when they have already declared that they are guilty before they have had a hearing: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we ask the representatives in United States Congress to make a thorough investigation into the mining affairs of West Virginia, and demand for the miners of that State the rights which belong to them, namely, protection, equality, justice, and freedom, which belongs to any civilized people; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to our representatives in Congress, Senators F. E. WARREN, C. D. CLARK, and Congressman F. W. MONDELL, also to the Wyoming Labor Journal and United Mine Workers of America Journal.

GEO. A. BROWN,
JAS. W. CASE,
W. NEIVO,
W. BROWN,
Secretary, Box 342, Hanna, Committee on said Resolutions.

Mr. WARREN presented memorials of sundry citizens of Sheridan, Wyo., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation compelling the observance of Sunday as a day of rest in the District of Columbia, which were referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. ROOT presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of New York, which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

IN ASSEMBLY,
March 10, 1913.

Mr. Cuvillier offered for the consideration of the House a resolution in the words following:

Whereas the State of New York is the Empire State of the Union, the largest in population, and has more commercial business, both import and export, than half the States of the United States, and millions of dollars are paid into the United States Treasury through the customs ports of the State of New York.

Whereas by Executive order, issued by former President Taft, many customs ports of entry in various localities in the State of New York have been abolished, thereby causing the citizens, merchants, and manufacturers of the State of New York greater expense, inconvenience, and loss of time, which will tend to drive out of the State of New York capital for business enterprises into other States.

Resolved (if the senate concur), That it is the sense of the legislature that the customs ports in the State of New York be reestablished as existing before the Executive order issued by former President Taft abolishing said customs ports of entry, and that the Representatives in Congress from the State of New York use their best offices in this direction, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States, the Secretary of the Treasury, and each Representative in Congress from the State of New York.

Mr. Speaker put the question whether the house would agree to said motion and it was determined in the affirmative.

Ordered, That the clerk deliver said resolution to the senate and request their concurrence therein.

MARCH 19, 1913.

The senate returned the concurrent resolution in relation to the Executive order in relation to the customs ports of entry with a message that they have concurred in the passage of the same without amendment.

STATE OF NEW YORK,
County of Albany, Office of the Clerk of the Assembly, ss:

I, George R. Van Namee, clerk of the assembly, do hereby certify that I have compared the foregoing record of proceedings of the assembly of March 10 and 19, 1913, relative to the resolution therein set forth with the original thereof, as contained in the original official copy of the journal of proceedings of the assembly of said dates, and that the same is a true and correct transcript of said journal of proceedings in so far as the same relates to said resolution and of the whole thereof.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand this 27th day of March, 1913.

[SEAL.] GEORGE R. VAN NAMEE,
Clerk of the Assembly.

Mr. ROOT presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of New York, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

IN ASSEMBLY,
February 10, 1913.

Mr. Cuvillier offered for the consideration of the house a resolution in the words following:

Whereas by reason of the establishment of the parcel post and the increase of the United States mail, the letter carriers are compelled to work longer, and their compensation is unequal in proportion to similar work of other public employees, and they are not subject to pensions after long and faithful service, though they are required to be men of the highest character, and they are exposed to the elements; and

Whereas it is the duty of the United States to protect these faithful employees, in better compensation and a future maintenance in the way of pensions after long service.

Resolved (if the senate concur), That it is the sense of the legislature that the Congress should do all in its power to increase their compensation and provide a pension for the letter carriers, the same as provided for other faithful public servants in other departments of Government; and be it further

Resolved (if the senate concur), That our Representatives in Congress use their best endeavor in behalf of the betterment of letter carriers of the United States; and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Postmaster General and the Representatives in Congress from the State of New York.

Said resolution giving rise to debate, ordered that the same be laid upon the table.

FEBRUARY 17, 1913.

By unanimous consent Mr. Cuvillier called up his resolution in relation to the pay of letter carriers and the parcel post.

Debate was had thereon.

Mr. Speaker put the question whether the house would agree to said resolution, and it was determined in the affirmative.

Ordered, That the clerk deliver said resolution to the senate and request their concurrence therein.

FEBRUARY 18, 1913.

The senate returned the concurrent resolution in relation to pay of letter carriers and the parcel post with a message that they have concurred in the passage of the same without amendment.

STATE OF NEW YORK,
County of Albany, Office of the Clerk of the Assembly, ss:

I, George R. Van Namee, clerk of the assembly, do hereby certify that I have compared the foregoing record of proceedings of the assembly of February 10, 17, and 18, 1913, relative to the resolution therein set forth with the original thereof, and that the same is a true transcript of said proceedings so far as the same relates to said resolution and of the whole thereof.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand this 24th day of February, 1913.

[SEAL.] GEORGE R. VAN NAMEE,
Clerk of the Assembly.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I do not wish to object, and I am not sure that I am correct, but I find upon page 11 of the Standing Rules of the Senate that on August 10, 1888, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That after to-day, unless otherwise ordered, the morning hour shall terminate at the expiration of two hours after the meeting of the Senate.

The Senate having met at 12 o'clock to-day, I desire to inquire whether morning business is now in order, not that I intend to object; but if it is not in order, I do not want this proceeding to pass as a precedent?

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. We have been proceeding by unanimous consent.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, unquestionably the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BRANDEGEE] is right, and so that we may now present morning business, I ask unanimous consent that morning business be now received.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

COMMITTEE ON THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. SWANSON. On behalf of the senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. SMITH], who is unavoidably detained from the Senate, I introduce three Senate resolutions, which I send to the desk.

Mr. SWANSON (for Mr. SMITH of Maryland) submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 26), which was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on the District of Columbia, or any subcommittee thereof, be authorized to send for persons and papers and to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee; that the committee may sit during the sessions or recesses of the Senate, and that the expense thereof be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

Mr. SWANSON (for Mr. SMITH of Maryland) submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 28), which was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the authority heretofore vested in the Committee on the District of Columbia by Senate resolution of February 20, 1909, directing the said committee to examine into matters relating to the District of Columbia, is hereby continued, and the said committee is hereby directed to pursue its investigations during the Sixty-third Congress.

Mr. SWANSON (for Mr. SMITH of Maryland) submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 27), which was read and referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved, That authority is granted to print and bind, for the use of the Committee on the District of Columbia, such papers and documents as may be deemed necessary in connection with subjects heretofore considered or to be considered by said committee during the Sixty-third Congress.

FRED N. WEBBER.

Mr. BRADLEY submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 29), which was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to pay, out of the contingent fund of the Senate, to Fred N. Webber, jr., son of Fred N. Webber, sr., deceased, late a Senate policeman, a sum equal to six months' salary at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered as including funeral expenses and all other allowances.

PROTECTION AND PRESERVATION OF BIRDS.

Mr. McLEAN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 25), which was read and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Resolved, That the President be requested to propose to the Governments of other countries the negotiation of a convention for the mutual protection and preservation of birds.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—JOINT ASSEMBLY TO-MORROW.

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution providing that the two Houses of Congress shall assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives on Tuesday, the 8th day of April, 1913, at 12.30 o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose of receiving such communications as the President of the United States shall be pleased to make to them, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the resolution just received from the House of Representatives.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives, which will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
April 7, 1913.

House concurrent resolution 1.

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the two Houses of Congress shall assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives on Tuesday, the 8th day of April, 1913, at 12.30 o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose of receiving such communications as the President of the United States shall be pleased to make to them.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the House resolution.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I take it the resolution is open to debate. I have no intention whatever of opposing the resolution, but it is such an interesting reversion to an earlier system of transacting public business that I can not refrain from calling attention to it.

It is well known to everyone, of course, that under the administrations of Washington and Adams it was the practice for the President to come either to the Hall of the Senate or to the Hall of the House and deliver his annual message in person. It was then the practice for the Congress to adopt an address in reply to the message and carry that address themselves to the residence of the President and present it to him. The custom or form was borrowed from England, where, as a rule, the King or the Queen opens the Parliament in person, and an address is then adopted by the Houses in reply.

That went on during those 12 years and was the subject of much animadversion by the opposition of those days, who looked upon it as another attempt of the Federalists to introduce monarchical customs; and it was much assailed by the opposition, who were then called anti-Federalists, or Republicans. I do not think the danger of its producing a return to monarchical forms is perhaps as evident to-day as it was then, but there was a great deal made of it.

When Mr. Jefferson was elected he altered this custom once for all, and we have always adhered to the Jeffersonian change. I suppose Mr. Jefferson possibly had the feeling in regard to it that was expressed by his followers, and I think he was not, as a rule, much given to speech making. At all events, he addressed a letter to the President of the Senate on the 8th of December, 1801, in which he said:

SIR: The circumstances under which we find ourselves at this place, rendering inconvenient the mode heretofore practiced of making by personal address the first communications between the legislative and executive branches, I have adopted that by message, as used on all subsequent occasions through the session. In doing this I have had principal regard to the convenience of the legislature, to the economy of their time, to their relief from the embarrassment of immediate answers on subjects not yet fully before them, and to the benefits thence resulting to the public affairs. Trusting that a procedure founded in these motives will meet their approbation, I beg leave, through you, sir, to communicate the inclosed message, with the documents accompanying it, to the honorable the Senate, and pray you to accept for yourself and them the homage of my high respect and consideration.

A little later in the month, on the 20th of December, in writing to a friend in Philadelphia, Dr. Benjamin Rush, he said:

By sending a message instead of making a speech at the opening of the session I have prevented the bloody conflict to which the making an answer would have committed them. They consequently were able to set into real business at once, without losing 10 or 12 days in combating an answer.

I do not know, Mr. President, whether it is the plan of this reversion to the earlier and very dignified Federalist procedure to continue it and make an address in reply to the personally delivered message. It seems to me it would be very appropriate to do so. But Mr. Jefferson's change was accepted by the country, and has been followed from that day to this. I do not recall at this moment but one adverse comment after it had once gone into effect; and that, curiously enough, proceeded from John Randolph, who stated on one occasion—I do not remember the exact day, and I do not give his exact words, but the substance of them—that he thought it very unfortunate that the old plan of the President coming and delivering his message in person, and the Houses then adopting an address, had been abandoned, because, he said, the consideration of the message and the adoption of the address gave such an excellent opportunity to review what had been done and to comment and criticize the message; and it seemed to him that it was a great pity to have it given up.

I do not know, Mr. President, whether it is proposed to follow up the personal delivery of the message with an address or not. I wish to call attention to it, however, simply to point out that the President, in coming to Congress and personally delivering his address, is only half carrying out the old practice, in behalf of which, I think, much can be said. I have no objection whatever, of course, to the resolution, and I shall be very glad to have it adopted.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I for one very much regret that the President has chosen to take this course. Of course, whether this course be pursued or not, it is not going materially to affect the legislative interests of the American people. But the old Federalist custom in imitation of the English custom of making "speeches from the throne," when it was once disused, fell by unanimous consent into subsequent constant disuse and ridicule; and it did it because the common sense underlying the method of sending a written communication to Congress was obvious and plain to everybody, and because of the fact that it was so much more in accord with American republican institutions than the old observance, with its pomposities and its cavalcadings, had been. It was not without reason, therefore, that Mr. Jefferson's example was subsequently imitated by every President, whether Democrat, Whig, Republican, or what not, I for one hope that this will be the only instance of the breach of the perfectly simple and perfectly republican method which he introduced.

Like the Senator from Massachusetts, I shall not oppose the resolution. The President is acting both within his right and within his power, and it would be discourteous to oppose it. He has a perfect right to "communicate with Congress" in either way—either by word of mouth or by written message.

But I do express my regret that the old Federalistic procedure should be revamped; and I rather envy the happiness with which the Senator from Massachusetts can recur to it as perhaps a long-deferred and unexpected Democratic approbation of a custom which originated upon the other side of this Chamber with the Federalist Party, of which the present-day "standpat" Republican Party is a lineal political descendant, and which received Democratic disapprobation and was covered with deserved ridicule by Democrats and Republicans to an extent much greater even than the Senator from Massachusetts has expressed to-day.

Even the change to Democratic-Republican legislation and measures perhaps did not do as much toward democratizing this Republic at that time as did doing away with the levees, the receptions by the Presidents standing on a raised dais, with cocked hat and sword and other frumperies, and "the speeches from the throne," and the cavalcadings of Congress down to the President's House, and all the balance of the little cheap and tawdry and tinsel imitations of British monarchical customs.

I had hoped, upon the contrary, that some President at some time would be bold enough and brave enough to do away with inaugural processions. They, too, are a cheap and tinsel imitation of British coronation procedure. They do nobody any good. Some few people catch pneumonia every year at it; a lot more are discommoded in every way. It may fill up the Washington boarding houses and hotels for a little while and lead to a little quickening of trade, especially in the barrooms. But it seems to me that instead of going back to the old thing we should have gone further in the new direction. The more we can simplify the machinery of this Government in every way the more, in my mind, at any rate, is it in keeping with the American spirit and American institutions.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, it affords me personally great delight to adjourn the Senate for a short while to go into the House of Representatives as a body to hear the President deliver his message to Congress. As the Senator from Mississippi says, it is an innovation on long-established customs; but that, perhaps, is not of much moment. I am ready to go to the House of Representatives and hear the President deliver his message in person, which I am sure will be far more impressive than if it should be read by one of the clerks at this desk, although the clerk who will read it has, we know, fine capacity as a reader. But I rise particularly to make a parliamentary inquiry of the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. STONE. I find in clause 5 of Rule XIV, what I read:

All resolutions shall lie over one day for consideration, unless by unanimous consent the Senate shall otherwise direct.

Now, Mr. President, desirous as I am and happy as I would be to vote for this resolution and take part in carrying it out, I submit to the Chair whether it can be considered at this time. As this is a body governed by rules long established, I am not sure, sir, that this rule governs in this particular instance, but being a body that is controlled by rules that govern it, I submit to the Chair the question whether we can now take up the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair rules that it is a question of the highest privilege, involving the right of this body to attend a joint session of Congress in the Hall of the House of Representatives, and that the resolution is in order.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, just to keep the RECORD straight, do I understand the Chair rules that if any Senator objected the resolution would not have to go over for the day?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair so rules.

Mr. SMOOT. Just for the RECORD, because I want the resolution to pass and am ready to vote for it, I will say that in my judgment——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair rules that this is a question of the highest privilege, to which the rule does not apply.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course I can not agree to that opinion, but that makes no difference whatever, because it is only for the RECORD that I refer to it.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, if the question were whether the President should come in person or whether he should send a message in writing of course there would be ample latitude for debate, and I am not sure but what I would agree with what has been said by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], but it is the constitutional right of the President to communicate with Congress in such a way as he may himself elect, and it is not for us to determine in what manner he shall do so. Having communicated to us formally the fact that he proposes to deliver his communication in person, there is nothing left for us but to arrange to receive him and also to receive his message with due solemnity and formality.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I believe that an objection to the consideration of this resolution would, under the rule, send it over. No one has made that objection, and no one will probably make it. I agree with my friend, the Senator from Georgia, that since the President has indicated his wish to communicate to Congress in this way, we should conform to it. I am of the opinion that under the rules of the Senate the resolution should go over, except by unanimous consent. I rise to ask unanimous consent that the resolution be now considered.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, if the Chair will pardon me, I think the Chair is right in its ruling, and that therefore the request for unanimous consent should not be submitted to the Senate unless that ruling should be reversed.

I will frankly say to the Senator that the original information received, at least by some of us, was that there would be a resolution inviting the President to deliver his address in person. If that had been the resolution, it would not be a privileged resolution, but anything which relates to the action of the body itself as to what the body itself shall do—not what it shall prescribe for others, but what it shall itself do—is necessarily a matter of privilege. This is a question as to the voluntary action of the body. There is a wide distinction between that and other resolutions which seek to have the effect of law, either as a joint resolution or in the shape of a concurrent resolution, if it is for the purpose of having an effect upon some one else. Anything which relates to the action of the body itself must necessarily be a privileged resolution.

Mr. STONE. I ask the Senator from Georgia, if he will pardon me, if he is of the opinion that under the rule I read this resolution would, in the ordinary course of the business of the Senate, go over?

Mr. BACON. I think if it related to a matter which is not privileged it would certainly go over.

Mr. STONE. What is the privileged matter?

Mr. BACON. The privileged matter is the determination of the body as to its own act.

Mr. STONE. Everything the Senate does is its own act.

Mr. BACON. It is true that it is its own act, but this is a resolution as to what shall be its act.

Mr. STONE. But that is true in every case, I assume.

Mr. BACON. Oh, no; we pass resolutions continuously which prescribe what shall be the act of others. This is a prescription as to what we shall do ourselves.

Mr. STONE. But this is a rule that governs the action of the Senate itself.

Mr. BACON. And that, I think, makes it privileged.

Mr. STONE. And the rule determines what the action of the Senate shall be, unless the rule is set aside. We find a rule that certain things shall be done in a given case, and I insist that that rule controls the action of the Senate unless it is obviated by consent or in some other way.

Mr. BACON. Anything which is privileged is not involved in that rule. I think that is a plain proposition, as the Senator will see.

Mr. STONE. There is no objection to it; I see no privilege to it; and hence my request. I care nothing about the resolution, except to preserve the orderly procedure of this body. I shall vote for the resolution, but I do not care to have the rules of this body set aside arbitrarily to please even the President of the United States or the House of Representatives. Hence, I say it ought to be done by some action of this body in the form of unanimous consent, and there will be no objection to it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair has ruled upon this question. The Chair does not pretend now and will not pretend at any future time to be right, and there is always an appeal from the decision of the Chair to the Senate.

Mr. STONE. What is the ruling of the Chair?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The ruling is that the resolution is in order.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, if the request for unanimous consent were put by the Chair, I certainly should not object. I most assuredly shall vote for the resolution. It lies wholly with the President to determine as to what method he prefers to communicate with the Houses. But I think I must enter a protest at least against the parliamentary question which has arisen. I confess I am astounded at the argument of my friend from Georgia [Mr. BACON]. The rule is that—

> All resolutions shall lie over one day for consideration unless by unanimous consent the Senate shall otherwise direct.

Mr. BACON. I should like to ask the Senator a question.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. LODGE. Certainly.

Mr. BACON. I will ask the Senator this question: Suppose there were a resolution, Resolved, That when the Senate adjourns to-day it shall adjourn to meet to-morrow at 10 o'clock. That would be a resolution of high privilege. It would be a resolution which related to the action of the body, and certainly it would not go over to another day.

Mr. SMOOT. On objection?

Mr. BACON. Never.

Mr. LODGE. If it were a resolution, it could be objected to, unless privileged. If put in the form of a motion, it is a privileged motion, and it is so defined by the rules. It is to adjourn to a day certain. The word "resolution" does not alter it; it is a motion.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President——

Mr. LODGE. One moment, if I may be allowed to continue. There can be no possible privilege attached to a concurrent resolution sent here by the House. There is no higher duty performed by Congress than the counting and the declaration of the electoral votes. I have seen that resolution come here time after time and it always has gone over for consideration. Certainly nothing affecting Congress can be more important than a resolution to adjourn Congress without day. Such a resolution has come over here and it has been kept here day after day in order that the Senate might ascertain the state of public business and determine whether it could assent to the proposition of the House.

The fact that this is a concurrent resolution of the House gives it no privilege. The fact that it concerns the action of the Senate gives it no privilege unless that privilege is set forth in the rule. Everything we do here affects our own action. Everything we do by resolution or order or motion is certainly not privileged.

Mr. President, it seems to me perfectly clear that the Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE] is absolutely and unquestionably right, and that we can not attach a privilege to this resolution without any word of definition in the rules or anything to indicate that it has the slightest character of privilege.

I have no desire to take an appeal from the ruling of the Chair, but I do desire at least to put myself on record, with a view to possible questions in the future, as saying that a resolution of this character does not have any privileged quality and that action on it can not be compelled unless it has gone over one day; I mean, of course, without unanimous consent.

Mr. BACON. I understand the proposition of the Senator to be that if this were a motion it would be privileged.

Mr. LODGE. Oh, no; I made no such statement. As the illustration of adjournment was used, I said that a resolution that when the Senate adjourns it shall adjourn to meet to-morrow at 10 o'clock is not privileged because it is a resolution; it is privileged because it is made privileged by the rule. It makes no difference whether you put it in the form of a resolution or a motion, the essence of it is a motion to adjourn to a day certain, and the motion to adjourn to a day and an hour certain is, of course, a privileged motion, as stated in the rule.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Mr. President, I think the ruling of the Chair is entirely proper and is sustained by the precedents of the Senate, but not particularly on the ground announced by the Chair that the resolution is privileged. There may be some room for rational dispute there. I hold to the view that it is not privileged, because I do not think the President of the United States can command the two Houses to meet together in joint assembly or to do anything except in the instances pointed out by the Constitution or agreed upon by a system of joint rules. I do not think anybody can control the deliberations of either House of Congress. It is a matter of high courtesy, and it almost partakes of the nature of a privilege, when the President of the United States makes a request to do a thing which necessarily involves a joint assembly.

But I think the ruling of the Chair is in accordance with the undisputed precedents of the Senate, because it has been held that our rule requiring that a resolution shall go over for a day upon objection applies only to Senate resolutions and not resolutions coming from the other House. I could give the precedents on this subject if I had time to look them up and if it was a material matter.

Mr. LODGE. I am open to conviction. If the Senator will point to those precedents, I am ready to be convinced.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I have not readily at hand a copy of the precedents as collected by Mr. Gilfry. I remember, however, that that is the case.

Mr. LODGE. I mean precedents showing that this is a privileged matter.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. No; I do not insist upon that. I say that our rule requiring resolutions to go over for a day applies to resolutions that originate in the Senate and does not apply to resolutions coming from the other House. They are laid before the Senate by the Presiding Officer under another rule, and having been laid before the Senate, they are open to immediate consideration.

Mr. LODGE. Of course that can only be true in the case of a concurrent resolution. Joint resolutions are provided for by another rule, which requires them to take a first and a second reading, and one objection will carry them over two days.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I understand.

Mr. LODGE. Therefore it applies only to concurrent resolutions.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. This is a concurrent resolution. It is not a resolution which requires the approval of the President.

Mr. LODGE. And being one, does it make the resolution privileged?

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I am having nothing to do with the particular feature of the discussion which deals with the question whether or not it is a privileged resolution. I simply say that it is a House resolution, and under the precedents here it is not vulnerable to the rule that has been invoked by the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. STONE. I am not invoking the rule with the idea of preventing action. I am invoking the rule simply with a view to the orderly proceeding of the Senate, and hence it was that I asked unanimous consent to consider the resolution now, for which I will vote.

Mr. SMOOT. I think the rule the Senator from Arkansas referred to is Rule VII, paragraph 6, which reads as follows:

6. The Presiding Officer may at any time lay, and it shall be in order at any time for a Senator to move to lay, before the Senate, any bill or other matter sent to the Senate by the President or the House of Representatives, and any question pending at that time shall be suspended for this purpose. Any motion so made shall be determined without debate.

It is the practice of the Senate, I will say, that bills and resolutions coming from the House are presented oftentimes in the midst of the business of the Senate. The Presiding Officer will ask that the Senator speaking shall suspend that the Chair may lay before the Senate certain messages from the House of Representatives. But that does not give the right of immediate action upon those bills or resolutions. They go to the committee to which they should be referred, and are reported back from the committee to the Senate in due course of time. If when a resolution which came from the House was handed down to the Senate there was an objection to its consideration, I have never known an instance where it did not go to the committee or go over for one day. I can not see but that the Senator from Missouri is absolutely right, as I said in the beginning, in this matter.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah will permit the Chair to read what took place in the Senate:

The Vice President—

Mr. Hobart—

laid before the Senate for its consideration the resolution of the House of Representatives providing for the final adjournment of the two Houses of Congress at 9 o'clock p. m. this day—when Mr. Morgan objected to the consideration of the resolution and raised a point of order, viz, that objection having been made the resolution, under clause 5, Rule XIV, must lie over one day for consideration.

July 24, 1897—

The Vice President overruled the question of order and decided that the resolution, which provided for an adjournment of Congress, was a question of privilege and that the provision of Rule XIV was not applicable thereto.

From the decision of the Chair Mr. Allen appealed to the Senate; when, on motion of Mr. Aldrich that the appeal lie on the table, it was determined in the affirmative—yeas 36, nays 20.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, I had hoped that some one who has been in this body longer than I would say something in relation to the policy, which seems to be questioned, of the President coming personally for the purpose of addressing the House and the Senate. I want to say this custom is not a new one, although it has been discarded for some time in the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States. Every governor of a State goes to both houses of the legislature and addresses them in person. Why does he do it? Because by so doing he impresses upon them the importance of the matter which he has to present to them.

Of course, it is something of considerable moment when an extraordinary session of Congress is called, an extraordinary occasion requiring the bringing of Senators and Representatives to Washington for the purpose of determining great political questions. When that has been done, is it possible that the President of the United States should not come here in order to impress his views upon the Members of the Senate and of the House? Ordinarily, when a President's message is read, who pays any attention to it? I have been a Member of the other House, and I have found that on many occasions, instead of Members of that body listening to the reading of such a message, they either had a pamphlet copy in their own hands, which they would partially read, or else they would simply walk out of the Chamber.

Very few messages indeed receive the strict attention which our Chief Executives hope they will receive. Consequently, when we consider the occasion, when we consider the fact that whatever the President has to say ought to be listened to, we can readily conclude that it is important that the President should deliver his message in person.

Though we find that a custom of a similar nature prevails in another nation, a monarchy, I do not see that this should deter our Chief Executive from using that means of bringing to the attention of the Congress of the United States the facts or reasons which he desires to impress upon its Members. It is democratic in the extreme, because it brings the President in personal contact with both Houses of Congress. When that occurs it should produce harmony, not discord.

For these reasons, it seems to me, it is a custom which, though it has been in disuse for some time with ill reason, in my judgment, should be renewed and revived in the interest of good government.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, the precedent which the Chair read to the Senate I think I recall—I was in the Senate at the time, and I have no doubt I was one of those who voted to lay the appeal on the table—was a motion to adjourn; in substance, a motion to adjourn on that day, and a single objection carrying it over would, of course, have destroyed the motion. I do not think that is quite parallel to this case, and I am still unable to see that any privilege attaches to it or that the fact that it comes from the other House gives it any privilege.

I do not, however, care to protract the debate, Mr. President, but I want to say that I trust the Senator from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH] did not imagine that in what I was saying there was any intention of criticizing the reversion to the practices of the first two administrations, which were abandoned 112 years ago. On the contrary, I have always had great admiration for those two Presidents and their methods; and it has interested me very much to hear renewed on the floor here to-day the old Federalist arguments about the dignity and the impressiveness of the President personally appearing before Congress.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, I desire to inquire if the Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE] withdrew his request for unanimous consent?

Mr. STONE. The request for unanimous consent, as I understood, was determined by the ruling of the Chair that this was a question of privilege in the opinion of the Chair, and should be submitted without regard to the question of unanimous consent.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Then, there is no request for unanimous consent pending at the present time, as I understand it, Mr. President?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair so understands.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, as I understand, this resolution was introduced and the question was raised as to whether or not it was in order. The President of the Senate ruled that it was in order, and from that ruling there has been no appeal. It seems to me that all this discussion has been out of order, and I now move the previous question. [Laughter.]

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President——

Mr. THOMAS. If that motion requires a second, I desire to second it.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I think, as we are changing the rules of the Senate so rapidly, perhaps it would be as well to add the previous question to-day.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the concurrent resolution.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas subsequently said (after the transaction of certain routine business which appears under its appropriate heading): Mr. President, I desire to present to the Senate an authority that I referred to in the few remarks I submitted on the general question, but which I did not have at hand at that time. I referred to what took place in the Senate in the Forty-third Congress December 18, 1873. An epitome of the proceeding is reported in Gilfry's Precedents at page 364, and is as follows:

The President pro tempore laid before the Senate the following resolution received this day from the House of Representatives:

"Resolved, That when the two Houses adjourn on Friday, the 19th instant, they shall stand adjourned until Monday, the 5th of January next."

Mr. Edmunds objected to its consideration this day, and made the point of order that, being objected to under the twenty-sixth rule of the Senate, the resolution must lie over one day for consideration.

The President pro tempore (Matt H. Carpenter) overruled the point of order raised by Mr. Edmunds, on the ground that the twenty-sixth rule applied only to resolutions of the Senate; but that in the present case, being a resolution of the House of Representatives sent to the Senate for its concurrence, and having been laid before the Senate by the Chair, it was for the Senate to make of it what disposition it thought proper.

Mr. STONE. Which was the twenty-sixth rule?

Mr. LODGE. The same rule.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. The same rule which the Senator from Missouri invoked, or at least to which he called attention.

I agreed most cordially with those who insisted that the resolution received from the House of Representatives, inviting the Senate to join that body in joint convention on to-morrow for the purpose of hearing the President's message read by himself, should be passed at once. I did not quite understand, however, why it should be deemed a privileged resolution, and without determining in my own mind whether it was or not I saw a perfectly plain and parliamentary way by which it could be considered at this time. I wanted to set myself straight, and to say that if I was wrong about this I was misled by a precedent made in the Senate and in which the Senate at the time acquiesced.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I asked the Senator from Arkansas to produce a precedent and he has done so. The ruling of Mr. Carpenter, who was a very able Senator and a very able parliamentarian, is confined simply to the point that the rule in question does not cover anything except Senate resolutions.

I am not prepared immediately to admit that that ruling is a sound one. I think it is open to considerable question. But I do believe in the great principle here of stare decisis, so far as we can follow it; and I am very glad that the Senator from Arkansas disclaimed the proposition that this was privileged, because that, I think, would open the door to a great many very dangerous precedents.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I desire to say that when I raised the question I had no thought, and I think I said so at the time, of in any way objecting to the consideration of the resolution or to its adoption. I believed that this being a body governed by its own rules as to its procedure, it should adhere to them. I desired the resolution considered, and hence asked unanimous consent, thinking that that was the orderly and proper way to proceed.

My friend from Arkansas presents a precedent which the Senator from Massachusetts says would seem to confirm the view of the Chair that it was in order to submit it, notwithstanding the rule of the Senate to which I called attention. I acquiesced at the time. I did not appeal from the decision of the Chair. I accepted it.

All I desire to say is, that in what I said and did I had but one object in view—that was that the rules of the Senate might be absolutely observed. I accept the ruling of the Chair and support it, particularly in view of the authorities cited by the Chair itself and by the Senator from Arkansas, without having had opportunity to examine them.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, April 8, 1913, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, April 7, 1913.

This being the day fixed in the proclamation of the President for the assembling of the first session of the Sixty-third Congress, the Clerk of the last House, Mr. South Trimble, called the House to order at 12 o'clock m.

The Chaplain of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-second Congress, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou, who art the life and light of men, the inspiration of every generous impulse, high resolve, and noble endeavor, we thank Thee for the sublime heights reached and kept by our fathers in a Government whose foundations were laid in the inherent rights of men—life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness—which has come down to us multiplied a thousandfold in all that makes a nation great. Impress us, we beseech Thee, with the great responsibility it brings to us as individuals and as a people, that we may keep inviolate its sacred principles and march on to greater attainments. Let Thy spirit brood over the deliberations of the Congress now convened; fire the hearts of these Representatives with patriotic zeal and fervor; strengthen the hands of the Speaker of this House, that he may guide through all the intricate problems which may arise to the highest and best results, that the fruits of its labors may be to the good of all classes and conditions of our people.

Imbue our judiciary with wisdom, that their judgments may be true and righteous altogether.

Bless, guide, and protect the President of these United States and his advisors, that the interests of the Nation may be advanced at home and abroad; and thus may the coordinate branches of our Republic work together in harmony with Thee, that truth, justice, mercy, and righteousness may have their full fruition in a land of peace and plenty under the spiritual leadership of the Prince of Peace; and glory and honor and praise be Thine, O God our Father. Amen.

PROCLAMATION OF THE PRESIDENT.

The CLERK. The President's proclamation convening the extra session of Congress will now be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES—A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas public interests require that the Congress of the United States should be convened in extra session at 12 o'clock noon on the 7th day of April, 1913, to receive such communication as may be made by the Executive:

Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the Congress of the United States to convene in extra session at the Capitol in the city of Washington on the 7th day of April, 1913, at 12 o'clock noon, of which all persons who shall at that time be entitled to act as Members thereof are hereby required to take notice.

Given under my hand and the seal of the United States of America the 17th day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirteen, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and thirty-seventh.

[SEAL.] WOODROW WILSON.

By the President:

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN,
Secretary of State.

The CLERK. Four hundred and eight Members have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

CHANGES IN MEMBERSHIP.

The CLERK. The following statement showing the changes that have occurred since the regular election of Members of the Sixty-third Congress is presented for the information of the House: Hon. GEORGE S. LEGARE, first South Carolina district, died January 31, 1913; Hon. ALBERT SIDNEY BURLESON, tenth Texas district, appointed Postmaster General; Hon. MORRIS SHEPPARD, first Texas district, elected to United States Senate; Hon. JOHN WINGATE WEEKS, twelfth Massachusetts district, elected to United States Senate.

ELECTION OF SPEAKER.

The CLERK. The next business is the nomination and election of a Speaker.

Mr. PALMER. Two years ago, at the beginning of the Sixty-second Congress, when the House of Representatives had chosen its Speaker, he was presented to the Members by the minority leader in these words:

It is a great office, filled by a great man.

During his term in that office, the judgment of the American people has freely confirmed the high opinion which was then so generously expressed. He has filled that great office to the last inch of its specifications, to the credit of himself, to the honor of his party, and to the glory of our common country. [Applause.]

In his two years' service in the Speakership he has maintained what he had long ago won—the respect, the confidence, indeed the affection of the entire Nation. [Applause.] I am sure I voice the opinion of Democrats everywhere when I say that to his patriotic course in the conduct of that high office was due in large degree the people's confidence in his party which resulted in our great victory last November. [Applause on the Democratic side.] On behalf, therefore, of the Democratic Members of the House of Representatives, by the authority and direction of the unanimous action of the Democratic caucus, in the name of a grateful party in the Nation, I nominate for Speaker Hon. CHAMP CLARK, of Missouri. [Applause.]

The CLERK. Hon. CHAMP CLARK, of Missouri, has been placed in nomination. Are there further nominations?

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Two years ago the Republicans of this House nominated for Speaker the Hon. JAMES R. MANN, of Illinois. [Applause.] I shall not at this time enter upon any eulogy of the party to which I belong. Its record has been made, and it will stand for the past and for the future. [Applause on the Republican side.] Nor shall I attempt to eulogize the candidate for Speaker whom we named two years ago. His record was made in this House before he was nominated for Speaker, and in his service as minority leader in the Sixty-second Congress he lived up to that record to the gratification of Republicans and Democrats alike. [Applause.] He has won a high place in the hearts of the American people. By direction of the Republican caucus I place in nomination as the choice of the Republican Members of this House the name of the Hon. JAMES R. MANN, Member elect from Illinois, as their candidate for Speaker of the Sixty-third Congress. [Applause.]

The CLERK. Hon. JAMES R. MANN, of Illinois, has been placed in nomination. Are there further nominations?

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Clerk and gentlemen of the House of Representatives, I have been commissioned to announce the organization and appearance of a new party in the American Congress. This party was born of the Nation's awakened sense of justice. Its principles are embodied in the Progressive national platform adopted at Chicago on August 7, 1912. The great purposes of its existence are to establish and maintain the actual and absolute rule of the people under representative forms of government [applause]; to eradicate and banish bossism forever from American public life; to create and foster social and industrial justice among all classes of our people; to create a nonpartisan tariff commission for the purpose of taking the tariff out of politics and placing it where it belongs—upon a scientific, nonpolitical basis; to establish an administrative commission to supervise industrial corporations engaged in interstate commerce as the Interstate Commerce Commission now supervises railways; to divorce big business from corrupt politics and subject corporate management to the same rules of legal discipline that govern the conduct of private citizens; to destroy sectionalism and promote political fraternity in the Nation by offering to all the voters of the land, men and women alike, from North, East, South, and West, a platform of principles and a medium of political expression that will be acceptable to them, and to re-create in the hearts of our fellow citizens everywhere love and veneration for early Democratic and early Republican ideals, to the end that "government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

Again I wish to announce that we Progressives are not organized in this House for mere purposes of antagonism and obstruction. We have a definite program of our own, and we shall use every legitimate effort to accomplish its purposes. We shall inaugurate legislation in this body through measures embodying the principles of our national platform. We shall ask Democrats and Republicans to assist us in the passage of these bills, and we will invoke the wrath of the American people upon their heads if they fail to do so. [Laughter and applause.]

We shall at times be compelled to assume an attitude of opposition and resistance, for we will oppose with faces of flint and hearts of steel every nonprogressive, reactionary bill introduced.

Nevertheless, we believe that the true representative of the people should always bury his partisanship in his patriotism and that severe punishment should be administered to any public servant who seeks to derive partisan advantage at the expense of the welfare of his country. We therefore hereby pledge ourselves as Progressives to the support of any measures, from whatever source they come, that are designed to contribute to the prosperity of the people and to augment the glory and grandeur of the Republic.

And, finally, I have been commissioned to nominate a member of the National Progressive Party to be Speaker of this House and to preside over its deliberations during the sessions of the Sixty-third Congress. It affords me great pleasure to name a man who is a youth in years but a veteran in statesmanship, having served as a Member of this body during a full decade; a man who is courage and conscience incarnate, to whom the din of battle in the cause of righteousness is music to the ear; a knight-errant in politics, who enters the combats of the arena always with the spirit of apostleship in his heart and the song and shout of the crusader upon his lips; a true and steadfast friend who never betrays a trust, a brave and generous antagonist who strikes always above and never below the belt; a man who, in life and character, in achievements, hopes, and aspirations, is worthy of the past and prophetic of the future of the American Republic.

Gentlemen of the House of Representatives, the State of New York lifts its hat to the State of Kansas, and I nominate for the Progressive leadership of this body and for the Speakership of the American House of Representatives during the next two years that militant, aggressive, red-blooded Progressive from the West, VICTOR MURDOCK. [Applause.]

The CLERK. Are there any other nominations? If not, the nominations are closed. The following tellers are appointed to conduct the election: Mr. CALLAWAY of Texas, Mr. GOEKE of Ohio, Mr. AUSTIN of Tennessee, and Mr. STEPHENS of California, and they will please take their places at the Clerk's desk. The Clerk will call the roll.

The tellers having taken their places, the House proceeded to vote viva voce for Speaker.

The following is the vote in detail:

FOR MR. COOPER—4.

FOR MR. NELSON—1.

Cooper

At the conclusion of the roll call,

The CLERK said: The result of the vote is as follows: Total number of votes cast, 406. Mr. JOHN M. NELSON, of Wisconsin, received 1 vote; Mr. HENRY A. COOPER, of Wisconsin, received 4 votes; Mr. VICTOR MURDOCK, of Kansas, received 18 votes; Mr. JAMES R. MANN, of Illinois, received 111 votes; Mr. CHAMP CLARK, of Missouri, received 272 votes. A quorum being present, and Mr. CHAMP CLARK, of Missouri, having received a majority of all the votes, he is duly elected Speaker of the Sixty-third Congress. [Applause.]

The gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. PALMER; the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. MANN; and the gentleman from Kansas, Mr. MURDOCK, are appointed a committee to wait upon the Speaker, notify him of his election, and escort him to the chair.

The committee appointed to conduct the Speaker elect to the chair having returned with him,

Mr. MANN. Gentlemen of the House of Representatives, I have the pleasure to introduce and present to you as your choice for Speaker one of the noblest of men and one of the ablest of Speakers, the Hon. CHAMP CLARK, of Missouri. [Loud applause.]

The SPEAKER. Gentlemen of the House of Representatives, profoundly grateful for reelection to the Speakership, the highest honor which you can bestow, I prize it especially because it was preceded by a unanimous nomination and is accompanied with the personal friendship and good will of every Member of the House. [Applause.] Your indorsement by this action of my conduct during my first term in this great station by giving me a second term is more precious than rubies. I hope to discharge the difficult, multifarious, and delicate duties of this position with absolute impartiality and to the satisfaction of all the Members and of all fair-minded people. Whatever success attached to my first term was due, very largely, to the unfailing kindness, courtesy, and good feeling of the Members toward each other and toward the Speaker. I hope that that line of action will continue through this Congress. Indeed, it is more necessary in this Congress than it was in the last one. The increase of the membership will render the duties of the Speaker very much more difficult than they were in the Sixty-second Congress. For the benefit of ourselves and for the good of the country, I hope the same rule of conduct will prevail.

Therefore I cordially invite the aid and assistance of all Members of the House, without respect to political affiliations, to aid in maintaining order, preserving decorum, and expediting business for the public welfare, to the end that our free institutions may be strengthened and perpetuated.

As this Congress is to be known more by its works than its words, I am ready to take the oath, and will ask Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland to administer it.

The oath of office was administered to the Speaker by Mr. TALBOTT.

SWEARING IN OF MEMBERS.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the names of Members by States, and they will assemble in front of the Speaker's desk and take the oath of office.

MEMBER FROM THE TWELFTH DISTRICT OF MICHIGAN.

When the State of Michigan was called:

Mr. HINEBAUGH. Mr. Speaker, I desire to object, and do object, to the swearing in of H. OLIN YOUNG, from the twelfth Michigan district. I do so on my responsibility as a Member of this House and because I am reliably informed the gentleman was not elected. I ask that the resolution be read.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I make a point of order that at this time no such resolution is in order.

The SPEAKER. The point of order is sustained at this juncture.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MURDOCK. There are numerous precedents where the Speaker has the right to ask a challenged gentleman to stand aside.

The SPEAKER. That is true.

Mr. MURDOCK. Then we will have to start in at the end of the swearing in of the Members.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I simply make the point of order at this particular time that no such resolution is in order.

The SPEAKER. The point of order is sustained. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. YOUNG] will stand aside.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to make an inquiry, if I may, of my colleague from Illinois [Mr. HINEBAUGH], whether his objection to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. YOUNG] is as to his eligibility. So far the gentleman has objected to the swearing in of Mr. YOUNG upon his responsibility as a Member of Congress. That means nothing. I may object on my responsibility as a Member to the swearing in of anybody on the ground that he is not elected; but the gentleman must go further than that before the Speaker asks a gentleman to stand aside, I think.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HINEBAUGH] stated that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. YOUNG] had never been elected. That seemed to be his reason.

Mr. MANN. Well, I know; but that is always the contention of every contestant who contests a seat, where a contestee has the credentials.

The SPEAKER. That is true, too.

Mr. MANN. I think the House is entitled to know whether the objection is as to the eligibility of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. YOUNG] or as to the form of the certificate which has been presented to the Clerk of the House, or whether it is for any other reason that may be named.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BARTLETT. I desire to be informed whether the Clerk has in his possession the credentials of the gentleman from Michigan, duly certified by the governor of that State, declaring that the gentleman was elected a Member of this Congress.

Mr. MANN. Well, Mr. Speaker, I shall not object to having the gentleman from Michigan stand aside. I am quite willing to ask unanimous consent to have that done as long as, apparently, we can not get any statement from my colleague that there is any objection to the eligibility of the gentleman from Michigan or to the certificate of his election, so that the matter may be passed upon later without putting the Speaker on record as having the right to require a Member to stand aside where no objection is made as to his eligibility to the House or no objection is made as to the form of the certificate.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, I made a parliamentary inquiry of the Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will answer the parliamentary inquiry upon which the statement of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] impinged. This certificate of Mr. YOUNG is signed by the secretary of state of Michigan, the State treasurer, and the commissioner of the State land office, constituting the board of State canvassers.

Mr. BARTLETT. Just a word, Mr. Speaker. I wish to state my position in relation to the matter. The point was raised and the precedent set in the Roberts case and other cases. I do not believe the Speaker, on the mere challenge of the right of a Member of this House to be sworn in, where that Member's certificate to membership is regular and unchallenged, ought to sustain that contention. However, if, as suggested by the gentleman from Illinois, it is wished that the matter take that course and the gentleman from Michigan stands aside, I have no objection. But so far as I am concerned, as one Member of this House, I enter my protest, Mr. Speaker, and insist that the Speaker ought not to have the right to stand aside any Member from being sworn upon the mere suggestion of a Member who may or may not himself be sworn or whose own title to a seat may be at stake, in the face of the regular certificate of the governor of a sovereign State to the effect that that Member has been elected, the same as I have been, or the same as every other Member of this House has been elected.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Georgia will pardon me a moment, as a matter of convenience to the House——

Mr. BARTLETT. I yield to the gentleman's convenience——

Mr. MANN. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. YOUNG] may stand aside and refrain from taking the oath until the oath has been taken by the other Members.

Mr. BARTLETT. I shall not object.

Mr. MURDOCK. Reserving the right to object——

Mr. FITZGERALD. The request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] accomplishes the same result.

Mr. MURDOCK. It certainly does; but reserving the right to object, all the precedents which I can find say that the Speaker is entirely within his rights in asking a challenged Member to step aside temporarily while other Members are being sworn in. There are numerous precedents to that effect.

On December 5, 1881, at the organization of the House the Speaker was administering the oath to Members, and the State of Alabama being called——

Mr. FITZGERALD. I suggest that the gentleman either object or allow the request for unanimous consent to be granted.

Mr. MURDOCK. I think it is clearly within the right of the Speaker to ask the gentleman to step aside.

Mr. FITZGERALD. That may be, but if nobody objects to the request it does no harm and accomplishes the same result.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will not trouble the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] or anybody else to read the precedents. The Chair has read them himself. There is no question in the world but what under the precedents the Speaker has the right to ask a Member to stand aside where there is any controversy about his right to take the oath; but the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] relieves that situation by asking unanimous consent that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. YOUNG] stand aside until the other Members are sworn in. Is there objection to the request?

There was no objection.

Mr. YOUNG of Michigan stood aside.

SWEARING IN OF MEMBERS.

The Clerk resumed the call of States, and the oath of office was administered to the remaining Members, Delegates from Territories, and Resident Commissioners.

The SPEAKER. There are some Members who desire to affirm rather than to be sworn in. They will come forward.

Messrs. PALMER, BUTLER, and GRIEST affirmed.

MEMBER FROM THE TWELFTH DISTRICT OF MICHIGAN.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will now swear in the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. YOUNG] unless there is some resolution offered on the subject.

Mr. HINEBAUGH. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution, and ask to have it read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois offers a resolution which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas the prima facie right of Hon. H. OLIN YOUNG, of the twelfth district of the State of Michigan, to a seat in the Sixty-third Congress is objected to by a Member of this House; and

Whereas the Member so objecting as aforesaid informs the House on his responsibility as a Member, upon information and belief, that the election returns of the 14 counties composing the said twelfth district of Michigan show that said H. OLIN YOUNG, Republican candidate for Congress in said district, received a total of 18,190 votes and that William J. MacDonald, the Progressive candidate for Congress in said district, received a total of 18,433 votes, a plurality of 243 votes over said H. OLIN YOUNG; and

Whereas the State board of canvassers of the State of Michigan, arbitrarily and without authority of law, caused a certificate of election to be issued to said H. OLIN YOUNG, when in truth and in fact said certificate should have been issued to William J. MacDonald, who received a plurality of 243 votes as aforesaid; and

Whereas said State board of canvassers refused to count for said William J. MacDonald any of the votes cast for him in the county of Ontanagon, in said district, being 458 in number, upon the sole ground that the name of said William J. MacDonald appeared upon the official ballot in said Ontanagon County as "Sheldon William J. MacDonald"; and

Whereas, for the reasons aforesaid, the Member so objecting has further objected to the oath of office being administered to said H. OLIN YOUNG as a Member of the Sixty-third Congress; and

Whereas if the foregoing alleged facts are true it would be manifest injustice to permit the seating, even temporarily, of H. OLIN YOUNG on his certificate of election issued as aforesaid: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the question of the prima facie right of H. OLIN YOUNG to be sworn in as a Representative from the State of Michigan in the Sixty-third Congress, as well as his final right to a seat therein as such Representative, be referred to a select committee of nine Members of the House, to be appointed by the Speaker; and until such committee shall report upon and the House decide such question and right, the said H. OLIN YOUNG shall not be sworn in or permitted to occupy a seat in this House. And said committee shall have power to send for persons and papers and examine witnesses under oath in relation to the subject matter of this resolution, and shall have the right to report at any time. The expenses of said inquiry shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House, upon vouchers approved by the chairman of said committee, to be immediately available.

Mr. HINEBAUGH. Mr. Speaker, I move the adoption of the resolution, and upon that motion I demand the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman moves the previous question on his resolution.

The question being taken, the Speaker announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. MURDOCK. Division, Mr. Speaker.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 27, noes 232.

Mr. MURDOCK. The yeas and nays, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were refused, 17 Members, not a sufficient number, rising to second the demand.

Accordingly the motion for the previous question was rejected.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 1.

Whereas objection has been made to Hon. H. OLIN YOUNG, of the twelfth district of the State of Michigan, taking the oath of office as a Representative;

Whereas the objection made to the said H. OLIN YOUNG is based upon the assertion that the State board of canvassers of the State of Michigan arbitrarily and without authority of law caused a certificate of election to be issued to said H. OLIN YOUNG instead of to William J. MacDonald, whom it is asserted received a plurality of the votes cast in the election for Representative;

Whereas it appears that the certificate presented by the said H. OLIN YOUNG is in regular form and properly authenticated by the officials by statute duly designated; and

Whereas no objection is made to the said H. OLIN YOUNG taking the oath based upon any disqualification founded in the Constitution, the laws of the land, or the usages and practices of the House of Representatives;

Whereas a notice of contest of the right of said H. OLIN YOUNG to a seat in this House has been filed pursuant to law in the office of the Clerk of the House of Representatives on January 7, 1913; and

Whereas the right of the several parties to said contest should be thoroughly investigated and duly ascertained, and under the rules to be adopted and the usages of the House said contest will be promptly and thoroughly considered, investigated, heard, and determined:

Resolved, That the Speaker be authorized and directed forthwith to administer the oath of office to said H. OLIN YOUNG as a Representative.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, the only difference, apparently, between the gentleman from Illinois and myself is as to whether Mr. YOUNG of Michigan shall now be permitted to take the oath as a Representative in Congress. He presents to the House credentials in proper form and duly authenticated by the officials designated by statute. In my opinion there is no sufficient objection made by the gentleman from Illinois to justify a refusal to administer the oath to the gentleman from Michigan as a Representative. I am of opinion that if this substitute had not been offered, in view of the fact that the gentleman from Illinois merely asserts that upon his responsibility he objects to the credentials, without pointing out any defect in them, and without pointing out any disqualification under the Constitution or the law or the practice of the House, the Speaker would be compelled to administer the oath.

For the action which I propose, however, there is a precedent of such a character that the House itself is justified at this time in emphasizing the practice to be pursued under conditions here presented.

I read from Hinds' Precedents:

A certificate regular in form and legally issued by a competent officer was honored by both Clerk and House, although the successor of that officer had issued conflicting credentials. On October 15, 1877, at the organization of the House, while the Members elect whose names had been placed on the roll by the Clerk were being sworn, Mr. Richard H. Cain, of South Carolina, was challenged and stood aside. On the succeeding day, after the disposal of the case of Mr. Joseph H. Rainey, of the same State, Mr. John B. Clarke, of Kentucky, offered the following:

"Resolved, That the question of the prima facie as well as the right of M. P. O'Connor against Richard H. Cain, contestants, respectively, claiming a seat in this House from the second district of South Carolina, be referred to the Committee on Elections, hereafter to be appointed. And until such committee shall have reported in the premises and the House has decided such question neither of said contestants shall be admitted to a seat."

In this case Mr. Cain had the regular certificate, as did Mr. Rainey, and the secretary of state (successor to the one who had issued the certificate) had issued an impeaching certificate.

In the debate it was urged that the law of elections laid down the principle that a certificate did not constitute a prima facie title to a seat in cases where there was a second impeaching certificate. In this case the same officer issued the first certificate, and also the certificate that impeached the first. It did not matter that the officer was not in the two cases the same person. Both certificates were from the secretary of state of South Carolina. It was not sufficient to say that one came from one political partisan and the other from another political partisan. Against this it was urged again, as in the case of Rainey, that the certificate was regular in form, in conformity with law, and must be followed.

The House, by a vote of yeas 181, nays 89, adopted the following substitute:

"Resolved, That Richard H. Cain be now sworn in as a Representative," etc.

The oath was accordingly administered to Mr. Cain.

That decision was based on the fact that having a certificate in proper form, duly authenticated, the subsequent certificate was not sufficient to impeach the certificate issued in conformity with the law. If that be not sufficient, how preposterous it would be to permit any Member of this House to rise and single out a Member elect of the House and upon the mere statement that upon his responsibility he objects to a certificate, which is in proper form, duly authenticated, prevent the administering of the oath until the House determined questions of fact and law as to the conduct of the State board of canvassers which may affect the title to the seat.

Mr. COOPER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I will yield for a question.

Mr. COOPER. I observe in listening to the gentleman's resolution that it says that there will be an early hearing and determination of this contest. Are the committees on election to be appointed in the near future?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If the gentleman from New York will yield——

Mr. FITZGERALD. I will yield if my rights to the floor are preserved.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's rights will be preserved.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will state that although I have not consulted with other members of the Ways and Means Committee who make up committees on this side of the House, recognizing the importance of this case and the questions involved, I think I am safe in saying for myself and those who are members of the committee on this side of the House and the Democratic caucus that a committee will be provided to dispose of this case in the regular way at an early date.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] permit me to say just one word in reply to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD]?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I wish the gentleman would permit me to finish what I have to say. I have no knowledge of the merits of this case excepting what I have read from time to time in the press. I have no interest in either one of the persons contending for this seat except to have the person who is entitled under the law seated; but the right of Members elect, bearing proper certificates, to be sworn in is too important to be determined upon any mere partisan contention or for mere party advantage.

I simply wish to say one other thing. An attempt was made with the newly crowned leader—the "Symbol of the newly risen sun," I think, is the proper title—to arrange debate upon the resolutions to be offered, so that everybody who desired might be heard upon the questions involved, and at the conclusion of the discussion to have the House vote. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] suggested the time that his followers desired, which was perfectly satisfactory to those consulted on this side. The proposed arrangement provided for such discussion as might have been necessary upon the one or two or three sides of the question before the House would be called upon to act. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK], however, later informed the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] and myself and one or two others that upon consulting with his followers, the new Progressive Party declined to have any discussion of this matter, and proposed to move the previous question upon the resolution depriving a Member elect of the right to be sworn in——

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Just a moment—and the negotiations were necessarily broken off.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] some four years ago was one of those who paraded this country vociferously denouncing me as one who desired to have the rules of this House so framed as to deprive Representatives of their rights and of the opportunity fully and freely to express their opinions and to voice their views, and thus properly to represent their constituents in this House; and yet in the short space of four years I find him at the head of a new party which at its very initiation in the House of Representatives attempts to throttle debate upon one of the most important questions that can come before the House of Representatives. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from New York yield to the gentleman from Kansas?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I yield for a question.

Mr. MURDOCK. I suppose that the gentleman immediately upon the conclusion of his remarks now will demand the previous question, and thus cut off from debate everyone except himself. I was disposed to make agreement with the gentleman from New York in regard to time with knowledge of his former practices in mind.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Oh, the gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. MURDOCK. And now, if the gentleman will let me continue——

Mr. FITZGERALD. One moment—I will not, because the gentleman——

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I will not yield.

Mr. MURDOCK. But the gentleman did yield to me for a question, and I have not yet gotten to my question. [Laughter.]

Mr. FITZGERALD. And the gentleman never will get to his question this time, Mr. Speaker, because I decline to yield further.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman does me a gross injustice when he says that he was making his arrangements with the knowledge of my former action in mind. I recall a memorable day in this House when the controversy was over the adoption of its rules, and I was the only Representative who secured the floor in his own right who had the opportunity to move the previous question and declined to take advantage of it. I could at that time have moved the previous question and I had the votes to adopt it, but I surrendered the floor when I had concluded my remarks and thus gave other Members an opportunity to be heard upon the propositions which I presented. Never before nor since then in the history of the House of Representatives had anybody so fortuitously situated as I was upon that occasion exhibited the self-sacrifice that I did at that time. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Does the gentleman wish to ask me a question?

Mr. MURDOCK. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Does the gentleman wish to ask me a question?

Mr. MURDOCK. The gentleman says this——

Mr. FITZGERALD. No, no. Does the gentleman wish to ask me a question?

Mr. MURDOCK. Does the gentleman in making the assertion that at the time he refrained from ordering the previous question, although he had the votes to order it, mean to have the House understand that at that time he and the gentleman from Illinois, then a Member of Congress, the Hon. Joseph G. Cannon, had an agreement to vote down reform in the rules?

Mr. FITZGERALD. No, Mr. Speaker, I did not mean to make such an assertion. I merely expressed my confidence in the fact that the proposition I presented was so meritorious that I really expected it to receive the unanimous vote of the House. [Applause and laughter.]

I have never been able to understand why the gentleman from Kansas, professing to be such a persistent reformer of the rules, after having denounced so vehemently the amendments offered by me at that time, has never in the four years that have since elapsed suggested a single change in those amendments.

Mr. MURDOCK. If the gentleman will permit, he will before this session of Congress closes.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman does propose amendments to the rules of the House before this session shall be closed, I indulge the hope that they will be designed to permit Members of the House to participate in its deliberations rather than to shut them out.

Mr. MURDOCK. They will not be designed to shut them out from the membership of the House.

Mr. HENRY. Will the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] yield a moment, so that I can ask the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] a question?

Mr. FITZGERALD. If I do not lose the floor.

Mr. HENRY. I want to ask the gentleman from Kansas if he will not be candid enough to us to say that just prior to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HINEBAUGH] offering this resolution pertaining to the election case he came to the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] and to me and suggested it was proper to move the previous question——

Mr. HINEBAUGH. The initiative in this agreement came from the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. MURDOCK. The initiative in this agreement came from the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD], and not from me; and after I tried to arrange the matter I came back to them so that there would be no charge of bad faith, and so that we should expedite the business of the House and keep out of a seat in the House a gentleman who has no business in it——

Mr. FITZGERALD. I will not yield for such a statement. I decline further to be interrupted.

Mr. LAFFERTY. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Is it not true that the gentleman from New York yielded to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] to ask the gentleman from Kansas a question——

Mr. MURDOCK. Without any interference by the gentleman from New York.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not think the answer is implied to a question.

Mr. MURDOCK. I asked the gentleman to yield to me.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman may have asked a question even had he not moved the previous question.

Mr. LAFFERTY. The gentleman knows that is true.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Hereafter I trust that the gentleman's followers will be more willing to acquiesce in any arrangements made by the gentleman from Kansas when he negotiates on their behalf for time.

Mr. MURDOCK. Now, will the gentleman in fairness yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. No. I do not propose that these gentlemen shall attempt to set up a rule of conduct for the House and have their own way. I hope that hereafter when the gentleman representing these so-called "Progressives" is given the opportunity to have a full discussion of pending questions, when there is a disposition to grant the time desired they will take advantage of the opportunity, otherwise they will receive the same treatment they are about to receive now. Mr. Speaker, I now demand the previous question upon the resolution and the substitute.

Mr. MURDOCK. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] moves the previous question. The House will be in order. There could not be any more serious question than the right of a Member to have——

Mr. MURDOCK. Under the rules of the House, is there not in order, after the previous question has been ordered, 40 minutes' debate?

The SPEAKER. After it has been adopted. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. MURDOCK. Division, Mr. Speaker.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 241, noes 35.

So the previous question was ordered

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The yeas and nays are demanded. Those in favor of ordering the yeas and nays will rise and stand until they are counted. [After counting.] Twenty-two gentlemen have arisen in the affirmative—not a sufficient number—and the yeas and nays are refused. The question is on the adoption of the substitute offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD].

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. MURDOCK. A division, Mr. Speaker.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 266, noes 26.

So Mr. FITZGERALD's substitute was adopted.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas demands the yeas and nays. Those in favor of taking this vote by the yeas and nays will rise and stand until they are counted. [After counting.] Twenty-seven gentleman have arisen in the affirmative—not a sufficient number—and the yeas and nays are refused. The vote is now on the resolution as amended by the substitute offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD].

The question was taken, and the resolution as amended was adopted.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. YOUNG] will come forward and be sworn.

Mr. YOUNG of Michigan appeared before the bar of the House and took the oath of office.

OFFICERS OF THE HOUSE.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] offers a resolution which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 3.

Resolved, That Hon. South Trimble, of the State of Kentucky, be, and he is hereby, chosen Clerk of the House of Representatives;

That Robert B. Gordon, of the State of Ohio, be, and he is hereby, chosen Sergeant at Arms of the House of Representatives;

That Joseph J. Sinnott, of the State of Virginia, be, and he is hereby, chosen Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives;

That William M. Dunbar, of the State of Georgia, be, and he is hereby, chosen Postmaster of the House of Representatives; and

That Rev. Henry N. Couden, of the State of Michigan, be, and he is hereby, chosen Chaplain of the House of Representatives.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the caucus of the Republican Members, I offer the following amendment by way of a substitute for the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That Alexander McDowell, of the State of Pennsylvania, be, and he is hereby, chosen Clerk of the House of Representatives;

That Clarence H. Price, of the State of Kansas, be, and he is hereby, chosen Sergeant at Arms of the House of Representatives;

That George W. Denney, of the State of Tennessee, be, and he is hereby, chosen Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives;

That George F. Russell, of the State of Washington, be, and he is hereby, chosen Postmaster of the House of Representatives; and

That Henry N. Couden, of the State of Michigan, be, and he is hereby, chosen Chaplain of the House of Representatives.

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the conference of the Progressive Party, I desire to introduce an amendment to the substitute.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That A. Nevin Detrich, of Pennsylvania, be, and he is hereby, chosen Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Resolved, That Madison T. Owens, of California, be, and he is hereby, chosen Sergeant at Arms of the House of Representatives.

Resolved, That C. B. Kegley, of Washington, be, and he is hereby, chosen Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives.

Resolved, That George J. Larash, of Illinois, be, and he is hereby, chosen Postmaster of the House of Representatives.

Resolved, That Rev. Henry N. Couden be, and he is hereby, elected Chaplain of the House of Representatives.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to make a point of order, I shall not make it, owing to the lack of experience of the gentleman who offers the resolution, which is in violation of the statute which provides that the word "Resolved" in the resolving part of the resolution can only be inserted once, instead of many times.

The SPEAKER. The point of order would be well taken if it were made. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KELLY] to the substitute offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GREENE] to the resolution offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

The question was taken, and the amendment to the substitute was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the substitute offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GREENE].

The question was taken, and the substitute was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

The question was taken, and the resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The officers elect of the House will come forward and receive the oath of office.

The officers elect presented themselves at the bar of the House, and the oath of office was administered to them by the Speaker.

SPECIAL MINORITY EMPLOYEES.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I present a resolution, and ask unanimous consent for its consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

House resolution 4.

Resolved, That, until otherwise ordered, Joseph G. Rodgers be authorized to act as special employee of the House of Representatives and receive compensation at the rate of $1,800 per annum; that John H. Hollingsworth be authorized to act as special chief page and pair clerk and receive compensation at the rate of $1,800 per annum; that William Tyler Page be authorized to act as special messenger and assistant pair clerk and receive compensation at the rate of $1,800 per annum; that Bert W. Kennedy and Frank W. Collier be authorized to act as special messengers and receive compensation at the rate of $1,500 per annum; and that A. E. Chaffee be authorized to act as minority telephone messenger and receive compensation at the rate of $1,200 per annum; such employees to be at all times under the control of the Speaker of the House and subject to change at any time by the House as provided by law.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, these are the same employees that were provided for during the Sixty-second Congress, for the minority?

Mr. MANN. These are the same employees.

Mr. LLOYD. The same in number and the same in salary?

Mr. MANN. The same in number, the same in salary, and the same men provided for the minority during the last Congress.

I think it is fair to say that it is the understanding on my part, and I think on the part of gentlemen on the other side of the House, that another employee will be provided for the new party in the minority also.

Mr. MURRAY of Oklahoma. You mean the grand jury? [Laughter.]

Mr. LAFFERTY. Be careful that you are not indicted. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The resolution was agreed to.

SEATING OF MEMBERS.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the following Members may be permitted to choose their own seats on the floor of the House: Hon. JAMES R. MANN, the Republican leader; Hon. SERENO E. PAYNE, of New York, the ranking Republican member of the Committee on Ways and Means——

Mr. MANN. The "father of the House."

Mr. PALMER. The "father of the House"; also Hon. VICTOR MURDOCK, of Kansas, the Progressive Party leader; Hon. OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD, of Alabama, prospective chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means; Hon. JOHN J. FITZGERALD, of New York, prospective chairman of the Committee on Appropriations; and Hon. ROBERT L. HENRY, of Texas, prospective chairman of the Committee on Rules.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent that the persons named—Mr. MANN, Mr. PAYNE, Mr. MURDOCK, Mr. UNDERWOOD, Mr. FITZGERALD, and Mr. HENRY—be permitted to select their seats.

Mr. MADDEN. I ask that the name of the gentleman from Maryland, Mr. TALBOTT, be added to that list. He is the ranking Member on that side of the House in length of service.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to say that in the last Congress the courtesy of choosing their own seats was extended to Mr. Cannon, of Illinois, the former Speaker; to Mr. Bingham, of Pennsylvania, who was then the "father of the House"; and to Mr. JONES, of Virginia, and Mr. TALBOTT, of Maryland, on account of their long service; and also to Mr. SHERWOOD, of Ohio.

Mr. MANN. Gen. SHERWOOD ought to be included in any proposition which is made to the House. [Applause.]

Mr. PALMER. The plan in this Congress, however, as I understand it, is to have all seats free, so that Members may sit where they wish. The only thing that is sought to be accomplished by this request is that the leaders of the three parties and the chairman and ranking members of the three most important committees of the House, which have the most business before the House, may be certain of their seats when they come upon the floor.

I understand that tables will be provided in front of the present benches, for the use of committees and of Members having business before the House, which, in addition to the tables now provided, will give ample room for papers and documents which Members addressing the House may desire to have before them.

Since there are to be no regularly assigned seats to every Member it did not seem necessary to extend the courtesy to those Members of the House who have been long in service.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Will the gentlemen designated in the resolution, if it is agreed to, be permitted to select chairs immediately behind these two tables?

Mr. MANN. I was going to ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania if he would not add to his request for unanimous consent that in selecting the permanent seats the seats next to the table be not selected.

Mr. SHERLEY rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. SHERLEY. I want to reserve the right to object, and I want to say that the idea that underlies it seems to be in conflict with the statement made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. PALMER. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman from Pennsylvania would ask not to have these seats next to the tables selected, would not that obviate any question that the gentleman from Kentucky has in his mind?

Mr. PALMER. I am not certain that that would be a proper plan. For instance, the majority leader [Mr. UNDERWOOD] is seldom in his seat unless he is in charge of measures pending in the House, and upon such occasions he would doubtless desire to occupy a seat behind one of the tables.

Mr. MANN. Undoubtedly, and that is the very point. The commission which provided for the reseating of the Hall designed these tables primarily for committees that had charge of a bill on the floor of the House and those in opposition to the bill, so that the majority members of a committee in charge of a bill would have a table on that side of the House, and any gentlemen in opposition would have a right to have their papers on a table on this side of the House. Now, when the gentleman from Alabama is in charge of a bill he will have that table, and when the Committee on Appropriations is in charge of a bill they will want the table, and so would the Committee on Military Affairs, and other committees.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Speaker, I will cut this discussion short by withdrawing the request for unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania withdraws his request for unanimous consent.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Secretary inform the House of Representatives that a quorum of the Senate is assembled and that the Senate is ready to proceed to business.

Also:

Resolved, That the President of the United States and the House of Representatives be notified of the election of Hon. JAMES P. CLARKE, of Arkansas, as President pro tempore of the Senate; James M. Baker, as Secretary of the Senate; and Charles P. Higgins, as Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate.

Also:

Resolved, That a committee consisting of two Senators be appointed, to join such committee as may be appointed by the House of Representatives, to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that a quorum of each House is assembled, and that Congress is ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make.

And that in compliance with the foregoing resolution the Vice President had appointed Mr. KERN and Mr. GALLINGER the committee on the part of the Senate.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution for immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 2.

Resolved, That the Clerk be instructed to inform the President of the United States that the House of Representatives has elected CHAMP CLARK, a Representative from the State of Missouri, as Speaker, and South Trimble, a citizen of the State of Kentucky, as Clerk, of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-third Congress.

The resolution was agreed to.

NOTIFICATION TO THE SENATE.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 6.

Resolved, That a message be sent to the Senate to inform that body that a quorum of the House of Representatives is assembled; that CHAMP CLARK, a Representative from the State of Missouri, has been elected Speaker; that South Trimble, a citizen of the State of Kentucky, has been elected Clerk; and that the House is ready for business.

The resolution was agreed to.

COMMITTEE TO NOTIFY THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move the adoption of the resolution I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 7.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed by the Speaker, on the part of the House of Representatives, to join with the committee on the part of the Senate, to wait on the President of the United States and notify him that a quorum of the two Houses is assembled and that Congress is ready to receive any communication that he may be pleased to make.

The resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER appointed as the committee Mr. UNDERWOOD, Mr. FITZGERALD, and Mr. MANN.

HOUR OF DAILY MEETING.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 5.

Resolved, That until otherwise ordered the daily hour of meeting of the House of Representatives shall be 12 o'clock m.

The resolution was agreed to.

THE RULES.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 8.

Resolved, That the rules of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-second Congress be adopted as the rules of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-third Congress with the exception of Rule XXXI.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker, I have a resolution which I desire to offer as a substitute.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I have the floor.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas has the floor.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, the resolution just read contemplates the readoption of the rules of the former House as the rules of this House of Representatives with the exception of Rule XXXI. Upon reading Rule XXXI it will be found that it is the rule providing for the drawing of seats under the former rules of the House. It is now understood that the custom of drawing seats is to be abandoned since the rearrangement of the Hall of the House. Therefore it is not necessary to adopt that rule and it has been omitted.

This resolution only means that upon its adoption the rules of the former Congress shall govern us during this Congress until the House sees fit to make certain amendments, and I will be perfectly candid and say that it is my understanding that at a little later period of the session there will be certain amendments to some of the rules. The contemplated Committee on Rules has under consideration a number of vital and useful amendments, and there will be no disposition to keep the rules as now adopted in force without placing the necessary amendments in the rules. For instance, it is our intention to undertake to revise the rule providing for Calendar Wednesday, to make it more practical, and see if we can not evolve a more workable plan under that rule. Then there is a proposition to revise the rule in regard to the Calendar for Motions to Discharge Committees, and the Committee on Rules will take up that subject and will be glad to consider it with any of the Members of the House. The Committee on Rules will be glad to consider it with the representative of the new Progressive Party, or to consider any other amendment that he may have to propose to the rules, also with the leader of the minority, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]. We will be glad to have their views. It is not necessary nor is it proper at this stage of the proceedings in the House to undertake to adopt any amendments until they have been thoroughly considered and digested by the appropriate committee, namely, the Committee on Rules. When they have been introduced and have been referred in the proper and regular way they will be taken up. It seems to me that this is the course that should be pursued at this time.

I will be glad now to yield to anyone who wishes to ask a question.

Mr. SIMS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HENRY. I yield for a question.

Mr. SIMS. Does the Committee on Rules contemplate considering some method by which we may secure a greater attendance in the House, so as to avoid the long time required in getting a quorum when the point of no quorum is made?

Mr. HENRY. The Committee on Rules will be glad to consider such a plan, and I hope the gentleman from Tennessee will present some of his views in regard to that question. If the gentleman has any plan in mind at this time, I would be glad to have him suggest it now while the House is in session.

Mr. SIMS. I do not want to take up the time of the House further than to ask the question as to whether such a plan is in contemplation.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Texas yield?

Mr. HENRY. I yield.

Mr. GARDNER. I hope before the gentleman from Texas moves the previous question that he will try to come to some agreement for debate upon his resolution. I speak partly for the minority leader, who has been forced to leave the floor to go to the White House as the messenger of this House. Personally I should like to have 10 minutes in which to make some suggestions. I think that the gentleman from Wisconsin wishes to make some suggestions. I have no doubt that members of the Progressive Party wish to make some suggestions. I have no objection to the passage of the gentleman's resolution. I accept fully his statement that the rules are to be revised, but I think this is a good opportunity, unless time presses, for those of us who are interested especially in the rules to be given an opportunity to say a few words.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me the gentleman is entirely correct about that, and perhaps we can come to some agreement about debate. I think if we could make an arrangement to discuss the resolution for an hour it would be satisfactory, giving, say, 20 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] or to his side of the House, 20 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK], representing the Progressive Party, and 20 minutes to the majority side. I merely make that suggestion, thinking that perhaps we may arrive at some agreement.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, I think that on the Republican side we need half an hour.

Mr. HENRY. Does the gentleman from Kansas think he can get along with 10 minutes?

Mr. MURDOCK. No; we would like 20 minutes.

Mr. FOSTER. Does not the gentleman think that this side of the House ought to have fully as much as the Republican and Progressive sides have? It seems to me so.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HENRY. Certainly.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I want to ask my colleague what it is proposed to discuss?

Mr. HENRY. A resolution providing for the adoption of the rules of the Sixty-second Congress as the rules of the Sixty-third Congress.

Mr. MURRAY of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HENRY. I yield.

Mr. MURRAY of Oklahoma. I would like to ask the gentleman what is the purpose in striking out Rule XXXI?

Mr. HENRY. Section 31 provides for the drawing of seats, and I understand it is contemplated not to draw seats under the present arrangement.

Mr. MURRAY of Oklahoma. I suggest, Mr. Speaker, that we are not quite ready to adopt the rule of socialism and own nothing. I should prefer to have a seat, even in the rear, which is my own, than to have a seat in which every man can sit down when I leave it. Therefore I would like to have section 31 in.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Texas ask unanimous consent for anything?

Mr. HENRY. I ask unanimous consent to arrange the time of debate, and I hope it will be agreeable to the other side. I ask unanimous consent that this side of the House be allowed 30 minutes debate, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] 15 minutes.

Mr. MURDOCK. Why not give us equal time?

Mr. COOPER rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] rise?

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. HENRY. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] first.

Mr. COOPER. I desire to ask the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY], inasmuch as this is one of the most important questions to come before the House, if he will not agree to extend the time a little? I perhaps would like 10 minutes.

Mr. HENRY. Has the gentleman got a party by himself, too? [Laughter.]

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I have not any party, but I have a vote here for a constituency, the same as has the gentleman from Texas, and they are entitled to a hearing, the same as the constituency of any other gentleman, before this House. All I want is a reasonable opportunity.

Mr. HENRY. Can not the gentleman secure the time from one of his leaders? I do not know to which one he owes his allegiance.

Mr. COOPER. I am possibly not led as easily as the gentleman from Texas on this question.

Mr. HENRY. Under which flag is the gentleman fighting?

Mr. COOPER. Under these rules nobody leads me.

Mr. HENRY. I supposed the gentleman had a fourth party. [Laughter.]

Mr. COOPER. Not at all.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY]——

Mr. GARDNER. If the gentleman will make it 25 minutes that will just cover the amount of time for which there are requests on this side of the House.

Mr. HENRY. Then, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this side of the House be allowed 35 minutes and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] 25 minutes, and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] 15 minutes.

Mr. MURDOCK. Reserving the right here, does the gentleman put our minority at disadvantage in the matter of time?

Mr. HENRY. It seems that this morning you were able to say all that you might be able to expect to say in the length of time which was used.

Mr. MURDOCK. We might be able to say more in our 15 minutes than the gentleman does.

Mr. HEFLIN. Does the gentleman from Texas yield?

Mr. HENRY. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama unless he intends to ask for time for the woman's suffrage party.

Mr. HEFLIN. I want to say now that the gentleman is giving more time to the Progressive Party than the membership it possesses. They have 13 Members and they are now asking for 15 minutes. [Applause.]

Mr. MURDOCK. The gentleman is wrong in his information and conclusions.

Mr. GARDNER rose.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Texas yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. GARDNER. I can not put it in the form of a question.

Mr. HENRY. I yield only for something that seems like a question, then. [Laughter.]

Mr. GARDNER. I shall not object to an uneven distribution of time, because we ask only 25 minutes in which to discuss this question. If we are going to discuss this proposition from the point of view of the proportional number of Representatives in each party we are opening a far-reaching question. As a matter of fact, I believe that there should be an equal amount of time allowed for debates on the affirmative and on the negative side of this question.

The reason why I shall not object to only 25 minutes for this side of the House to discuss the question is because that is all the time we actually need. Acting, as I am, at the request of our leader, in his absence, I wish it understood that I make no admission that the Republican side of the House is entitled to any less time for debate than is the Democratic side.

Mr. MURDOCK. I agree with the gentleman as to the division of time for debate on the affirmative and negative side. The same amount of time should be given to the minority as to the majority. Does not the gentleman think there should be an equal division of time among the minorities? [Laughter.]

Mr. HENRY. I do not think so. Modified by other circumstances, there may be.

Mr. GARDNER. Does the gentleman wish me to answer?

Mr. MURDOCK. Certainly; I do.

Mr. GARDNER. Judging from what I have seen to-day, the Progressive Party approaches an entirely new question by first making up its mind.

Mr. MURDOCK. The new party does not do anything of the kind. It believes in an equitable division of time.

Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania. Do I understand it is a matter of understanding of the Committee on Rules that the request in this case is based upon the amendment, that 35 minutes is actually needed on the Democratic side and 25 minutes is all that is actually needed or requested on this side, or is that to be a rule to be laid down in the House that a proportional distribution of time shall be based on the question at issue?

Mr. HENRY. It is just a question of convenience at which they arrive.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] asks unanimous consent on this question that the Democrats shall have 35 minutes, the Republicans 25 minutes, and the Progressives 15 minutes.

Mr. MURDOCK. Reserving the right to object, will the gentleman——

Mr. HENRY. I will yield to the gentleman for a question.

Mr. MURDOCK. Here is a serious proposition. At least, it is a serious one with us. One of the major propositions in the near future may be this very division of time. This is in the nature of things going to serve somewhat as a precedent. Now, is it not true that in a division of the time as between a majority and any number of a minority, with necessarily a like pressure upon both sides being had, there should be an equal division of time?

Mr. HENRY. This is not intended to be a precedent at all.

Mr. MURDOCK. But it is very apt to be, and I want to say to the gentleman that owing to the rules of the House—the peculiar rules that the gentleman is about to adopt—we are in the position not only of not having had time before they are adopted, but we may be cut out of a motion to commit after they are adopted; that is, if it is in the pleasure of the Chair; and so this is a precedent in which we are concerned.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Texas yield?

Mr. HENRY. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. If the contention of the gentleman from Kansas is correct and this action is to be quoted as a precedent in the future, or relied upon as a precedent by the House, I shall myself object to the request made by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY], because I shall certainly insist at all times upon any material matter, when it is of importance to this House, that the majority of the House shall have one-half of the time. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, of course that is the intention. As I stated, we do not desire to make this a precedent. But inasmuch as I am warned from all sides that this side of the House will insist on having as much time as the two parts of the other side together, I shall make a request for unanimous consent that this side of the House be allowed 30 minutes' time, that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] shall have 15 minutes, that the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] shall have 15 minutes, and that at the end of that time the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the resolution.

Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. GARDNER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BURKE] has already objected.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the time may be divided so that 30 minutes shall be controlled by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY], 25 minutes controlled by myself, and 15 minutes to be controlled by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK]. I wish to call the attention of the House to the fact that——

Mr. HENRY. I understand, Mr. Speaker, that the gentleman is asking me to make that request?

Mr. GARDNER. No. I am making that request.

Mr. HENRY. I did not yield the floor for that purpose.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BURKE] objected to the request.

Mr. GARDNER. He objected to the request of the gentleman from Texas, and then I took the floor in my own right.

The SPEAKER. The Chair knows that, but the gentleman from Massachusetts could not take the floor in his own right until the gentleman from Texas yielded.

Mr. GARDNER. But the proposition of the gentleman from Texas had been negatived, and he would not have the floor for a new proposition.

The SPEAKER. This request for unanimous consent was a performance inside of the main one, upon which the gentleman from Texas had an hour.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Texas had not an hour. The rules have not been adopted giving him an hour.

Mr. HENRY. I decline to yield more time.

The SPEAKER. There is such a thing in the world as general parliamentary law.

Mr. GARDNER. But that is not included in general parliamentary law.

Mr. HENRY. I decline, Mr. Speaker, to yield further.

Mr. GARDNER. In fact, it is very doubtful, under general parliamentary law, whether he can yield at all. Four years ago the present occupant of the chair, in the famous fight alluded to a little while ago, refused to yield to anyone after he had once obtained the floor, for fear that he would lose it because the rules had not been adopted.

The SPEAKER. That is absolutely correct; but the rule is this, as the Chair understands it, that it takes unanimous consent to enable the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] to yield time. But he did have the right to yield to a question.

Mr. GARDNER. Precisely.

The SPEAKER. And he has yielded to a question, and that is all he undertook to yield to.

Mr. HENRY. That is correct, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. GARDNER. Precisely. But the gentleman from Texas has the floor to do what? To move, if he chooses to, the previous question or to debate.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will ask the gentleman from Massachusetts whether the gentleman from Texas has not the right to debate his proposition before he moves the previous question?

Mr. GARDNER. Yes; to debate the proposition before the previous question was moved; and, pending the moving of the previous question, he asked unanimous consent to make an arrangement about time. That unanimous consent was objected to by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BURKE]. Thereupon I took the floor, the previous question not having been moved.

The SPEAKER. That proposition was simply incidental to the main proposition. The gentleman from Texas was trying to help you people out. That is the truth about it.

Mr. HENRY. Now, Mr. Speaker, I desire to be heard, and I decline to yield further at present.

Mr. GARDNER. But the gentleman has not the floor. The Chair has taken possession of the situation.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I have the floor and have never yielded it for a moment.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] will permit, the Chair will state that the gentleman from Texas had an hour. The Chair does not know what the gentleman from Massachusetts considers general parliamentary law, but the Chair will state what he considers general parliamentary law. In the main it is the rules of the last House. [Applause.]

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman wait until the Chair states this? Of course the Chair does not say that is all there is of general parliamentary law, but it is the last expression of the House of Representatives on what parliamentary law is. Now, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] got the floor for an hour, and he never yielded except for a question, and was still on his feet after this incidental matter was disposed of about the unanimous consent.

Mr. HENRY. Now, Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. And the Chair thinks the gentleman from Texas is entitled to the floor.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Oregon rise?

Mr. LAFFERTY. I simply wish to aid the Chair, as he requested all Members to do a while ago, by saying that the precedent recites that the rules of the former House guide until the new rules are adopted.

Mr. HENRY. I decline to yield further.

Mr. Speaker, I have been endeavoring to give both sides of the House the opportunity to discuss this resolution. It never entered my mind for a moment that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] was engaging in parliamentary athletics in order to take the floor from under me. I have desired to make it possible for his side of the House to discuss this resolution, and for the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] and his colleagues to discuss it; but if there is to be any such spirit shown on that side of the House, I now demand the previous question on the resolution. [Applause.]

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold his motion for a question, if there is to be no debate?

Mr. HENRY. I will withhold it.

Mr. LENROOT. I desire to ask the gentleman if he does not think the House at a later time should have some opportunity of considering all of the rules if it desires to do so; and may I ask the gentleman whether he will assure the House that if this resolution is adopted the Committee on Rules will, at a later time, give the House the opportunity of considering amendments to each and all of the rules?

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Texas will say this, that if Members desire to introduce amendments to every rule of this House, and those amendments are referred to the Committee on Rules, they will there be carefully and deliberately considered, with an abundance of time for each Member to present his views if he wishes to appear, and then the Committee on Rules will present a report to this House for its action, to adopt if it wishes to do so, or to vote it down if it desires to do so.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is to vote on the previous question.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I demand the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts demands the previous question.

The question being taken, the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. GARDNER. I ask for a division.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER. The yeas and nays are ordered. The Clerk will call the roll.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following motion to commit.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oregon offers a motion to recommit.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Not to recommit, but to commit.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that that is not in order now under general parliamentary law, the rules, or anything else.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Very well; I want to be heard on that question.

Mr. HARDWICK. I want to be heard, too.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. LAFFERTY].

Mr. LAFFERTY. Referring to Rule XVII, under the title of "The previous question," it provides:

> There shall be a motion for the previous question, which, being ordered by a majority of the Members voting, if a quorum be present——

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CAMPBELL. What is the gentleman from Oregon reading from?

Mr. LAFFERTY. I am reading from the rules of the Sixty-second Congress which, under the precedents, govern this House until it adopts rules. That has been so held repeatedly.

The SPEAKER. It is in the discretion of the Chair to hear anybody he chooses to on any point of order.

Mr. LAFFERTY. And any authority that the Members desire to cite.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia made a point of order against the right of the gentleman from Oregon to make a motion to commit. The gentleman from Oregon will proceed.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Rule XVII provides:

> There shall be a motion for the previous question, which, being ordered by a majority of Members voting, if a quorum be present, shall have the effect to cut off all debate and bring the House to a direct vote upon the immediate question or questions on which it has been asked and ordered. The previous question may be asked and ordered upon a single motion, a series of motions allowable under the rules, or an amendment or amendments, or may be made to embrace all authorized motions or amendments and include the bill to its passage or rejection. It shall be in order, pending the motion for or after the previous question shall have been ordered on its passage, for the Speaker to entertain and submit a motion to commit, with or without instructions, to a standing or select committee.

Now, then, Mr. Speaker, this is a motion not to recommit but to commit the resolution of the gentleman from Texas to a select committee of seven Members, to be appointed by the Chair, with instructions to report the resolution back to the House with the following substitute, which I now ask to have read as a part of my remarks.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to be heard on the point of order.

Mr. LAFFERTY. I desire to have the resolution reported.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that it is not in order to have the resolution reported.

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman from Oregon wants it read as a part of his remarks.

Mr. SHERLEY. There are a lot of things that the gentleman may want to which he has no right. It is not in order to read the resolution when the question is as to whether such a motion is in order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oregon asked to have it read as a part of his remarks.

Mr. SHERLEY. But that does not make it in order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oregon has the floor.

Mr. SHERLEY. He has the floor for the purpose of discussing the point or order, but not for the purpose of reading a motion which may or may not be in order.

Mr. MURDOCK. Would it not be possible for the gentleman from Oregon to read the resolution as a part of his remarks from his place on the floor?

Mr. SHERLEY. Not necessarily.

Mr. HENRY. The gentleman from Oregon is speaking by tolerance of the Speaker on the point of order, so long as the Speaker may choose to hear him, whether it be a minute or two minutes, but he can not go into the merits of the proposition at all until this point of order is decided. He proposes now not only to go into the merits but to offer a concrete proposition.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understood the gentleman from Oregon to ask that the document be read as a part of his remarks to throw light on the point of order.

Mr. HENRY. It might take two or three hours to read his document.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker, I decline to yield further at this time. Now, Mr. Speaker, I have sent to the Clerk's desk a motion to commit. I have read the rule under which I say the motion is in order, and as to whether this particular motion is that kind of a motion it is necessary to refer to the motion itself which I have sent to the Clerk's desk. I ask, therefore, to have my motion reported as a part of my remarks.

Mr. SHERLEY. But, Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that when the gentleman rises to make a motion and his right to make that motion is challenged, that until his right to make the motion has been determined in the affirmative he has no right to have the motion read as a matter of right.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is inclined to think that that is correct. If the gentleman has anything more to say about his right to make a motion to commit, the Chair will hear him.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker, I simply state that the motion that I have offered is a motion to commit under the following language of the rule.

The SPEAKER. What is the rule?

Mr. LAFFERTY. I refer to the last sentence of Rule XVII.

The SPEAKER. That is as follows:

> It shall be in order, pending the motion for or after the previous question shall have been ordered on its passage, for the Speaker to entertain and submit a motion to commit, with or without instructions, to a standing or select committee.

Mr. LAFFERTY. That is all I have to say.

Mr. HARDWICK rose.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK].

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that there is no question whatever that the point of order is good. The rules of general parliamentary law govern this House until it is organized, and certainly, although by analogy the rules of the last House might be applied as a part of general parliamentary law, they could have no application whatever when the proposition is to commit. In a body that has no committees, how can we commit to a committee?

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARDWICK. Certainly.

Mr. MURDOCK. This is to commit to a special committee, not to a standing committee, and the rules of the House permit it.

Mr. HARDWICK. I thought at first it was to commit to the Committee on Rules, but it does not make any difference about that. Under general parliamentary law we have no special committees.

Mr. LAFFERTY. This is a committee to be appointed by the Speaker.

Mr. HARDWICK. And not only that, but the rule to which the gentleman refers applies only to the proposition to recommit, and that was put in there as a special privilege, that after the previous question was moved, the motion to recommit, under certain circumstances, would be in order. It seems to me that when we have no committees in this body a proposition to create committees is not in order pending a proposition that we shall determine what the general plan of organization is, and the pendency of the demand for the previous question thereon.

Mr. MURDOCK. The gentleman's point seems to be that at this stage of the proceedings in the organization of the House there are no committees appointed.

Mr. HARDWICK. That is the idea.

Mr. MURDOCK. But as a matter of fact we have already appointed one committee to wait upon the President, and it is within the power of this body to appoint a select committee to consider the rules.

Mr. HARDWICK. We did that by unanimous consent, at least, implied.

The SPEAKER. If that contention of the gentleman from Georgia be correct, then we would have been tied up here until the end of the term if some gentleman desired to object.

Mr. HARDWICK. That may be true until we organized or adopted some rules to govern us.

The SPEAKER. And, further, that committee to wait upon the President was not appointed by unanimous consent.

Mr. HARDWICK. Then, if it is not true, Mr. Speaker, the only way in which it can be upheld is because it is a necessary part of the organization work of this House. The first thing in order is organization and the adoption of the rules. The proposition of the gentleman from Oregon, if in order now, might involve us in an endless snarl. How can we do that when the question is already pending whether or not we shall appoint all committees, because the rules provide for that?

The SPEAKER. The Chair would like to ask the gentleman a question. If the rules of the last Congress are not general parliamentary law, then, under the proposition that he is arguing, what is general parliamentary law?

Mr. HARDWICK. General parliamentary law is entirely independent of the rules of the last Congress.

The SPEAKER. There must be such a thing—such an entity—as general parliamentary law. The gentleman from Georgia says that, according to general parliamentary law, this can not be done. Where is the authorization for that statement?

Mr. HARDWICK. It looks to me as though it comes from common sense. Motions must be determined one at a time, as they are made.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Political exigency.

Mr. MURRAY of Oklahoma rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Oklahoma rise?

Mr. MURRAY of Oklahoma. I rise because I think I can make plain the proposition before the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will proceed.

Mr. MURRAY of Oklahoma. As this House stands now we have no written rules and we are working under general parliamentary law. General parliamentary law in America is such as has been modified by the practices of the House of Representatives. The gentleman from Oregon [Mr. LAFFERTY] introduced a motion which is sustained by the rules of the House, and which, under general parliamentary law, is a subsidiary motion.

The resolution provided a committee to which this could be sent, and it occurs to me that, under general parliamentary law as modified under the practice and rules of the House, the gentleman was in order when he introduced the resolution to commit to a special committee named in the resolution; therefore the point of order against him should not be sustained, since he is entirely in order. [Applause.]

Mr. GARDNER. Let us take this question first from the point of view of general parliamentary law without regard to the rules of the House. First a motion for the previous question is offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY], and next a motion to commit is offered by the gentleman from Oregon. Under general parliamentary law the Chair would first put the motion which was first offered, to wit, the motion for the previous question. Certainly the gentleman from Oregon's motion could not be in order until the motion for the previous question had been dealt with, and I am by no means sure that it would be in order at all unless the previous question is negatived. Next let us take up the contention that we are proceeding under the rules of the last House of Representatives. Where do we find ourselves? The rules of the House give a certain definite order of precedence for permissible motions when a bill or resolution is under debate. The rules, for example, give to the motion to lay on the table a precedence over the motion for the previous question even though the latter motion comes first in point of time. In order of precedence first comes the motion to adjourn, next the motion to lay on the table, next the motion for the previous question. The motion to commit, the motion to postpone, and the motion to amend all must give way to the motions of higher precedence which I have enumerated. It is of no importance under the rules of the House whether or not these motions are made before or after the other motions. In any case they must give way.

The Chair will recollect that when the immigration bill was up in the last Congress the motion to postpone was made. It was followed by a motion for the previous question and then by the motion to lay on the table.

Under the rules of the House, as a matter of fact, the Chair in putting the question was obliged exactly to reverse the order in which the motions were offered.

Under the rules the motion for the previous question takes precedence over the motion to commit or recommit or refer. That is undisputed. Now, there are two motions to recommit. One of them is the motion to recommit after the previous question is ordered on the passage of a bill. That is not the case in this instance. The previous question is not yet ordered. We are dealing, therefore, with the ordinary motion to recommit, which may be offered pending the motion for the previous question. It may be offered at the present time, without a doubt, but the previous question must be voted on first, because the previous question has a higher precedence under our rules than the motion to commit. If the previous question is voted down, then the question would recur on the motion of the gentleman from Oregon; that is, supposing him to be correct in his contention that the rules of the House, practically speaking, are in force. I have no precedent to cite, as the matter comes up unexpectedly.

The SPEAKER. Before anybody else proceeds let us get at the status of this matter.

Mr. CARLIN. That is exactly what I wanted to get at.

I think before the Speaker can rule upon this question he should get at exactly the status of the situation.

Now, what is before the House? It is a motion to adopt the rules of the Sixty-second Congress as the rules of this Congress, and upon that motion the previous question is moved. Now, after the previous question is moved it would be impossible to move an amendment; it would be impossible to move a substitute or a committal.

What have we before the House? We have a substitute for a set of rules that have been moved to be adopted under the guise of a motion to recommit.

Mr. LAFFERTY. That is the only way it can be done.

Mr. CARLIN. It provides practically for recommittal, for it provides for the report to be immediately made back to this House by the special committee adopting not the rules before the House by motion, but a substitute for those rules that are before the House by a motion. It can not be done. It is simply a parliamentary impossibility.

The SPEAKER. Why can it not be done?

Mr. CARLIN. For the reason that it is in violation of parliamentary practice. If you could not move to amend, and if you could not move to substitute, then the paper here is clearly subject to a point of order, because that is exactly what the gentleman moves to do. He moves to substitute a set of rules which he himself has drafted for the set of rules upon which debate has been closed by the previous question.

Mr. HARDWICK. Will the Speaker hear me for a moment?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. HARDWICK. I think this is a very fair statement of the situation: I call the attention of the Chair to clause 4 of Rule XVI, which provides:

> When a question is under debate no motion shall be received but to adjourn, to lay on the table, for the previous question (which motions shall be decided without debate), to postpone to a day certain, to refer—

And that is what the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. LAFFERTY] moves, no matter what he calls it.

Mr. LAFFERTY. No; to recommit.

Mr. HARDWICK. I read further:

> To refer, or to amend, or postpone indefinitely; which several motions shall have precedence in the foregoing order.

In other words, the proposition that the gentleman makes under general parliamentary law does not take precedence of the motion made by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY], because it is made at a subsequent period of time. It is not in order under the rules of the House as a part of general parliamentary law, because it violates the precedence under which these several motions are in order. No matter what the gentleman calls his motion, it is a motion to refer.

The SPEAKER. There is not any question in the world about its being a motion to refer.

Mr. HARDWICK. Therefore the motion for the previous question, having been first made, must, under the general principles of parliamentary law, be first determined. On the other hand, if it be considered, as the Speaker suggests, that on this matter the rules of the last House constitute a part of the general parliamentary law that is to govern us, then under the clause of the rule I have cited the motion of the gentleman from Texas, demanding the previous question, takes precedence over the motion to refer made by the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that the defect of the position of the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. LAFFERTY] lies in the assumption that all the rules of a previous House constitute the general parliamentary law. That is not, in my judgment, true. This has been held true, that where a practice has grown up in the House or where a rule has been made which is in accordance with what has been general parliamentary practice, then in considering what is the general parliamentary law the rules or practice of a former House will be considered. But to say that the rules of a former House are, as a matter of necessity, general parliamentary law——

Mr. MURRAY of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman allow me an interruption right there?

Mr. SHERLEY. Just a moment, until I finish a sentence. To say that the rules of a former House are, as a matter of necessity, parliamentary law is to say what is certainly and necessarily untrue, because there are a great many rules of the House which are made to fit particular conditions only, and to which they are adapted only because of those conditions. When the condition no longer exists the rule would be an absurdity. For example, we have rules in regard to committees which would manifestly be absurd now to invoke, because there are now no committees.

Now, going back to the question of general parliamentary law, I submit to the Chair this proposition, that the very purpose of the previous question is to cut off debate and to bring the House to the consideration of the particular motion upon which the previous question is moved.

I submit to the Chair the further proposition that the motion to refer, particularly the motion to refer with instructions, is under general parliamentary law a debatable motion. Therefore it follows that if it be in order, after the motion for the previous question, to make a motion to refer, which in turn is debatable, you have then destroyed the entire purpose of the motion for the previous question, and have made it absolutely null.

Now, the trouble with the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. LAFFERTY] is that he is assuming that an arbitrary determination of precedence of motions, which is found in the rule that he recites, is the ordinary rule that existed under general parliamentary law. It was just because it was not the ordinary rule that the House passed that special rule. It was because without that special rule, after the motion for the previous question had been made, it would not have been in order to make a motion to recommit, with or without instructions, and it becomes in order by virtue of the special rule which was made to fit a particular case, and that case was not at all analogous to this. That was a case where a matter had been considered by a committee, considered then by the House, and was on its final passage, and in order that there might be presented an affirmative proposition desired by the other side, which was very different from the situation here.

Mr. MURRAY of Oklahoma. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SHERLEY. In just a moment. The question here arises where we are trying to adopt rules for the House. Now, the House ought to have a way of determining directly whether it wants to vote on that first affirmative motion. The only way it can do that is by voting up the previous question. The gentleman has his remedy, or, rather, the House has its remedy. If a majority of the House want to consider the proposition of the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. LAFFERTY], it has a very simple and expeditious way of doing it, and that way is by voting down the motion for the previous question. Then the gentleman from Texas will lose the floor and the gentleman from Oregon will obtain the floor as a matter of course, and then it will be in order to make his motion. Now I will yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma for a question.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will ask both gentlemen to suspend for a moment.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE TO NOTIFY THE PRESIDENT.

Messrs. UNDERWOOD, FITZGERALD, and MANN, the committee appointed on the part of the House to wait on the President, appeared at the bar of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, the committee appointed by the House to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that the House is organized and to ask him whether he desires to communicate to the House, wish to report that they have performed that duty, accompanied by a like committee from the Senate; and the President of the United States desires us to report to the House that he will be glad to deliver his message to the House in person to-morrow. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The committee is discharged.

THE RULES.

Mr. SHERLEY. Now, will the gentleman from Oklahoma ask his question?

Mr. MURRAY of Oklahoma. I submit to the gentleman, if the motion for the previous question should be put and carried, the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. LAFFERTY] having moved to commit to a special committee with instructions, would it violate the rule that debate is closed by the motion for the previous question if the vote was immediately taken upon that motion to commit without debate? I apprehend that the Chair would rule as the proper method that we should immediately go to a vote on the motion to commit to a committee with instructions. If that is voted down, then in that case we would immediately take the vote without debate upon the question submitted by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY].

Mr. SHERLEY. The gentleman has asked me a question. I can illustrate it——

The SPEAKER. The Chair would like to ask the gentleman from Oklahoma a question, and then he would like to ask a question of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SHERLEY]. The way this matter stands is this: The yeas and nays have been ordered on the motion for the previous question. Suppose the yeas have it, and the previous question is ordered; then, does the gentleman from Oklahoma contend that the gentleman from Oregon would have a right to make a motion to commit?

Mr. MURRAY of Oklahoma. I contend that he has the floor, then, with the right to move to commit to a standing committee if there were one. But there being no standing committee, he has the right to move to commit to a special committee; and in view of the fact that the previous question had been carried, the vote would be taken immediately upon that motion to commit without debate, and if carried it disposes of the resolution. If it fail, then in that case you would take the vote upon the resolution introduced by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] without debate.

Mr. SHERLEY. If the Chair will permit me, the motion to refer is a debatable motion. The fact that the gentleman says he does not think anybody will want to debate it has nothing to do with the parliamentary question. It is a debatable motion. The only way to cut off that debate would be to move the previous question upon it. But according to the gentleman's theory of the previous question it is not for the purpose of bringing the House to the consideration of the first matter. The trouble is, I repeat, that gentlemen confuse the order of precedence of motions under the rule of the last House—a rule passed for a specific purpose—with the order of precedence of motions under general parliamentary law; and I submit that the burden is upon them of showing that under general parliamentary law, after the motion for the previous question has been made, it is then in order to move to refer, which is the same as the motion to commit. Now, if that be so, you get to no objective, and the very purpose of a motion for the previous question is to bring the House immediately to the consideration of the motion upon which it is acting.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will ask the gentleman from Kentucky a question. Suppose the Chair holds that the motion of the gentleman from Oregon is out of order, the yeas prevail in this vote for the previous question, and the previous question is ordered. Then does the gentleman from Kentucky think that the gentleman from Oregon has no right to make the motion?

Mr. SHERLEY. I think not; and that is the purpose of the previous question. His remedy is to vote down the previous question. You must not confuse his desire with his right. If he has not got votes enough, that is his misfortune.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Then, why would it not be the remedy of the minority to vote down the previous question on a tariff bill, and why should not they be excluded from a motion to recommit?

Mr. SHERLEY. Because in the wisdom of the House they sought by the adoption of a special rule to change the usual parliamentary law.

Mr. SAUNDERS. Mr. Speaker, we are doing business under general parliamentary law. We are not concerned with citations from antecedent rules of the House simply because those rules are not operative under present conditions. If the gentleman from Oregon had obtained the floor a little sooner than he actually did, it would have been in order for him to make a motion to commit, and in connection with and as a part of that motion to create a special committee. It is competent for this House, conforming to general parliamentary law, to do business in the way it prefers, and if a motion to commit is in order at any particular time, to create a special committee as a part of that motion. But the gentleman from Oregon allowed his opportunity to pass.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Oh, will the gentleman yield for an inquiry?

Mr. SAUNDERS. Yes.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Was there any time when the gentleman from Texas would have yielded for a motion to commit or refer?

Mr. SAUNDERS. That was the misfortune of the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. LAFFERTY. There was no opportunity.

Mr. SAUNDERS. That may be true.

Mr. LAFFERTY. The gentleman said I had the opportunity.

Mr. SAUNDERS. I said that the gentleman had missed his opportunity.

Mr. LAFFERTY. You can not miss an opportunity that you never had.

Mr. SAUNDERS. Will the gentleman let me make my statement in my own time, and in my own way. The gentleman said he had no opportunity. Be that as it may, the motion for the previous question precluded him from making his motion. I will put the case in that way if my friend prefers.

Mr. MURRAY of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MURRAY of Oklahoma. I understand that the Speaker has ruled that the motion can not be made.

The SPEAKER. No; the Speaker has made no such ruling.

Mr. SAUNDERS. The Speaker has made no ruling, and I am addressing myself to the very point of order before the House, namely, that the motion to commit is not now in order.

The SPEAKER. What does the gentleman from Virginia say about the precedence of these two motions?

Mr. SAUNDERS. I was on the point of stating that by reason of the fact that under general parliamentary law the motion for the previous question is a superior motion to a motion to commit, and the motion for the previous question having been made, the inferior motion can not be used to displace the superior motion and avoid its effect. I maintain that on this ground the motion of the gentleman from Oregon is out of order. It may be an unfortunate situation from his standpoint, but none the less his motion is not in order under general parliamentary law.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, the question was asked during this debate this afternoon what was general parliamentary law, and, if I heard correctly, the Speaker responded that it was in large part determined and controlled by what were the rules and the practices of the House.

Mr. SHERLEY. Not in all particulars.

Mr. MURDOCK. No; but in a large part.

The SPEAKER. What the Chair said was that to a large extent he would accept the rules of the House of the Sixty-second Congress as general parliamentary law, on general parliamentary propositions. Now, what is the status of this matter? Is there any general parliamentary rule that gives a motion to commit precedence over a motion for the previous question where the motion for the previous question is made?

Mr. MURDOCK. By the rules and practice of the House, yes.

Mr. SHERLEY. But that is not the practice. That is a rule.

Mr. MURDOCK. Oh, but it is the practice of the House.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to withdraw my motion until the vote is put on the previous question. Then I shall renew it, with the permission of the House.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, before the gentleman takes me off my feet, I desire to say that this rule specifies that there shall be a motion to commit, pending or after the previous question has been ordered, with or without instructions, so that there is great latitude in this matter of a motion to commit. If the practice of the House determines parliamentary law generally, and it does in large part determine general parliamentary law, then we are entitled to make this motion.

The SPEAKER. Is not the universal rule with general or special parliamentary law that the motion for the previous question is superior to the motion to commit?

Mr. MURDOCK. There was a time in the world when it was; but it is not so to-day, because we have modified general parliamentary practice by the practices of this House.

Mr. SAUNDERS. Mr. Speaker, may I submit this authority?

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is nothing before the House except the motion for the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman withdraws his motion, and the question is on ordering the previous question.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to vacate the order by which the yeas and nays were ordered and to take the vote by rising, without any other intervening motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to vacate the order by which the yeas and nays were ordered and to take the vote by rising, without any other intervening motion. Is there objection?

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas objects, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The Clerk called the roll; and there were—yeas 244, nays 122, not voting 65, as follows:

So the previous question was ordered.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

Mr. ANSBERRY with Mr. HAMILTON of New York.

Mr. AIKEN with Mr. MERRITT.

Mr. DOREMUS with Mr. MONDELL.

Mr. FINLEY with Mr. MCGUIRE of Oklahoma.

Mr. GREGG with Mr. PARKER.

Mr. HOBSON with Mr. MCLAUGHLIN.

Mr. LEWIS of Maryland with Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island.

Mr. PETERS with Mr. PORTER.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland with Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts.

Mr. BROWN of New York with Mr. SELLS.

Mr. WEBB with Mr. SMITH of Minnesota.

Mr. ASWELL with Mr. YOUNG of Michigan.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker, I offer the motion to recommit, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will suspend on that proposition for a moment. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD].

JOINT SESSION OF THE HOUSE AND SENATE TO-MORROW.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent to offer a resolution arranging for a joint session of Congress for the purpose of receiving the President of the United States to-morrow. The reason I ask to interrupt the proceedings now is that the Senate is waiting for us to act upon the resolution.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I understand, of course, that immediately after its passage, we go back to the other business.

The SPEAKER. Certainly. Is there objection to the motion of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD]? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House concurrent resolution 1.

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the two Houses of Congress assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives on Tuesday, the 8th day of April, 1913, at 12.30 o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose of receiving such communications as the President of the United States shall be pleased to make to them.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution was adopted.

THE RULES.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the——

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker, I offer the motion which I send to the Clerk's desk.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the only matter now before the House is the original question upon which the previous question is ordered—the motion of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY]—and that the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. LAFFERTY] is not in order.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker, this question has been presented quite thoroughly and I do not desire to weary the Speaker or the House with remarks to any extent at this time. The question resolves itself into the single question as to whether this House is now governed by the rules of the last House. If general parliamentary law is in force in this House until rules shall be adopted, then the motion to recommit to a select committee to be appointed by the Chair at this stage is not in order. But if the recent ruling of the Speaker that until rules are adopted the rules of the last preceding House shall obtain, and includes all rules of the last preceding House, then under this ruling the motion would be in order. But it shall be in order, pending the motion or after the previous question shall be ordered on its passage, for the Speaker to entertain a motion to commit or recommit with reference to a proper committee.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I wish to be heard. The gentleman from Oregon [Mr. LAFFERTY] seems to be reading from the same little almanac he read from a little while ago. Mr. Speaker, the House is proceeding now under general parliamentary law and not under the rules of the former Congress, because if it were proceeding under the rules of the former Congress it would not be possible to adopt those rules now, and the question we have just adopted was adopted under the general law of Jefferson's Manual. When I had the floor a moment ago, I moved the previous question. I read from page 185 of the Manual and Digest:

After the previous question shall have been ordered on the passage of a bill or joint resolution one motion to recommit shall be in order, and the Speaker shall give preference in recognition for such purpose to a Member who is opposed to the bill or joint resolution.

The gentleman refers to the rules of a former Congress, which are not in effect now.

When any question is before the House, any Member may move a previous question, "Whether that question (called the main question) shall now be put?" If it pass in the affirmative, then the main question is to be put immediately, and no man may speak anything further to it, either to add or alter.

The previous question being moved and seconded, the question from the Chair shall be, "Shall the main question be now put?" and if the nays prevail, the main question shall not then be put.

Mr. Speaker, in that regard the Rule XVI, clause 14, departed from the parliamentary law and superseded those principles to a certain extent.

If this resolution which I have offered, and upon which the previous question has been ordered, is adopted, then the rule will be in effect, and not until then. And that is all there is in the proposition until we have disposed of the resolution.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Oregon [Mr. LAFFERTY] said that the question is whether the rules of the last House are still in force.

I think the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. LAFFERTY] is somewhat in error as to his own position upon this question. There was a time when the rules of the House specifically provided that they should remain in force in the next House until the House had otherwise provided; and yet it was determined by the House that no rule adopted by one House would be binding in the next House inasmuch as the Constitution provides that the House shall make its own rules.

But, Mr. Speaker, pending the adoption of the rules of the House the general principles of parliamentary law are in force, and it has been frequently held that the best example of what is ordinary parliamentary practice is the practice and the rules of this body—the greatest parliamentary body on earth. [Applause.]

If I may, I will refer to a statement made by Mr. Speaker Reed, in which he said:

I believe in this country an assembly like this, coming together without special rules, would necessarily be remitted to the common parliamentary law, or what I should perhaps more properly call the common legislative law of the country, the foundation of which is found in Jefferson's Manual, and which has been modified by the general action of American legislative assemblies, especially by the action of this legislative body.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it is perfectly plain that those portions of the rules which provide for the appointment of special committees are not general parliamentary rules or practice, generally speaking, but where, under the rules which have been in force in the House, there have been decisions by Speakers that certain rules of the House were to be considered as general parliamentary law in the absence of the adoption of specific rules, then that practice or those rules in the House have become general parliamentary law. And although my distinguished friend from Oregon [Mr. LAFFERTY] has failed to find the precedents which establish his proposition, I will endeavor to convey them to the Speaker unless he has already had them.

In Hinds' Precedents, section 6758, a question arose as to the right, after the previous question was ordered, to refer a matter to a committee, and the Chair held:

The practice of the House heretofore decided by the Chair will prevail in ordinary legislative proceedings, and the gentleman's motion to refer to the committee is in order, notwithstanding the previous question has been ordered.

Mr. SHERLEY. Will the gentleman permit an inquiry there?

Mr. MANN. In a minute I will.

Mr. SHERLEY. I wanted to make it in connection with the gentleman's precedent. Does the citation show at what stage in the House's history the question arose?

Mr. MANN. This was before the rules of the House were adopted.

Mr. SHERLEY. I wanted to find out whether that is clearly shown.

Mr. MANN. That was before the rules of the House were adopted, and we are not without distinguished Democratic authority on this subject. One of the greatest Speakers who ever illuminated parliamentary law in this or any other body was Speaker Crisp, of Georgia, whose son is an expert parliamentarian, and whom we are proud to welcome as a Member on the floor of the House. [Applause.] In the Precedents, in section 5604, volume 5, is the general heading:

Before the adoption of rules, while the House was acting under general parliamentary law, it was held that the motion to commit was in order pending the motion for the previous question or after it had been ordered on a resolution.

Under that I quote:

On August 8, 1893, before the adoption of rules, Mr. Charles T. O'Ferrall, of Virginia, called up a resolution providing that George F. Richardson "be now sworn in as a Representative in this Congress from the fifth district of the State of Michigan.

To this an amendment by way of substitute was offered, and upon the resolution and substitute the previous question was demanded.

Mr. Dingley, of Maine, moved to commit the resolution to a special committee of five.

Mr. O'Ferrall made the point of order that the motion of Mr. Dingley was not in order, inasmuch as the previous question had been demanded upon the resolution submitted by him.

The Speaker, Charles F. Crisp, of Georgia, overruled the point of order on the ground that under parliamentary law as indicated by the rules and practice prevailing in the House of the Congresses preceding the present, the motion to commit was in order pending the demand for the previous question or after the previous question is ordered on agreeing to the resolution.

That distinguished Speaker has decided the question that the motion to commit or the motion to recommit is in order under general parliamentary law, which is binding upon parliamentary bodies before it has been written into the specific rules of the House. [Applause.]

Mr. SHERLEY rose.

The SPEAKER. Before the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Kentucky, the Chair will ask the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] what is the paragraph containing the Reed ruling which the gentleman first read?

Mr. MANN. Section 6758.

The SPEAKER. No; that was Mr. Carlisle's statement.

Mr. MANN. Yes. Section 6763, on the next page following the Carlisle decision, is the Reed opinion.

The SPEAKER. The Chair now recognizes the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SHERLEY].

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I have just read the two precedents cited by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], and I agree with him that they are in point; but I beg to submit, with all proper humility, that the decisions were not well founded in reason.

I recognize the futility of undertaking to answer two such great authorities as Speaker Crisp and Speaker Carlisle——

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHERLEY. Certainly.

Mr. MANN. I would agree with the gentleman if this were a new proposition, that was not to be considered as general parliamentary law; but the question having been decided, that settles it.

Mr. SHERLEY. That raises another question which I wanted to come to. The gentleman admits, and I believe those who will study the philosophy of parliamentary law will admit, that the rules which are acknowledged are not the arbitrary judgments of individual men. They follow a well-known general fundamental idea, and that general fundamental idea is to give to a majority of the House control over any and every matter that comes before it, to enable that majority either to hear debate on a matter or to dispense with debate on a matter, to vote immediately on a question without amendment, or to vote on it after amendments have been proposed.

Now, the very meaning of the previous question was, "Shall the original question be put?"

In its original form the proposition was in those exact words, and it was held that where it was voted not to order the previous question—in other words, not to put the question—you could not subsequently consider the question during a session.

Then the previous question was held to mean "Shall the previous question be now put?" and it was held that when it was affirmatively voted, then the proposition was to now put the original question. When it was voted down, then the House was at liberty to proceed with other motions than the original one. That was the logic of it; that was the reason of it. It is the reason to-day for the previous question.

This House in previous Congresses, for the sake of giving to certain minorities opportunity to express in an affirmative way their views, have seen fit to allow the motion to refer or to commit, as gentlemen speak of it, to be made even after a vote for the previous question; but that was because of the condition that surrounded the House after the adoption of rules which gave certain specific rights to majorities and to minorities. But under general law a ruling such as has been made, even though made by distinguished authorities, would deny to the previous question the very purpose for which it came into creation.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] says he would agree with me if this was an original proposition. We are then confronted with the question in this House whether these precedents shall be followed, because they are precedents. I believe I have a proper respect for precedent. I recognize that an adherence to it in a general sense is necessary for the stability of all law, parliamentary or other. But it is perfectly apparent that the effect of this motion, so far as present legislative action is concerned, will not be changed, no matter what the ruling may be, and I say that is apparent, because if gentlemen had ever been in a position to vote up their affirmative proposition they would have been in a position to have voted down the previous question a few minutes ago when they undertook to do it. They were not able to do that, and they will not be able to vote up their affirmative proposition. But we have an opportunity to get away from an illogical precedent at a time when the ruling will not affect the result in this House. It will not do to say that the previous question under general parliamentary law does not mean what it expressly says, because instead of using the old form, "Shall the original question now be put?" it uses the words "previous question." The House voted that the original proposal should be put——

Mr. MURDOCK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHERLEY. Yes

Mr. MURDOCK. The gentleman has recited the evolution of the previous question. The previous question formerly did mean something that it does not mean to-day. In the same way I want to point out that there was a day when the motion to lay a motion on the table was merely a temporary postponement of action, but to-day a motion to lay a proposition on the table is final. Now, the previous question has taken on through the years an entirely different nature than it had in the beginning. Does not the gentleman concede that there has been a modification of the original drastic nature of the previous question?

Mr. SHERLEY. No.

Mr. MURDOCK. I think the former Speakers have so ruled, and the Speaker to-day has so held.

Mr. SHERLEY. If it was, there would not be the necessity for affirmative action. The very fact of the rule which the gentleman relies on, and the language of it, is evidence that the people who drew it recognized that without it the right would not exist. Now, if there be some reasoning that can be advanced in favor if it, all right; but what have we here? We have the distinguished authority of two great names, Speaker Crisp and Speaker Carlisle, both so holding, and no one stating why they so held.

I again submit, with a perfect consciousness that my effort will be in vain, that the ruling is contrary to the very purpose of the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would like to ask the gentleman from Kentucky a question. The House found itself some years ago in a situation which it determined to rid itself of, and then, to get rid of the situation that it did not like, it made it imperative on the Speaker to recognize a Member of the minority preferably to make a motion to recommit after the third reading, even where the previous question has been ordered on a bill and all amendments to final passage. Now, is not the contention of the gentleman from Oregon analogous to that rule in this case?

Mr. SHERLEY. I am not discussing, and I do not think it is fair to turn the question upon what rule ought to exist. The House has seen fit heretofore, and will see fit upon the adoption of the motion of the gentleman from Texas, to give to the gentleman from Oregon a right to make such a motion, but the question now before the Chair is whether in the absence of a rule he has such a right. I say that he has not, notwithstanding the precedents, because to say that he shall have the right is to deny the purpose of the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The rule about the motion to recommit was intended for the purpose of giving the minority the chance to have its proposition voted upon. If that is true, what is the reason the minority has not as much right to have it voted upon before the rule is adopted?

Mr. SHERLEY. There are many rights the minority has under the rules adopted by the House that it would not have under general parliamentary law. For instance, it may have the right under the rules to a certain numerical representation on committees, but under the general parliamentary law there is no rule by which the Chair would be compelled to give certain representations to the minority on committees.

The SPEAKER. Another question; the general parliamentary law has been decided by at least three great Speakers, Mr. Crisp, Mr. Reed, and Mr. Carlisle, to be the parliamentary law as modified by legislative experience in the United States. If that is true, does not a rule that has prevailed in the House a good while and the rulings upon it become a part of the general parliamentary law?

Mr. SHERLEY. I think if the statement of the Chair was true in its entirety it would, but I do not think it is true. I do not think the statement of Mr. Reed which was read by the gentleman from Illinois warrants so broad an assertion, but it states that certain practices of the House were indicative of parliamentary law. It does not imply that every rule of the House becomes a part of the parliamentary law, but may become a part of it because of the reason for it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is prepared to rule. The Chair desires to call to the attention of the whole membership of the House the first two or three sentences in Jefferson's Manual:

> Mr. Onslow, the ablest among the speakers of the House of Commons, used to say "It was a maxim he had often heard when he was a young man from old and experienced members that nothing tended more to throw power into the hands of administration and those who acted with the majority of the House of Commons than a neglect of or departure from the rules of proceeding; that these forms as instituted by our ancestors operated as a check and control on the actions of the majority, and that they were in many instances a shelter and protection to the minority against the attempts of power."

Jefferson goes on to indorse that. The Chair would not feel that he is slavishly bound to follow the decisions of any Speaker, or even of all Speakers, if he were certain that he was right; but some things come to be a settled practice in this country. For instance, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and the present occupant of the chair have frequently talked privately about the word "amendments" as used in the Constitution with respect to the power of the Senate to propose them to revenue bills which must originate in the House. The Senate has the right to amend revenue bills. Privately the gentleman and I agreed—and we agree now, no doubt—that that phraseology giving the Senate the power to amend a revenue bill never meant originally that the Senate should have the right to strike out everything after the enacting clause in a revenue bill and substitute an entirely new bill. Yet that very situation arose at the beginning of the first session of the last Congress, or shortly after it was organized. The gentleman from Illinois then raised that very point. The present occupant of the chair overruled his point, but stated in overruling it that if he had been the Speaker of the first House and that same point had been raised he would have sustained it, but that for 122 years the Senate had proceeded upon the theory—and the House had acquiesced in it—that the Senate had that power, and it became a settled practice.

As the Chair stated a while ago the House some years ago concluded that there ought to be a provision in the rules by which a Member by a motion to recommit could always get a vote upon his proposition. The Chair believes that is right, and he believes that all of these decisions by Mr. Speaker Carlisle, Mr. Speaker Crisp, and Mr. Speaker Reed are right. The first one—and by the way the Chair will state that it was the first thing that ever happened after he came into Congress 20 years ago—is the decision by Mr. Speaker Crisp on a point of order made by Mr. O'Ferrall, afterwards governor of Virginia. The Chair reads from Hinds' Precedents, volume 5, section 5604:

> On August 8, 1893, before the adoption of rules, Mr. Charles T. O'Ferrall, of Virginia, called up a resolution providing that George F. Richardson "be now sworn in as a Representative in this Congress from the fifth district of the State of Michigan."
> To this Mr. Julius C. Burrows, of Michigan, had submitted an amendment in the nature of a substitute.
> Upon the resolution and substitute Mr. O'Ferrall demanded the previous question, the question being on ordering the previous question on the resolution submitted by Mr. O'Ferrall, including the amendment thereto proposed by Mr. Burrows.
> Mr. Nelson Dingley, jr., of Maine, moved to commit the resolution to a special committee of five, with instructions to report thereon within 10 days.
> Mr. O'Ferrall thereupon submitted the point of order that the motion of Mr. Dingley was not in order, inasmuch as the previous question had been demanded upon the resolution submitted by him, including the amendment thereto submitted by Mr. Burrows.
> The Speaker overruled the point of order on the ground that under parliamentary law as indicated by the rules and practice prevailing in the House of the Congresses preceding the present the motion to commit was in order pending the demand for the previous question or after the previous question is ordered on agreeing to the resolution.

The Speaker in that instance was Mr. Speaker Crisp, as level-headed a man as ever sat in this chair. It will be a long time before there are as many great names connected with one decision as there are with that one.

Quoting further from Hinds' Precedents, volume 5, section 6758:

Before rules are adopted the House is governed by general parliamentary law, but the Speakers have been inclined to give weight to the precedents of the House in modifying the usual constructions of that law.

Before the adoption of rules the motion to commit has been admitted after the ordering of the previous question.

On December 12, 1887, before rules had been adopted by the House, a resolution was presented relating to the certificate of election of Owen G. Chase, claiming to be elected a Delegate from the Territory of Cimarron.

Mr. Ransom Dunham, of Illinois, rising to a parliamentary inquiry, asked how the resolution could be in order.

The Speaker replied:

Under the general parliamentary law of the country, which permits the introduction of a proposition whenever a gentleman is recognized for that purpose, it is for the House, of course, to say what it will do with the proposition. It may refer it to a committee, lay it upon the table, or refuse to pass upon it in any shape.

Again, on the same day, the previous question was ordered on a resolution of inquiry relating to the examination of a certain harbor, which had been presented.

Mr. James H. Blount, of Georgia, having proposed a motion to refer the resolution, the Speaker said:

The practice of the House heretofore decided by the Chair will prevail in ordinary legislative proceedings, and the gentleman's motion to refer to the committee is in order, notwithstanding the previous question has been ordered.

That was a decision by Mr. Speaker John G. Carlisle, and certainly he ranks among the great Speakers.

It turns out that Mr. Speaker Reed's dictum, which agrees substantially with these two decisions, was made in an argument upon the floor of the House when he was not Speaker, but he took the same identical ground that these two great Speakers take, and so there are three.

The Chair overrules the point of order and recognizes the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. LAFFERTY].

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker, I ask to have the resolution reported.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk proceeded to report the resolution.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. I understood the gentleman was going to offer, or proposed to offer, a motion to refer. There is no such motion yet reported.

The SPEAKER. That is what the Chair supposed.

Mr. LAFFERTY. The Clerk did not report the motion.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

By Mr. LAFFERTY: I offer the following as a substitute for the pending resolution:

I move to commit the resolution to a select committee, to be appointed by the Speaker, to be composed of seven members, with instructions to report back to the House as a substitute therefor, together with the views and recommendations of said select committee, a resolution in substance as follows:

Resolved, That the rules of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-second Congress, except Rule 31, be adopted as the rules of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-third Congress, with the following amendments thereto:

FIRST.

PROVIDING FOR YEA-AND-NAY VOTES AND A RECORD OF PROCEEDINGS IN ALL STANDING COMMITTEES.

[Matter stricken out is in brackets; new matter is in italics.]

Amend Rule XI by adding after clause 57 a new paragraph, to read as follows:

"58. Each standing committee shall keep an exact record of the attendance of each of its members, and also of its proceedings, which record shall be open to public inspection at all reasonable times; and a record vote, upon the demand of any member of a committee, shall be had upon any motion to favorably report to the House for consideration any bill that has been pending before the committee for a period of 30 days or longer, and no motion to table the motion for such favorable report, or other proceeding to postpone or evade action thereon by the committee, shall be in order."

SECOND.

AUTHORIZING TWO MOTIONS TO RECOMMIT.

Amend clause 4 of Rule XVI to read as follows:

"4. When a question is under debate, no motion shall be received but to adjourn, to lay on the table, for the previous question (which motions shall be decided without debate), to postpone to a day certain, to refer, or to amend, or postpone indefinitely; which several motions shall have precedence in the foregoing order; and no motion to postpone to a day certain, to refer, or to postpone indefinitely, being decided, shall be again allowed on the same day, at the same stage of the question. After the previous question shall have been ordered on the passage of a bill or joint resolution [one motion], not to exceed two motions to recommit shall be in order, preference being given, first, to the most numerous minority party, and, next, to the second most numerous minority party represented in the House, and the Speaker shall give preference in recognition for such purpose to a Member of such minority party who is opposed to the bill or joint resolution."

Amend clause 1 of Rule XVII to read as follows:

"1. There shall be a motion for the previous question, which, being ordered by a majority of Members voting, if a quorum be present, shall have the effect to cut off all debate and bring the House to a direct vote upon the immediate question or questions on which it has been asked and ordered. The previous question may be asked and ordered upon a single motion, a series of motions allowable under the rules, or an amendment or amendments, or may be made to embrace all authorized motions or amendments, and include the bill to its passage or rejection. It shall be in order, pending the motion for, or after the previous question shall have been ordered on its passage, for the Speaker to entertain and submit [a motion to commit] not to exceed two motions to commit, with or without instructions, to a standing or select committee."

THIRD.

PROVIDING FOR THE READING OF BILLS THE THIRD TIME BY TITLE ONLY.

Change clause 1 of Rule XXI to read as follows:

"1. Bills and joint resolutions on their passage shall be read the first time by title and the second time in full, when, if the previous question is ordered, the Speaker shall state the question to be: Shall the bill be engrossed and read a third time? And, if decided in the affirmative, it shall be read the third time by title [unless the reading in full is demanded by a Member), and the question shall then be put upon its passage."

FOURTH.

PROVIDING FOR YEAS AND NAYS IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE HOUSE.

After clause 8 of Rule XXIII insert the following new paragraph:

"9. The yeas and nays shall be taken in the Committee of the Whole House on any question, at the desire of one-fifth of the Members present, and such record vote shall be reported to the House and entered upon the Journal."

FIFTH.

LIMITING GENERAL DEBATE UPON PRIVATE BILLS TO TWO HOURS.

Amend clause 6 of Rule XXIV by adding thereto the following:

"General debate upon bills considered under this rule shall be limited to two hours."

SIXTH.

LIMITING GENERAL DEBATE UPON BILLS CONSIDERED ON CALENDAR WEDNESDAY TO TWO HOURS.

Amend clause 7 of Rule XXIV by adding thereto the following:

"General debate upon bills considered under this rule shall be limited to two hours."

SEVENTH.

SETTING APART A SPECIAL ADDITIONAL DAY FOR THE CONSIDERATION OF PRIVATE BILLS.

After clause 8 of Rule XXIV add the following new paragraph:

"9. On the last Thursday of each month, after the disposal of such business on the Speaker's table as requires reference only, it shall be in order to entertain a motion for the House to resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House to consider bills on the Private Calendar reported from the Committee on Claims, the Committee on Military Affairs, the Committee on Naval Affairs, and the Committee on the Public Lands. General debate upon bills considered under this rule shall be limited to two hours."

EIGHTH.

SETTING APART SPECIAL DAYS FOR MOTIONS TO DISCHARGE COMMITTEES.

Amend clause 4 of Rule XXVII to read as follows:

"4. Any Member may present to the Clerk a motion in writing to discharge a committee from further consideration of any public bill or joint resolution which may have been referred to such committee [fifteen] thirty days prior thereto. All such motions shall be entered in the Journal and printed on a calendar to be known as a Calendar of Motions to Discharge Committees. [After the Unanimous Consent Calendar shall have been called on any Monday, and motions to suspend the rules have been disposed of] On the second and fourth Tuesdays in each month, after the disposal of such business on the Speaker's table as requires reference only, it shall be in order to call up any such motion which shall have been entered at least seven days prior thereto. Recognition for such motions shall be in the order in which they have been entered. When such motion shall be called up the bill shall be read by title only prior to a second being ordered by tellers, and no such motion shall be entertained as to a bill or joint resolution the title of which contains more than 100 words; after the reading of the bill by title the motion shall not be submitted to the House unless seconded by [a majority by tellers] one-third of the Members by tellers. If such motion fails of a second, it shall be immediately stricken from the calendar and shall not be thereafter placed thereon. If a second be ordered, debate on such motion shall be limited to 20 minutes, one-half thereof in favor of the proposition and one-half in opposition thereto. Such motions shall require for adoption an affirmative vote of a majority of the membership of the House. Whenever such a motion shall prevail the bill so taken from the consideration of a committee shall thereupon be placed upon its appropriate calendar, and upon call of the committee from which any bill has been so taken it may be called up for consideration by any Member prior to any bill reported by said committee at a date subsequent to the discharge of said committee: Provided, No Member shall have upon such calendar more than two motions at the same time."

NINTH.

PROVIDING FOR A COMMITTEE ON EQUAL SUFFRAGE.

Amend Rule X by adding at the end of clause 1 a new paragraph to read as follows:

"On Equal Suffrage, to consist of 15 Members."

Amend Rule XI by adding after clause 52 a new paragraph to read as follows:

"All proposed legislation concerning equal suffrage; to the Committee on Equal Suffrage."

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to be heard prior to anybody else being recognized.

The SPEAKER. Anybody has the right to move the previous question, if he can get recognition, under the rules.

Mr. LAFFERTY. I thought under the rules that I had the permission a while ago. If the gentleman yields the floor, except for the purpose of a very important question, where a gentleman offers a resolution, is he not entitled to be recognized for an hour before anybody is recognized to offer the previous question?

Mr. FITZGERALD. The previous question has already been ordered. Section 6582 of Hinds' Precedents says a motion to recommit made after the previous question is ordered is not debatable. The gentleman from Texas, moving the previous question, has shut off debate.

Mr. MANN rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Illinois rise?

Mr. MANN. Simply on the point of order which has been made.

The SPEAKER. There was not any point of order made.

Mr. MANN. I understood the gentleman from Oregon claimed he was entitled to recognition to debate his motion to refer, and I was simply seeking to call the Chair's attention to the fact the previous question has been ordered on the original motion, which itself cuts off debate on the motion to refer but does not cut off an amendment.

Mr. LAFFERTY. The previous question having been ordered without debate on this motion, is not 40 minutes allowable under the rules?

Mr. FITZGERALD. That is an incidental question.

Mr. LAFFERTY. It is not. It is a subsidiary question, which expedites the business of the House.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. LAFFERTY].

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker, I demand a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 25, noes 229.

So the motion to commit was rejected.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oregon demands the yeas and nays. Those in favor of ordering the yeas and nays will rise and stand until they are counted. [After counting.] Twenty-four gentlemen have arisen in the affirmative—not a sufficient number. The yeas and nays are refused. The question is on the resolution of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY].

The resolution was agreed to.

SWEARING IN A MEMBER.

Mr. CLINE appeared at the bar of the House and took the oath of office.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for about two minutes to make an announcement.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] asks unanimous consent to address the House for two minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Speaker, a Democratic caucus has been called to meet in this Hall to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock. The call was issued at a time when it was believed there would be no session of the House to-morrow. Since the resolution introduced by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] has been adopted and the House will meet to-morrow, it will be impracticable to hold the caucus in this Hall until after the session of the House. I desire to announce, therefore, that while the caucus will be called to order, in pursuance of the call, at 11 o'clock in the morning, the chairman will immediately entertain a motion to recess or adjourn until after the meeting of the House, say, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

I make this announcement in order that members of the caucus need not take the trouble to come here at 11 o'clock, because, whether there is a quorum or not, the meeting of the caucus will be postponed until 3 o'clock, as indicated.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. BALTZ, by unanimous consent, at the request of Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois, was granted leave of absence indefinitely, on account of sickness.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of a resolution.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas moves that the House adjourn.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the House resolution which I send up to the Clerk's desk.

Mr. SHERLEY. I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 34 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, April 8, 1913, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

SENATE.

TUESDAY, April 8, 1913.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D.

ATLEE POMERENE, a Senator from the State of Ohio, appeared in his seat to-day.

THE JOURNAL.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I ask that the further reading of the Journal be dispensed with.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I think the Journal of the first day of the session, at least, ought to be read, and I must object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is objection, and the Secretary will proceed with the reading of the Journal.

The Secretary resumed and concluded the reading of the Journal of yesterday's proceedings.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President, I do not see the Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE] in his seat. I was present at the time, and I do not recall that the Senator from Missouri objected to the consideration of the concurrent resolution from the House of Representatives, although it is so noted in the Journal.

Mr. SMOOT. He made a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I think he made a parliamentary inquiry, but my recollection is that he did not object to the consideration of the concurrent resolution.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator from Missouri, Mr. President, simply submitted to the Chair the question whether the concurrent resolution could then be taken up, except by unanimous consent. He did not make a formal point of order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Journal will be corrected accordingly, and if there is no further objection the Journal will stand approved as corrected.

Mr. STONE subsequently said: Mr. President, as a matter of privilege, I desire to have the Journal corrected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will state for the benefit of the Senator from Missouri that the Journal was ordered corrected.

Mr. STONE. I have just come into the Senate. My attention has been called to the matter. I do not know how it was corrected.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK] and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] had it corrected to correspond with what occurred yesterday.

Mr. STONE. I desired to make a statement and to have the Journal accordingly corrected. I did not object to the consideration of the concurrent resolution referred to, coming from the House. I merely raised the question of order as to whether under the rules of the Senate the resolution could be considered on yesterday without unanimous consent. The Chair held to the contrary, and I acquiesced. I do not care to have the Journal show that I objected to the consideration of the concurrent resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Journal has already been ordered corrected in accordance with the statement of the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. STONE. Then my remarks are unnecessary.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Attention was called to the fact by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK] in the absence of the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. STONE. That is satisfactory.

IMPORTATION OF TEAS.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In accordance with the Senate resolution adopted on the 28th of February, 1913, calling upon the Secretary of the Treasury to transmit certain correspondence, rulings, reports, and orders relative to the importation into this country of green teas or colored teas, the Chair presents the original documents, which the Secretary of the Treasury says, in his judgment, should be furnished instead of any report. The papers will be referred to the Committee on Finance.

DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate, pursuant to law, the annual report of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution for the year ended October 11, 1912, which was referred to the Committee on Printing.

DEMOTION OF WILLIAM HALL AND OTHERS.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication, dated March 3, 1913, from the then Postmaster General, Mr. Hitchcock, transmitting a supplementary list of papers from the Post Office Department relating to the demotion in 1911 of William Hall, E. H. Erwin, R. E. Erwin, J. J. Negley, and E. P. Rodman, clerks in the Railway Mail Service, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

SENATOR FROM ILLINOIS.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I present the certificate of the governor of Illinois certifying that Hon. JAMES HAMILTON LEWIS was duly elected by the Legislature of Illinois a Senator to represent that State in the United States Senate for the term of six years. I ask that the credentials may be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the credentials.

The credentials of JAMES HAMILTON LEWIS, chosen by the Legislature of the State of Illinois a Senator from that State for the term beginning March 4, 1913, were read and ordered to be filed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of New Mexico, which was referred to the Committee on Industrial Expositions and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint resolution 17, with regard to the international exposition and celebration to be held in El Paso, Tex., to commemorate the building and completion of the Elephant Butte Dam.

Whereas through the efforts of the Government of the United States, acting by and through the Reclamation Service, the largest irrigation enterprise in the United States, namely, the Rio Grande project or, as it is otherwise known, the Elephant Butte Dam, located 110 miles north of El Paso, Tex., and 90 miles north of Las Cruces, N. Mex., on the Rio Grande, in the fertile Rio Grande Valley, is to be completed during the year 1915; and

Whereas by virtue of such Rio Grande project thousands of acres of land will be reclaimed and made available for beautiful and attractive and productive orchards and homes; and

Whereas the people of El Paso County, Tex., and the people of the Rio Grande Valley in New Mexico are to hold a great irrigation and industrial exposition in El Paso in the year 1915 to commemorate the building and completion of the Elephant Butte Dam, at which celebration it is planned to officially open the floodgates of the great irrigation project; and

Whereas the said irrigation project is, in a sense, an international project, in this, that the same is being built by the Government of the United States, by virtue of a treaty with the Republic of Mexico, which treaty provides, amongst other things, that the said Republic of Mexico shall receive yearly from the said dam 60,000 acre-feet of water; and

Whereas it is appropriate that the United States should formally signify to the Republic of Mexico that the project is nearing completion and that the United States would welcome the participation of the Republic of Mexico in the celebration so as aforesaid to be held in El Paso, Tex.; and

Whereas it is fitting that the Government of the United States should participate in the said celebration because of the successful building of the greatest of the irrigation projects on the Rio Grande, which is commonly known as the American Nile, which project rivals the great English Assouan Dam on the Nile River in Egypt: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Legislature of the State of New Mexico (the Senate concurring therein), That a vote of thanks and appreciation is hereby extended by the State of New Mexico to the Government of the United States and to the officials of the Reclamation Service of the United States for their active interest in the needs of the State of New Mexico and for the energy and ability displayed by them in the conception and execution of the work upon said irrigation project; and be it further

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be, and it is hereby, requested by the State of New Mexico to officially ask the Republic of Mexico to participate in the celebration and exposition to be held in said city of El Paso in the year 1915; and be it further

Resolved, That the State of New Mexico hereby extends a cordial invitation to the President of the United States to visit the Rio Grande Valley in the year 1915 during the holding of said celebration and exposition and to participate in the formal opening of the said irrigation project; and be it further

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be, and it is hereby, requested to make an appropriation in the sum of $250,000 in order that the Government of the United States may participate in the said celebration; and be it further

Resolved, That duly authenticated copies of this resolution shall be immediately made and sent by the secretary of state of New Mexico to the President of the United States and to the President of the Senate of the United States and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and to Senators ALBERT B. FALL, THOMAS B. CATRON, C. A. CULBERSON, and MORRIS SHEPPARD, and to Congressmen HARVEY B. FERGUSSON, CHARLES F. CURRY, and W. R. SMITH, and to the Director of the Reclamation Service of the United States.

I hereby certify that the word "the" interlined on eighth line of page 2 was placed there before signing.

E. C. DE BACA,
President of the Senate.
ISIDORO ARMIJO,
Chief Clerk of the Senate.
ROMAN L. BACA,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
FRANK STAPLIN,
Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Approved March 13, 1913.

WILLIAM C. MCDONALD,
Governor of New Mexico.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
STATE OF NEW MEXICO,
OFFICE OF SECRETARY OF STATE.

I, Antonio Lucero, secretary of state of the State of New Mexico, do hereby certify—

That I have carefully compared the annexed copy of joint resolution No. 17 of the Senate and House of Representative of the State of New Mexico in Legislature assembled, with the original thereof as filed in the office of the secretary of state of the State of New Mexico on the 13th day of March, A. D. 1913, and that it is a full, true, and complete transcript therefrom and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have caused the seal of the State to be hereunto affixed.

Given under my hand at Santa Fe this 13th day of March, A. D. 1913, and in the one hundred and thirty-seventh year of the independence of the United States of America.

[SEAL.] ANTONIO LUCERO,
Secretary of State.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a concurrent resolution of the General Assembly of the Territory of Hawaii, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas it is necessary for the proper industrial and commercial development of the Territory of Hawaii that there shall be at least one suitable terminal port for the accommodation of vessels on each of the four principal islands—Hawaii, Maui, Oahu, and Kauai—of this Territory; and that, in view of the size and contour of the largest island, Hawaii, there should be one or more such ports on each side thereof; and

Whereas surveys, or surveys and improvements, have been authorized by the Congress for one such port on each of the islands of Maui, Oahu, and Kauai, and on the east side of the island of Hawaii, but not yet for any such port on the west and south side of the island of Hawaii: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Congress of the United States is hereby respectfully requested to authorize and direct the Secretary of War to cause a preliminary examination and survey to be made of the harbors on the west and south coast of the island of Hawaii with a view to determining the best location for a port or ports on that coast; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States and the Delegate in Congress from Hawaii.

THE SENATE OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, March 8, 1913.

We hereby certify that the foregoing concurrent resolution was this day adopted in the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii.

ERIC A. KNUDSEN,
President of the Senate.
JOHN H. WISE,
Clerk of the Senate.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, March 8, 1913.

We hereby certify that the foregoing concurrent resolution was this day adopted in the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii.

H. L. HOLSTEIN,
Speaker House of Representatives.
EDWARD WOODWARD,
Clerk House of Representatives.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair presents a joint memorial of the Legislature of the State of Washington in favor of adequate fortifications and military defenses of the harbors of the Pacific coast. The memorial will be referred to the Committee on Coast Defenses.

Mr. JONES. I think it should go to the Committee on Military Affairs as it relates to fortifications.

There being no objection, the memorial was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
STATE OF WASHINGTON,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

I, I. M. Howell, secretary of state of the State of Washington, do hereby certify that I have carefully compared the annexed copy of senate joint memorial No. 11, passed February 11 and March 7, 1913, by the Thirteenth Legislature of the State of Washington, with the original enrolled copy of said joint memorial now on file in this office and find the same to be a full, true, and correct copy of said original, and of the whole thereof, together with all official indorsements thereon.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed hereto the seal of the State of Washington, at the capitol in Olympia, this 11th day of March, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.]

I. M. HOWELL,
Secretary of State.

Senate joint memorial 11.

To the President of the United States of America, the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, the Secretary of War, and the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Washington:

We, your memorialist, the Senate of the State of Washington, the House concurring, assembled in regular session of the Thirteenth Legislature of the State of Washington, most respectfully represent and pray as follows:

Whereas the State of Washington has many wealthy cities and towns wholly dependent upon the national seacoast defense for protection from invasion from the Pacific Ocean; and

Whereas by the fourth biennial report of the State board of tax commissioners of the State of Washington the assessed valuation of all of the property in the State of Washington, taxable under the statutes of said State, appears to be $1,005,086,251; and

Whereas Grays and Willapa Harbors are wholly without military defenses of any kind or nature; and

Whereas the whole of Washington and Oregon is accessible from the Pacific Ocean through Grays and Willapa Harbors; and

Whereas the naval strength of the United States now stationed on the Pacific coast would be wholly inadequate, in case of threatened invasion, to properly protect the Pacific coast and repel any attempted invasion from the Pacific Ocean; and

Whereas petitions have been filed with Senator W. L. JONES, of the United States Senate Committee on Military Affairs, which petitions were signed by taxpayers of the States of Washington and Oregon, that the petitioners thereon represented $332,898,097, as appraised by the taxing officers of said States and duly certified by such taxing officers, praying that Grays and Willapa Harbors be fortified; and

Whereas many banking, milling, manufacturing, and coal mining corporations and wholesale merchants signed said petitions, whose assets could not be shown by certificates of the State board of tax commissioners of the States of Washington and Oregon, in addition to the amounts first above shown to be so verified by certificates; and

Whereas the following commercial bodies of the Northwest have, by resolutions duly and regularly adopted, found that the fortification of Grays and Willapa Harbors was a public necessity, to wit: Portland Chamber of Commerce, Portland, Oreg.; New Seattle Chamber of Commerce, Seattle, Wash.; Aberdeen Chamber of Commerce, Aberdeen, Wash.; Montesano Chamber of Commerce, Montesano, Wash.; Spokane Chamber of Commerce, Spokane, Wash.; Olympia Chamber of Commerce, Olympia, Wash; and the Centralia Chamber of Commerce, Centralia, Wash.; and

Whereas Gen. Marion P. Maus, commanding the department of the Columbia, United States Army, has recommended the fortification of Grays and Willapa Harbors in his last report: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of Washington (the House concurring), That the President of the United States of America, the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, the Secretary of War, and the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Washington be, and they are hereby, urged to take such action as will lead to the speedy planting of adequate fortifications and military defenses capable of repelling any attempted invasion through said harbors from the Pacific Ocean.

The secretary of state is hereby directed to immediately transmit a certified copy of this memorial to his excellency the President of the United States of America, to the honorable Secretary of War, and to each of the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Washington.

Passed the senate February 11, 1913.

LOUIS F. HART,
President of the Senate.

Passed the house March 7, 1913.

HOWARD D. TAYLOR,
Speaker of the House.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of North Dakota, which was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

A joint resolution ratifying a proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Whereas the Sixty-second Congress of the United States of America, at the second session, by a constitutional majority of two-thirds thereof, made and passed the following proposal to amend the Constitution of the United States of America in the following words, to wit:

"Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution providing that Senators shall be elected by the people of the several States.

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That in lieu of the first paragraph of section 3 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States, and in lieu of so much of paragraph 2 of the same section as relates to the filling of vacancies, the following be proposed as an amendment to the Constitution, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the States:

"'The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, elected by the people thereof for six years, and each Senator shall have one vote. The electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State legislatures.

"'When vacancies happen in the representation of any State in the Senate the executive authority of such State shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies: Provided, That the legislature of any State may empower the executive thereof to make temporary appointments until the people fill the vacancies by election as the legislature may direct.

"'This amendment shall not be so construed as to affect the election or term of any Senator chosen before it becomes valid as part of the Constitution.'"

Therefore be it

Resolved by the Legislative Assembly of the State of North Dakota, duly convened, That the said foregoing proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America be, and the same is hereby, ratified by the Legislative Assembly of the State of North Dakota; and be it further

Resolved, That certified copies of this joint resolution be forwarded by the governor of this State to the Secretary of State of the United States of America, at Washington, and to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the National Congress.

Approved March 7, 1913, 9.25 a. m.

J. H. FRANCE,
Speaker of the House.
M. J. GEORGE,
Chief Clerk of the House.
A. T. KRABBEL,
President of the Senate.
W. D. AUSTIN,
Secretary of the Senate.

This certifies that the within bill originated in the House of the Thirteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of North Dakota and is known on the records of that body as house bill No. 5.

M. J. GEORGE,
Chief Clerk of the House.

Filed in this office this 18th day of February, 1913.

THOMAS HALL,
Secretary of State.

STATE OF NORTH DAKOTA,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE,
BISMARCK, N. DAK.

I, Thomas Hall, secretary of state of North Dakota and keeper of the great seal of said State, do hereby certify that the foregoing three pages, hereto attached, contain a true and correct copy of a joint resolution ratifying that amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing for the direct election of United States Senators, as passed by the Thirteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of North Dakota, which was approved by the governor on the 18th day of February, A. D. 1913, the original of which is now on file in my office.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State at Bismarck, N. Dak., this 6th day of March, A. D. 1913.

THOMAS HALL,
Secretary of State.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of New Mexico, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 3, requesting Congress to pass an act to provide for the purchase of all land grants in New Mexico; place the land of said grants in the homestead class; segregate the mineral rights in said lands and place them under the United States mining laws for location and development; classify said lands into agricultural, grazing, timber, and mineral lands; and provide for the lease and sale of same.

Whereas the State of New Mexico has within its boundaries a number of large land grants which contain valuable agricultural, grazing, timber, and mineral lands, now owned and held by individuals and corporations, which are being offered for sale, and which ought to be developed, but which are being sold, subdivided, and developed too slowly; and

Whereas it is deemed advisable that New Mexico should provide for the immigration of more people to said State, and is also in need of more developed land on which to base and collect taxes for support of the county and State governments; and

Whereas the opening of such land grants would increase the population of the State very materially within a few years, and assist in building up and developing the State generally for the good of the people and the State government; and

Whereas said land grants are being offered for sale at reasonable prices in large acreage, but of which the individual settlers can not buy small parcels, and the State of New Mexico is unable to purchase said lands; and

Whereas the best part of New Mexico's mineral resources are contained within the boundaries of said land grants and are prohibited from being opened up and developed by prospectors and miners, and thereby the progress of the State is being greatly hindered: Now, therefore,

We respectfully pray, in the name of the people of the State of New Mexico, that the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America pass an act providing that the United States shall purchase the said land grants; that said lands shall be classified into agricultural, grazing, timber, and mineral lands; that such of said lands as may be deemed desirable shall be placed under the homestead laws and opened to the citizens of the United States for settlement; that provision shall be made for the lease and sale of the grazing and timber lands, if any of such lands are not placed in the homestead class; that all mineral rights in said land grants so purchased shall revert back to the United States of America, and said mineral lands shall be opened and subject to location and development under the United States laws and regulations; and that all such lands shall be classified and leased or sold to the people at what it cost the United States.

Resolved, That one copy of this memorial be sent to each, the President of the United States, the President of the United States Senate, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, by the secretary of state of New Mexico.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of New Mexico, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF NEW MEXICO,
OFFICE OF SECRETARY OF STATE.

I, Antonio Lucero, secretary of state of the State of New Mexico, do hereby certify that there was filed for record in this office at 10.05 o'clock a. m., on the 15th day of March, A. D. 1913, Senate joint resolution No. 20, ratifying the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing for the election of Senators by direct vote of the people, and, also, that I have compared the following copy of the same, with the original thereof now on file, and declare it to be a correct transcript therefrom and of the whole thereof.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State of New Mexico, at the city of Santa Fe, the capital, on this 15th day of March, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] ANTONIO LUCERO,
Secretary of State.

Senate joint resolution 20, ratifying the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing for the election of Senators by direct vote of the people.

Whereas at the second session of the Sixty-second Congress of the United States of America a joint resolution was duly adopted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, as follows, to wit:

"That in lieu of the first paragraph of section 3 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States, and in lieu of so much of paragraph 2 of the same section as relates to the filling of vacancies, the following be proposed as an amendment to the Constitution, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the States:

"'This amendment shall not be so construed as to affect the election or term of any Senator chosen before it becomes valid as part of the Constitution.'"

Therefore be it

Resolved by the Legislature of the State of New Mexico, That the said proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States be, and the same is hereby, ratified, and that certified copies of this resolution be forwarded by the governor to the Secretary of State of the United States, to the President of the Senate of the United States, and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States.

E. A. MIERA,
President pro tempore of the Senate.

WILLIAM C. MCDONALD,
Governor of the State of New Mexico.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of South Dakota, which was referred to the Committee on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF SOUTH DAKOTA,
DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of South Dakota, ss:

I, Frank Glasner, secretary of state of the State of South Dakota, do hereby certify that the annexed joint resolution, to wit, house joint resolution No. 23, was duly passed by the 1913 session of the Legislature of the State of South Dakota, approved by the governor, and is now in full force and effect.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of South Dakota this 8th day of March, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] FRANK GLASNER,
Secretary of State.
By J. T. NELSON,
Assistant Secretary of State.

House joint resolution 23, declaring in favor of retention, control, and administration of the national forests and the forest reserves of the United States by the Federal Government.

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of South Dakota (the Senate concurring).

SECTION 1. That it is, and is hereby, declared to be the sense of the Legislature of the State of South Dakota that the national forests and forests reserves belonging to the United States, wherever located, should continue to be and remain in the exclusive ownership, possession, control, and administration of the Federal Government. That the policy of protection, conservation, and development of the National Federal resources embraced in said national forests and forest reserves can and will be best promoted and safeguarded and the public interests involved therein best subserved by such Federal retention of ownership, possession, control, and administration.

SEC. 2. That a copy of these resolutions be forthwith forwarded to the Speaker of the National House of Representatives and to the President of the Senate of the United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a resolution passed by the Legislature of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS, 1913.

Resolution relative to the passage by the Congress of the United States of laws relative to the sale of small fruits.

Whereas there is now no uniform legislation in the United States governing the sale of berries, cherries, currants, and other small fruits by standard dry measure; and

Whereas at various seasons berries, cherries, currants, and small fruits are shipped from certain States for sale and distribution in other States; and

Whereas the same are shipped and sold in small boxes, baskets, or other receptacles which are not uniform in size or measure, but which are generally of less capacity than standard dry measure; and

Whereas it is desirable that such berries, cherries, currants, and small fruits be sold by standard dry measure, and that the boxes, baskets, or other receptacles in which they are to be sold shall contain standard measure: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the General Court of Massachusetts hereby requests the Congress of the United States to pass laws and regulations which will provide that all berries, cherries, currants, and small fruits shall be sold in the United States by standard dry measure, and, further, that the baskets, boxes, or other receptacles in which they are sold shall conform to standard dry measure.

Resolved, That certified copies of these resolutions be sent by the secretary of the Commonwealth to the presiding officers of both branches of Congress and to each of the Senators and Representatives from Massachusetts.

In house of representatives, adopted March 17, 1913.
In senate, adopted in concurrence March 20, 1913.
A true copy.
Attest:

FRANK J. DONAHUE,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas it appears from investigation recently made by the Senate of the United States, and otherwise, that polygamy still exists in certain places in the United States, notwithstanding prohibitory statutes enacted by the several States thereof; and

Whereas the practice of polygamy is generally condemned by the people of the United States, and there is a demand for the more effectual prohibition thereof by placing the subject under Federal jurisdiction and control, at the same time reserving to each State the right to make and enforce its own laws relating to marriage and divorce: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate (the assembly concurring), That the application be made, and hereby is made, to Congress, under the provisions of Article V of the Constitution of the United States, for the calling of a convention to propose an amendment to the Constitution of the United States whereby polygamy and polygamous cohabitation shall be prohibited, and Congress shall be given power to enforce such prohibition by appropriate legislation.

Resolved further, That the legislatures of all other States of the United States, now in session or when next convened, be, and they hereby are, respectfully requested to join in this application by the adoption of this or an equivalent resolution.

Resolved further, That the secretary of state be, and he hereby is, directed to transmit copies of this application to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States and to the several Members of said bodies representing this State therein; also to transmit copies hereof to the legislatures of all other States of the United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of New Mexico, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 1, adopted by a unanimous vote of both House of Representatives and Senate of the State of New Mexico, March 13, 1913, memorializing the President and the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America to enact just and appropriate homestead and forest-reserve laws for the arid regions and to administer them with due regard to the rights of actual settlers, and asking for the restoration to the public domain of certain lands in New Mexico.

Whereas President Elect Woodrow Wilson, in a public address before the Chicago Association of Commerce, at Chicago, January 11, 1913, announced as follows:

"Natural resources must be conserved and also used for the common good.

* * * * * * *

"Until the business men of America make up their mind both to husband and to administer as if for others as well as for their own profit the natural resources of the country some of the questions ahead of us will be immensely difficult of solution.

"When the Government at Washington undertakes in the future to develop a policy of this sort the first thing it must know is the state of mind—psychology of the men that it is dealing with. That attitude must be declared open and transparent. Do you not see that it is your responsibility, not mine?

"I shall sit there and try to preside over the matter, but I shall know what to do only as I can judge the men I am dealing with. The moment their purpose is declared to be for the general interest and shown by their procedure to be for the general interest, then the whole atmosphere of suspicion will be dissipated and the Government will come to a normal relation with the citizens of the United States.

* * * * * * *

"This country is not going to grow rich in the future by the efforts of the men who already have got in. It is going to grow rich by the efforts of the men who have not yet got in. It is a truism to say that it is going to get rich by the efforts of the future generations after this generation is gone. The next generation is now struggling for a foothold, and the next generation finds it extremely difficult to get a foothold."

* * * * * * *

Whereas the national homestead act passed by the Thirty-seventh Congress, May 20, 1862, and going into effect on and after January 1, 1863, entitled "An act to secure homesteads to actual settlers on the public domain," to wit:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That any person who is the head of a family or who has arrived at the age of 21 years and is a citizen of the United States, or who shall have filed his declaration of intention to become such, as required by the naturalization laws of the United States, and who has never borne arms against the United States Government or given aid and comfort to its enemies, shall, from and after the 1st of January, 1863, be entitled to enter one-quarter section, or a less quantity, of unappropriated public lands: * * * Provided, That any person owning and residing on land may, under the provisions of this act, enter other land lying contiguous to his or her land which shall not, with the land so already owned and occupied, exceed in the aggregate 160 acres"; and

Whereas the sentiment and spirit expressed by President Elect Woodrow Wilson in the above language is in true harmony and accord with the evident object and purpose of the original homestead law of 1862 and in keeping with an enlightened and comprehensive understanding of what is meant by true and proper conservation of our natural resources and unalterably opposed to all forms of injustice and abuse toward the pioneers and early settlers who would undergo the hardships of establishing homes on the public domain and transforming the desert into gardens and orchards, making possible thousands of prosperous and happy homes for the people; and

Whereas our Federal land policy as administered by and through the Interior Department of the United States to that area or section situate west of the one hundredth meridian of west longitude, and known and designated as the arid regions of the United States, has for years been one of gross ignorance of actual conditions existing in said regions and has been almost continually mismanaged by commissioned, incapable, and incompetent subordinates, whose attempt to serve the public can best be described as inane, effete, academic, impractical, inequitable, unjust, farcical, humiliating, degrading, and insulting to our citizens and subversive of the public good; and

Whereas large forest reserves have been created within New Mexico, over 70 per cent of which contain no forests or merchantable timber whatever, but for the use and pasturage upon which the owners of sheep and cattle in the immediate vicinity are charged heavy rentals, which places them at a great disadvantage in competition with other such stock raisers who enjoy the privileges of free range; and

Whereas other large areas have been withdrawn from settlement for the purpose of classification as to whether or not it is coal, oil, or mineral land, and such classification delayed from time to time by the Interior Department, thus preventing the occupation and settlement of the land under the homestead and desert-land laws, except in a restricted and unsatisfactory manner, and preventing the settlement of larger areas of land; and

Whereas all of these reservations and withdrawals have greatly retarded the development of New Mexico, by preventing the residents and people of said State from securing the wood and pasturage which they have employed for generations, preventing the settlement of the State and the building of homes to a large extent, and has restrained the development of the State in its agricultural, horticultural, and other industries; and

Whereas large areas of land are withdrawn as part of reclamation projects which are not necessary to but which has been determined will not become a part of such projects, and the settlement and reclamation of such withdrawals thereby prevented; and

Whereas New Mexico's opportunity for expansion is grievously vexed and burdened by the present Federal land policy and practically all of the agricultural and grazing lands of some counties, particularly of San Juan and Rio Arriba, are occupied with national forests and unwise withdrawals of lands from the public domains under one pretense or another, thus preventing settlement and the development of the State's resources; and

Whereas your memorialists thoroughly and completely agree with President-Elect Woodrow Wilson in his expressed attitude as to what should be the policy of the Government toward reclamation, conservation, and homesteading the arid regions of the West and in restoring the spirit of the original homestead law of 1862 and in guaranteeing justice and fair treatment to the humblest pioneer and homesteader;

Now, therefore, your memorialists respectfully but earnestly pray for the passage of an act by Congress prohibiting the further withdrawal of the lands of New Mexico for any purpose whatever, and respectfully request the immediate restoration of all lands embraced within the several forest reservations of New Mexico which do not contain merchantable timber or are necessary to the administration of such reservations. That we respectfully request the immediate classification of lands now withdrawn for coal, oil, or other minerals pending classification, and the opening to entry of such portions as are found not to contain coal, oil, or minerals; be it further

Resolved, That all Government lands classified as coal lands should be open to entry or sale, under proper regulations, so that they may be developed, and persons taking up such coal lands be not subject to indictment; be it further

Resolved, That the United States Senators and Members of the House of Representatives from New Mexico are hereby requested to use their influence to remove the said restrictions and that the governor of New Mexico is hereby authorized and directed to appoint a committee of three representatives, citizens of New Mexico, not more than two from any one political party, to go to Washington, D. C., and aid our Senators and Representatives in presenting this joint memorial to President-elect Wilson and to Congress; and that the expenses of such committee of three be paid by themselves; be it further

Resolved, That the presiding officers of each house of the Legislature of the State of New Mexico are hereby directed to forward to President-elect Wilson of the United States and to the presiding officers and Members of the Senate and House of Representatives and to the governors and presiding officers of the Legislatures of the States of Arizona, Oregon, Washington, Colorado, Idaho, and Utah copies of this joint memorial.

Joint resolution ratifying an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relating to popular election of United States Senators.

Whereas both Houses of the Sixty-second Congress of the United States of America, at its second session, by a constitutional majority of two-thirds thereof, made the following proposition to amend the Constitution of the United States of America in the following words, to wit:

"A joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That in lieu of the first paragraph of section 3 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States, and in lieu of so much of paragraph 2 of the same section as relates to the filling of vacancies, and in lieu of all of paragraph 1 of section 4 of said Article I, in so far as the same relates to any authority in Congress to make or alter regulations as to the times or manner of holding elections for Senators, the following be proposed as an amendment to the Constitution, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the States:

"'The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, elected by the people thereof, for six years; and each Senator shall have one vote. The electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State legislature.

"'The times, places, and manner of holding elections for Senators shall be as prescribed in each State by the legislature thereof.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of New Hampshire, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE,
DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

I, Edward N. Pearson, secretary of state of the State of New Hampshire, do hereby certify that the following and hereto attached is a true copy of joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution ratifying the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States and America" (approved March 14, 1913), as engrossed in this office and in my custody as secretary of state.

In testimony whereof, I hereto set my hand and cause to be affixed the seal of the State, at Concord, this 18th day of March, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] EDWARD N. PEARSON,
Secretary of State.

STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE, 1913.

Joint resolution ratifying the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America.

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives in general court convened:

Whereas both Houses of the Sixty-first Congress of the United States of America, at its first session, by a constitutional majority of two-thirds thereof, made the following proposition to amend the Constitution of the United States of America in the following words, to wit:

"A joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following article is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by the legislature of three-fourths of the several States, shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the Constitution, namely, Article XVI:

"'The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several States, and without regard to any census or enumeration.'"

Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives in general court convened, That the said proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America be, and the same is hereby, ratified by the General Court of the said State of New Hampshire; and further be it

Resolved, That certified copies of this joint resolution be forwarded to the governor of this State, to the Secretary of State of the said United States, and to the presiding officers of the Senate and House of Representatives of the said United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a telegram in the nature of a resolution adopted by the House of Delegates of Porto Rico, which was referred to the Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SAN JUAN, P. R., March 2, 1913.

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Respectfully I transmit the following resolution of the House of Delegates of Porto Rico:

The House of Delegates of Porto Rico considers it a very high honor for any human being of this world to be invested with American citizenship, but under present circumstances it prays that Congress take no action upon this matter without direct consultation and in accordance with the will of Porto Rican people, because there exist tendencies favorable and adverse to United States citizenship for the Porto Ricans. This resolution of the house of delegates does not affect its sentiments of adhesion and friendship toward the noble American people, but is inspired by its sentiments of respect and love for the natural sovereignty of the people of Porto Rico.

JOSE DEDIEGO, Speaker.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a concurrent resolution passed by the General Assembly of the Territory of Hawaii, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas the harbor of Nawiliwili, on the island of Kauai, has been selected by the United States Engineers for improvement, and a project therefor has been approved by the Congress of the United States; and

Whereas the need of such improvement is urgent in the interest of commerce and shipping, the development of the island, and the convenience of its citizens and residents as well as of the traveling public: Therefore be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii (the Senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States be earnestly requested to appropriate and make available, as soon as may be, sufficient funds to enable the carrying out of the plan or project for the improvement of such harbor; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the Delegate to Congress from the Territory of Hawaii.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, March 10, 1913.

We hereby certify that the foregoing concurrent resolution was adopted in the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii on March 10, 1913.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Oregon, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
STATE OF OREGON,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

I, Ben W. Olcott, secretary of state of the State of Oregon, and custodian of the seal of said State, do hereby certify that I have carefully compared the annexed copy of senate joint memorial No. 18, with the original thereof filed in the office of the secretary of state of the State of Oregon on the 27th day of February, 1913, and that the same is a full, true, and complete transcript therefrom and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed hereto the seal of the State of Oregon.

Done at the capitol at Salem, Oreg., this 27th day of February, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] BEN W. OLCOTT,
Secretary of State.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, in legislative session assembled, respectfully represent that—

Whereas it appears from reliable information that the price of grain bags, wool bags, and jute cloth is excessive and unreasonably high; and

Whereas the jute crop for the year 1912 was as large as that of the year 1907 (the former high-water mark in the production of jute); and that there was carried over from last year several millions of grain bags, thus indicating that a shortage of raw material and reserved manufactured product can not be the cause of the recent high prices for bags; and

Whereas it is reported that the price of jute grain bags, wool bags, and cloth has been unreasonably advanced by a few large corporations and dealers of the Pacific coast, brought about by cornering the market and so manipulating the sale thereof that they have been able to force all prices to almost double that paid by consumers in previous years; and

Whereas it is believed these high and exorbitant prices exist by reason of the large corporations on the Pacific coast entering into an illegal combination in restraint of trade, and by using other artificial means which have enabled them to fix the price of jute grain bags, wool bags, and cloth at an exorbitant and unreasonable price and in violation of the laws of the United States, and thereby forcing the consumers to buy all jute products at a very high, exorbitant, and unreasonable price; and

Whereas it is estimated that the alleged jute bag and cloth trust has completely cornered and controlled the price of jute bags and cloth, enabling the trust to obtain enormous profits amounting to at least 50 per cent: Be it

Resolved, That your memorialists respectfully and earnestly petition and request the Congress of the United States to thoroughly investigate and probe the grain-bag monopoly existing on the Pacific coast, and should this probe and investigation disclose violation of the Federal laws, the proper officials of the United States be instructed to use all just means to punish such individuals, firms, or corporations, participating in any grain-bag monopoly, or illegal acts in violation of the Federal laws.

Adopted by the house February 26, 1913.

Speaker of the House.

Adopted by the senate February 26, 1913.

I, Wilfred L. Gifford, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of house joint memorial No. 8, by Oversmith; passed the house February 21, 1913; passed the senate March 3, 1913; which was filed in this office on the 5th day of March, A. D. 1913, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 6th day of March, in the year of our Lord 1913, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-seventh.

[SEAL.] WILFRED L. GIFFORD,
Secretary of State.

House joint memorial 8.

To the honorable the Senators and Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas a large portion of the State of Idaho has been set aside by the United States Government and placed in forest reserves; and

Whereas it is necessary on the part of several counties of the State of Idaho, in which a part of the forest reserves are situated, to maintain and construct roads and bridges in such forest reserves; and

Whereas the cost of the construction and maintenance of such roads and bridges is a grievous burden upon the taxpayers of said counties, and there being no revenue derived by such counties from such forest reserves commensurate with such cost:

We therefore pray and earnestly urge that the Department of the Interior be required to make a thorough investigation of the roads and bridges which should be constructed and maintained in such forest reserves, and a sufficient appropriation be made by the United States for the purpose of building and maintaining all necessary roads and bridges in such forest reserves.

The secretary of state is hereby instructed to forward copies of this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States and copies of the same to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

This memorial passed the house of representatives on the 21st day of February, 1913.

Senate joint memorial 7.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas the members of the twelfth session of the Legislature of the State of Idaho, united by feelings of deepest affection and national bonds to Thomas Jefferson, the author of the Declaration of American Independence, heartily indorse the action of the Jefferson-Monticello Association in endeavoring to restore to a position of national dignity his home, Monticello, where he lived, died, and is buried—

The secretary of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States and copies of the same to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

This senate joint memorial No. 7 passed the senate on the 28th day of February, 1913.

House joint memorial 7.

To the honorable the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent and petition as follows: That—

Whereas on the 19th day of April, 1911, there was introduced in the National House of Representatives House bill No. 5966, providing for the permanent location of and for the marking and monumenting of the old Oregon Trail from the Missouri River to the Puget Sound as a memorial to the brave and hardy pioneers whose hardships, suffering, and brilliant achievements saved the Oregon country, of which Idaho was a part, to the Union and opened the way for the further development of this vast territory: Now, therefore,

Your memorialists, in the name of and for the people of the State of Idaho, and speaking in behalf of all of the people living in the territory traversed by the old Oregon Trail, earnestly and respectfully petition and urge that said House bill No. 5966 be passed by Congress.

The secretary of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward copies of this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, and copies of the same to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

This memorial passed the house of representatives on the 21st day of February, 1913.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of Colorado, ss:

I, James B. Pearce, secretary of state of the State of Colorado, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of senate joint memorial No. 4, by Senator Cross.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Colorado, at the city of Denver, this 27th day of February, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] JAMES B. PEARCE,
Secretary of State.
By THOMAS F. DILLON, Jr.,
Deputy.

Senate joint memorial 4.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the General Assembly of the State of Colorado, would respectfully represent that under and by direction of the Secretary of the Interior the Hon. R. B. Marshall, chief geographer of the department, recently visited Colorado to determine by personal observation whether there should be established in Colorado a national park.

That the said Marshall, following the said order, visited Colorado, and after a careful and painstaking examination of the country proposed to be included in said national park recommended the creation of the same.

That the people of Colorado desire that said park shall be established. It includes the highest mountain peaks in the State; the area is little adapted to either agriculture or grazing; its scenery for sublimity and grandeur is not excelled on the continent. Its location is easy of access to America's millions who seek health and recreation in the summer months, being situated in the front and main range of the Rocky Mountains.

We therefore urge that you pass an act creating the said Rocky Mountain National Park, adopting the metes and bounds as set forth in the report of said Chief Geographer Marshall to the Secretary of the Interior and embodying provisions as contained in a bill for an act creating the said park, prepared and introduced in the National House of Representatives for that purpose.

And this your memorialists will ever pray.

STEPHEN R. FITZGARRALD,
President of the Senate.
O. C. SKINNER,
Speaker of the House.

Governor of the State of Colorado.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of California, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Assembly joint resolution 2, relative to requesting the United States Congress to authorize and direct the Postal Savings System to loan its funds to school districts.

Whereas under the act of Congress now in force, which establishes a Postal Savings System throughout the United States, there is no authority by which the board of trustees of said Postal Savings System is permitted to loan the funds of said system to the various school districts throughout the Nation; and

Whereas it appears that if such authority existed the school districts of this State and every State would be able thereby to obtain money directly from the funds of said Postal Savings System with more facility and at lower rates of interest; and

Whereas it appears that by their ability to borrow money more easily and under better conditions the school districts of this State and of every State will receive great benefits of economy, saving, and financial prosperity, which will consequently afford the rising generation of our Nation better education and development: Be it therefore

Resolved, That the Senate and Assembly of the State of California hereby join in requesting the Congress of the United States to amend the act establishing the Postal Savings System in such manner as will authorize and direct the board of trustees of said Postal Savings System to invest the funds of said system in school district bonds of the various school districts of the several States, and that our representatives in the Senate and the House of Representatives of Congress do their utmost to further such legislation as will effect the above result; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be forthwith transmitted by the clerk of the assembly to the President of the Senate of the United States and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States and a copy hereof to each Member of Congress and to each newly elected Member of Congress.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented resolutions adopted by the General Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS, 1913.

Resolutions in favor of the establishment of an international commission on the cost of living.

Resolved, That the General Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, believing that the world-wide increase in the cost of living and the possibility of a continuance of this increase for an indefinite period is a matter of great importance, and believing that an international commission on the cost of living should be appointed to meet the urgent need to find a scientific basis for any reforms in this respect which can be accomplished by legislation, hereby approves of the effort to bring about such an international commission.

Resolved, That certified copies of these resolutions be sent by the secretary of the Commonwealth to the President of the United States, to the presiding officers of both branches of Congress, and to each of the Senators and Representatives from Massachusetts.

In senate, adopted January 31, 1913.

In house of representatives, adopted in concurrence February 6, 1913.

Senate joint memorial 14.

Whereas Harry Hill and other settlers known as the "Sherman County settlers" have suffered great damages by reason of the erroneous restoration to homestead settlement of certain lands in the State of Oregon by the Secretary of the Interior, from which lands said settlers were afterwards ousted as a result of a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, as set forth in the report made by Special Agent Thomas B. Neuhausen, of the Department of the Interior; and

Whereas the honorable Senate of the United States, on August 19, 1911, passed an act to adjust the claims of said settlers, and appropriating therefor the sum of $250,000; and

Whereas the Committee on Claims of the honorable House of Representatives of the United States has favorably reported a like bill for the settlement of the claims of said settlers, which is now pending on the Private Calendar of the House of Representatives as No. 123: Be it

Resolved by the senate (the house concurring), That the honorable House of Representatives of the United States is hereby memorialized to pass the said bill for the relief of said settlers, and the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Oregon are hereby urged to use their influence in behalf of the passage of the said bill; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be mailed to the honorable Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States and to each of the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Oregon.

Enrolled joint resolution 3.

A joint resolution relating to the refunding of certain moneys, now lying in the Treasury of the United States, being paid therein by certain citizens of the United States, in attempting to make final proofs on the public domain, and memorializing the Congress of the United States to pass such legislation as may be necessary for the refunding of these moneys to those who have so paid them into the Treasury of the United States, and thereby relieving the distress caused to certain citizens of the United States by both denying patent on public lands for different causes and then retaining the money paid as provided by law preliminary to perfecting such proofs.

Whereas certain citizens of the United States have filed on portions of the public domain, pursuant to the several acts of the Congress of the United States providing for the filing on and for the making of final proof and the securing of patent on the said public domain of the United States so set apart for such purposes; and

Whereas these citizens, in attempting to make final proof previous to perfecting patents on the public domain filed on under the several acts of Congress providing for the securing of patents on the public domain, to wit, under the homestead act, the stone and timber act, the desert-land act, and the coal-land act, have been unsuccessful and for one cause or another have been denied patent; and

Whereas these citizens have paid different sums of money into the Treasury of the United States previous to their attempts to make final proofs, as provided by the acts of the Congress of the United States, and which proofs were unsuccessful and patents were denied; and

Whereas these moneys have never been refunded to the citizens who have so paid them into the Treasury of the United States previous to their unsuccessful attempts to make final proofs; and

Whereas both the failure to secure title to the lands on which these attempts to make final proof were made and the loss of the moneys so paid into the Treasury of the United States have wrought untold hardship and loss to these citizens: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Legislature of the State of Wyoming, That the Congress of the United States be, and is hereby, memorialized and requested to enact such legislation as may be necessary for the refunding of these moneys so paid into the Treasury of the United States to the citizens so paying them in and thus relieve the hardship and loss which the withholding of these moneys is causing these citizens; be it further

Resolved, That engrossed copies of this memorial and request be sent to the President of the United States, the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the Secretary of the Interior, asking their aid in bringing the object of this memorial and request before Congress and in securing from same adequate legislation for the purpose herein set forth; and be it further

Resolved, That engrossed copies of this memorial and request be sent to the Senators from Wyoming in the Congress of the United States, viz, Hons. CLARENCE D. CLARK and FRANCIS E. WARREN, and our Representative in said Congress, Hon. FRANK W. MONDELL, asking them to use their best efforts to secure a favorable action upon the request embodied herein.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a concurrent resolution adopted by the Legislature of Kansas, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House concurrent resolution 27.

Whereas 12,000 citizens of Kansas served as militiamen during the War of the Rebellion in suppressing Price raid and other warlike invasions and border disturbances; and

Whereas the men so serving were ordered into active service by Gen. Curtis under martial law and ordered into the State of Missouri in 1864 to repulse the invasion by Gen. Price's army, and they do not now have pensionable status under the United States pension laws, although they rendered valuable and valiant service in the preservation of the Republic: Therefore be it

Resolved by the house (the senate concurring therein), That the Senators and Members of Congress be, and they are hereby, requested to propose and secure the passage of proper legislation by Congress fixing and establishing for such militiamen a pensionable status the same as though they had been regularly mustered into regular service and allowing to such men suitable pensions: Be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the Senators and Members of Congress from this State.

FORTY-EIGHTH GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF ILLINOIS—1913 (REGULAR SESSION).

Senate joint resolution 12.

Whereas it appears from the investigation recently made by the Senate of the United States and otherwise that polygamy still exists in certain places in the United States, notwithstanding prohibitory statutes enacted by the several States thereof; and

Whereas the practice of polygamy is generally condemned by the people of the United States, and there is a demand for the more effectual prohibition thereof by placing the subject under Federal jurisdiction and control, at the same time reserving to each State the right to make and enforce its own laws relating to marriage and divorce: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Senate of the State of Illinois (the House of Representatives concurring therein), That the application be made and hereby is made to Congress under the provisions of Article V of the Constitution of the United States for the calling of a convention to propose an amendment to the Constitution of the United States whereby polygamy and polygamous cohabitation shall be prohibited and Congress shall be given power to enforce such prohibition by appropriate legislation.

Resolved, That the legislatures of all other States of the United States now in session, or when next convened, be, and they hereby are, respectfully requested to join in this application by the adoption of this or an equivalent resolution.

Resolved further, That the secretary of state be, and he hereby is, directed to transmit copies of this application to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, and to the several Members of said bodies representing this State therein; also to transmit copies hereof to the legislatures of all other States of the United States.

House joint memorial 9.

To the Congress of the United States, the honorable the President of the United States, and the honorable the Postmaster General of the United States:

Your memorialist, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represents that—

Whereas the State of Idaho has recently completed its new capitol building in Boise, therein, on a block of ground adjoining the block on which the Federal building is situated; and

Whereas the said capitol building, though in itself is a credit to the State, is located on a small tract of land and has very little frontage or approach; and

Whereas directly in front of said capitol building and grounds and immediately across the street therefrom there is a row of unsightly brick flats, known as the Collister Flats, occupying with the yard and outhouses thereof one-quarter of the block on which the said Federal building is located, and blocking and marring the view of the capitol and of the Federal building; and

Whereas the United States Government now owns three-quarters of the said block on which its said Federal building stands and lacks only the quarter block on which the said flats stand to give it a complete square of ground;

We therefore pray that the Congress of the United States and the proper executive authorities of the Federal Government do take such steps as shall be necessary, by purchase, condemnation proceedings, or otherwise, to secure the title to the said quarter block, to remove the flats therefrom, and to park the same, to the end that the view of the said buildings may be unobstructed and the Federal tract be made more sightly and be suitably enlarged for future growth and development: Be it

Resolved, That the secretary of state transmit a copy of this memorial to the House of Representatives and Senate of the United States and to our Representatives therein, to the Postmaster General, and to the President of the United States.

This house joint resolution passed the house of representatives on the 21st day of February, 1913.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial 3.

Petition to Congress to enact such legislation as will be necessary for the construction of a system of paved public highways connecting the capitols of the several States of the Union with the National Capitol and with each other, and also with the principal national parks.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives in Congress of the United States assembled:

Whereas a uniform system of national public highways or roads, connecting the capitols of the several States of the Union with the National Capitol at Washington and with each other, and also with the principal national parks, will vastly promote commerce between the several States and reduce the cost of transportation thereof, facilitate and cheapen travel and social intercourse between the people, discourage sectionalism, and render the entire people more cosmopolitan intellectually, morally, and politically; aid the farmer in marketing his produce, and make farm life more agreeable, attractive, and profitable; induce Americans to see and know America; beautify all parts of the Union; intensify industrial activities; encourage good road building throughout the continent, and bring the entire people countless blessings, conveniences, and joys known only to a highly developed country; and

Whereas to secure uniformity, thoroughness, and economy in construction, fitness, and adaptability of grades and avoidance of such local controversies in the selection of routes as would probably delay, if not defeat, the entire enterprise, and the cost of such a system of highways being beyond the probable financial resources of the several States, it would be necessary that it be constructed at the expense and under the supervision of the General Government: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved (the house concurring), We, the Thirteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, do hereby petition and earnestly pray the honorable Congress of the United States for the passage of legislation for the location and construction, under the supervision and by the General Government, of a system of national highways or roads which shall connect the capitols of the several States of the Union with the National Capitol at Washington and with each other, and also with the principal national parks; that such national highways be constructed on firm concrete bases with hard surfaces and as nearly dustless as possible; that they be located solely with regard to the greatest public good and feasibility of route and grades; and be it further

Resolved, That Congress provide in such legislation means of raising the necessary money for the location and construction of such national highway by the restoration of the internal-revenue tax of 1879 on tobacco, or in some other manner, as to it shall seem meet and proper, and that the location and construction of such system of highways be commenced, as means can be provided, throughout the country generally without giving priority to any sections or locations; and it is further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be forwarded by the secretary of state of the State of Montana to the Senate of the United States, and that copies of this memorial be forwarded by the secretary of state of the State of Montana to the House of Representatives of the United States; and be it further

Resolved, That copies thereof be transmitted by the secretary of state of the State of Montana to the Senators and Representatives in Congress of the State of Montana, with the request that they use every effort within their power to bring about a speedy action for the accomplishment of the ends and purposes herein indicated.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of Montana, ss:

I, A. M. Alderson, secretary of state of the State of Montana, do hereby certify that the above is a true and correct copy of senate joint memorial No. 3, petitioning Congress to enact such legislation as will be necessary for the construction of a system of paved public highways connecting the capitols of the several States of the Union with the National Capitol and with each other, and also with the principal national parks, enacted by the thirteenth session of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, and approved by S. V. Stewart, governor of said State, on the 25th day of February, 1913.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of said State.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a concurrent resolution passed by the General Assembly of the Territory of Hawaii, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas the citizens of Hawaii, previous to annexation of the islands by the United States, had established and maintained for more than 50 years an independent national government and thereby demonstrated their capacity for self-government under and equal to the responsibilities of a sovereign State; and

Whereas annexation by one of the great powers of the world was inevitable owing to the mere numerical weakness of such a small State and its inability to support armed defense on land and sea; and

Whereas immediately following the annexation of Hawaii by the United States Congress passed an organic law giving Hawaii the status of a Territory, that has been the traditional stepping-stone to statehood; and

Whereas under this form the citizens of Hawaii have conducted their government in a conservative, patriotic, and able manner, providing liberally in all manner for the development of the highest standards of American citizenship among all classes of the cosmopolitan population; and

Whereas Hawaii, the State, is as certainly the natural and ultimate destiny of these islands as was the annexation by and admission as an integral part of the United States of America; and

Whereas the record of our people of the present day, the evidences of their thrift shown in the wealth per capita, the proofs of their intelligence and ambition as shown by the small percentage of illiteracy among them are such as to command for them a respect and confidence equaling that accorded the citizens of any State in the Union: Therefore be it

Resolved by the house of representatives, session of 1913 (the senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States is hereby requested and respectfully petitioned to pass an enabling act authorizing the citizens of the Territory of Hawaii to, and naming the date when they shall, elect delegates to a constitutional convention for the purpose of framing a constitution for the government of the State of Hawaii, the same to be in full force and effect when approved by Congress and the President in the manner and form usual to the admission of States; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States, the President of the United States Senate, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives at Washington, and to the Hon. JONAH K. KALANIANAOLE.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE
TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, February 26, 1913.

We hereby certify that the foregoing concurrent resolution was finally adopted in the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii on February 26, 1913.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a concurrent resolution passed by the General Assembly of the Territory of Hawaii, which was referred to the Committee on Fisheries and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas pursuant to the terms of the organic act, being "An act to provide a government for the Territory of Hawaii," approved April 30, 1900, all private fishing rights in the sea waters of Hawaii under Hawaiian law will shortly have been established; and

Whereas under said organic act the attorney general of the Territory was directed to bring condemnation proceedings against the owners of such private fishing rights to the end that the sea fisheries of Hawaii might be free to all citizens of the United States; and

Whereas none of such fishing rights have been condemned because of the paramount claims of other matters of greater public importance to the citizens of the Territory on the revenues of the Territory; and

Whereas the condemnation of such private fishing rights and payment for the same out of the revenues of the Territory would leave insufficient funds for the actual expenses of government in the Territory; and

Whereas the condemnation of these private fishing rights and the payment for the same is pursuant to an act passed by the Congress of the United States, and intended for the benefit of the citizens of the United States generally and not exclusively for the benefit of the citizens of the Territory: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii (the House of Representatives concurring), The Congress of the United States is hereby requested to appropriate the sum of $500,000 for the purpose of acquiring such sea fisheries from the private owners thereof for the benefit and enjoyment of all the citizens of the United States; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States, the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, at Washington, and to the Hon. JONAH K. KALANIANAOLE.

THE SENATE OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, March 8, 1913.

We hereby certify that the foregoing concurrent resolution was this day adopted in the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a concurrent resolution adopted by the Legislature of Hawaii, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas the Congress of the United States of America did, on the 26th day of April, A. D. 1910, by joint resolution, provide for a special election in the Territory of Hawaii, submitting to the qualified electors of said Territory the following question, to wit: "Shall the legislature to be elected in November, 1910, be requested to pass at its first regular session a law prohibiting the manufacture or sale within the Territory of all intoxicating, spirituous, vinous, and malt liquors, except for medicinal and scientific purposes?"; and

Whereas at an election held on July 26, 1910, by virtue of said joint resolution, the said question so submitted was answered in the negative by a large majority of the legally qualified electors of the Territory; and

Whereas under the laws now in force in the Territory of Hawaii traffic in intoxicating liquors is controlled and regulated in a manner satisfactory to a large majority of the residents of the Territory; and

Whereas the passage by the Congress of the United States of America of any act relative to the traffic in intoxicating liquors within the Territory would constitute a departure from the principle of home rule of the Territories of the United States, and would likewise be an expression on the part of the Congress of the United States that the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii can not safely be intrusted with the exercise of powers specifically granted it by the organic act of the Territory of Hawaii: Therefore be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii (the Senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States be, and the same is hereby, respectfully petitioned to refuse the enactment of any measures either prohibiting or regulating traffic in intoxicating liquors within the Territory of Hawaii, and that any proposed legislation relative to such traffic be intrusted to the Legislature of said Territory of Hawaii; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and the Delegate to Congress from the Territory of Hawaii.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,

Mr. JONES presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of the State of Washington, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
STATE OF WASHINGTON,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

I, I. M. Howell, secretary of state of the State of Washington, do hereby certify that I have carefully compared the annexed copy of senate joint memorial No. 11, passed February 11 and March 7, 1913, by the Thirteenth Legislature of the State of Washington, with the original enrolled copy of said joint memorial now on file in this office, and find the same to be a full, true, and correct copy of said original, and of the whole thereof, together with all official indorsements thereon.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed hereto the seal of the State of Washington, at the capitol in Olympia, this 11th day of March, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] I. M. HOWELL,
Secretary of State.

Senate joint memorial 11.

To the President of the United States of America, the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, the Secretary of War, and the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Washington:

We, your memorialist, the Senate of the State of Washington, the House concurring, assembled in regular session of the Thirteenth Legislature of the State of Washington, most respectfully represent and pray, as follows:

Whereas the State of Washington has many wealthy cities and towns wholly dependent upon the national seacoast defense for protection from invasion from the Pacific Ocean; and

Whereas by the fourth biennial report of the State board of tax commissioners of the State of Washington the assessed valuation of all of the property in the State of Washington taxable under the statutes of said State appears to be $1,005,086,251; and

Whereas Grays and Willapa Harbors are wholly without military defenses of any kind or nature; and

Whereas the whole of Washington and Oregon is accessible from the Pacific Ocean through Grays and Willapa Harbors; and

Whereas the naval strength of the United States now stationed on the Pacific coast would be wholly inadequate in case of threatened invasion to properly protect the Pacific coast and repel any attempted invasion from the Pacific Ocean; and

Whereas petitions have been filed with Senator W. L. JONES, of the United States Senate Committee on Military Affairs, which petitions were signed by taxpayers of the States of Washington and Oregon, that the petitioners thereon represented $332,898,097, as appraised by the taxing officers of said States and duly certified by such taxing officers, praying that Grays and Willapa Harbors be fortified; and

Whereas many banking, milling, manufacturing, and coal-mining corporations and wholesale merchants signed said petitions, whose assets could not be shown by certificates of the State board of tax commissioners of the States of Washington and Oregon, in addition to the amounts first above shown to be so verified by certificates; and

Whereas the following commercial bodies of the Northwest have by resolutions duly and regularly adopted found that the fortification of Grays and Willapa Harbors was a public necessity, to wit: Portland Chamber of Commerce, Portland, Oreg.; New Seattle Chamber of Commerce, Seattle, Wash.; Aberdeen Chamber of Commerce, Aberdeen, Wash.; Montesano Chamber of Commerce, Montesano, Wash.; Spokane Chamber of Commerce, Spokane, Wash.; Olympia Chamber of Commerce, Olympia, Wash.; and the Centralia Chamber of Commerce, Centralia, Wash.; and

Whereas Gen. Marion P. Maus, commanding the Department of the Columbia, United States Army, has recommended the fortification of Grays and Willapa Harbors in his last report: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of Washington (the House concurring), That the President of the United States of America, the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, the Secretary of War, and the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Washington be, and they are hereby, urged to take such action as will lead to the speedy planting of adequate fortifications and military defenses capable of repelling any attempted invasion through said harbors from the Pacific Ocean.

The secretary of state is hereby directed to immediately transmit a certified copy of this memorial to his excellency the President of the United States of America, to the honorable Secretary of War, and to each of the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Washington.

Assistant Secretary of State.

House joint memorial 3.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

We, your memorialists, the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Washington in legislative session assembled (in the thirteenth regular session) represent and pray as follows:

Whereas during the interim between the years 1859 and 1872 United States troops were stationed on the island of San Juan, State of Washington, that several of the soldiers died and were buried in a burying ground during that period; that said burying ground has been entirely neglected, with fences falling down and stock running over the graves: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of the State of Washington, That the Congress of the United States be requested to make such an appropriation as is necessary to reclaim such graveyard, fence it properly, and keep it in repair.

Passed the house January 20, 1913.

House concurrent resolution 18.

Whereas the United States Government is preparing to construct a rock jetty on the north side of the entrance of the Columbia River, in the State of Washington, near Fort Canby; and

Whereas the War Department of the United States is about to call for bids from private contractors to furnish great quantities of stone to be delivered by water or rail at the Government receiving works at Fort Canby, Wash.; and

Whereas the War Department, in furtherance of this work, has adopted plans for the clearing out, dredging, and maintaining a new waterway or channel from the eastern end of Sand Island to Fort Canby, Wash., at large public expense; and

Whereas the dredging of said new waterway or channel as planned is designed for the public benefit, it will, in fact, be of no public benefit, but of great public cost for dredging and maintaining, and of benefit solely to any contractor who may deliver rock by water transportation to the receiving works at or near Fort Canby, and a corresponding handicap to any contractor bidding to furnish rock by means of rail transportation; and

Whereas the said new waterway or channel, if dredged and maintained as planned, will cause large public loss to the State of Washington in depriving it of the annual license fees and other taxes from about 50 fish traps situated within the line of the proposed new waterway or channel, and will injure the State of Washington and its citizens by endangering the successful maintenance of the Chinook salmon hatchery, on account of the large amount of dredged material that will be deposited in front of the entrance of the Chinook River; and will cause a loss of probably $150,000 in the value of about 50 fish traps included within the lines of said new waterway or channel and generally damage the fishing industry at or near Chinook, as a result of fouled and muddy waters from long-continued operation; and

Whereas it will tend to shift the boundary between the States of Oregon and Washington a mile northward into the territory of Washington: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the house, the senate concurring, does hereby protest against the establishing of the proposed new channel, and respectfully ask that the present existing and Hanbury Channel, established by the War Department of the United States in 1893, be utilized in transporting rock, if necessary for the north jetty, and for all other purposes of navigation; be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be furnished to the Representatives of the State of Washington in Congress.

Speaker of the House.

House joint memorial 4.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Senate and the House of Representatives of the State of Washington in legislative session assembled, being the thirteenth regular session, most respectfully represent and pray as follows:

Whereas that portion of the Washington coast line beginning at the mouth of the Columbia River and extending northward a distance of 30 miles has been the scene of numerous and fatal shipwrecks; and

Whereas the facilities for transportation of lifeboats and life-saving apparatus to and from the scene of such wrecks are at present inadequate; and

Whereas frequently many lives could have been saved had the United States Life-Saving Service been able to respond more quickly to the call for assistance, this being impossible at times through delay in the train service or through the high stage of the tides on the ocean beach: Wherefore

Your memorialists respectfully urge that one boathouse, with beach apparatus equipment, be established at Long Beach, about 7 miles south of the Klipsan Beach Life-Saving Station, and a similarly equipped boathouse established at the intersection of the Oysterville Road with the ocean beach, the same distance north of said station; that two be stationed at each boathouse and all be under the supervision and control of the keeper of the said Klipsan Beach Life-Saving Station.

House joint memorial 2.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Washington, respectfully represent that—

Whereas the opening to the Panama Canal will bring to the Pacific seaboard a largely increased volume of waterway traffic, necessitating the thorough improvement of our waterways and the enlargement of our harbor and dockage facilities; and

Whereas the Columbia River and its tributaries constitute the greatest inland waterways system of the Pacific coast of America and the second greatest of the Nation; and

Whereas the preeminent importance of this waterway has been recognized by the National Government hitherto by large appropriations covering its improvement from its mouth inland; and

Whereas the volume of traffic tributary to the Columbia gateway virtually embraces, in actual freight carried or directly affected by its water craft, the entire coast business, inward and outward, of the Columbia and Snake River Basins (a territory almost 250,000 square miles in extent); and

Whereas the full benefits to be obtained from the operation of this waterway can only be secured by its complete and adequate improvement, we hereby memorialize the Congress of the United States, at its present session, to appropriate the sum of $1,400,000 to be immediately available for the completion of the Celilo Canal and the opening of the Columbia and Snake Rivers to free navigation, this sum being in reality only an increase of $800,000 over the amount necessary to carry on this work on the continuous contract basis already in operation.

We urge upon Congress the importance of this appropriation in order to save the net sum of $100,000, according to the estimate of the United States Engineers in charge of this work.

We represent that the opening of the Celilo Canal and the Columbia and Snake Rivers to free navigation during the year 1915 will stimulate the building of municipal docks, the extension of feeder lines of railway, and the construction of steamboats, barges, etc., essential to the development of a vast traffic territory.

We further represent that the completion of these improvements at the time indicated will enable the people of the Pacific Northwest, both American and Canadian, to fittingly celebrate the opening of the Celilo Canal and the Columbia River in conjunction with the international ceremonies in honor of the Panama Canal in 1915, thus giving notice to the world of an all-water route from the ports of the world to the interior of western America and British Columbia.

House joint memorial 5.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Washington, in legislative session assembled, being the thirteenth regular session, most respectfully petition as follows: That

Whereas by the construction of a waterway to connect Fidalgo Bay with Similk Bay, in Skagit County, Wash., and making the same a link for the purpose of navigation of what is termed the "inside passage" on Puget Sound, would eliminate the necessity of the local sound steamers and small craft of passing through Deception Pass and of exposing themselves to the sweep of the storms of the Straits of Juan de Fuca; and

Whereas such a waterway would not only complete a continuous inside and protected passage for freight and passenger traffic between what is known as the up-sound and down-sound cities of Puget Sound; and

Whereas by said improvement, to such craft as are compelled to seek the inside passage, the distance would be shortened approximately 10 miles; and

Believing that the convenience and safety of travel and traffic on Puget Sound would justify the making of such improvement:

Wherefore your memorialists respectfully petition the Congress of the United States to order a full and complete survey of such a project, together with maps, plans, etc., to determine its feasibility, and that said survey be also extended to cover the dredging of Cap Santa waterway in said Fidalgo Bay, which improvement would be contiguous to and incidental to the main project above mentioned.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas the State of Washington has established and is constructing a State highway from Willapa Harbor on the Pacific Ocean, through the city of Chehalis, in Lewis County, connecting with the national park State highway, already constructed from Tacoma to a connection with the Government road in Rainier National Park; and

Whereas the State has established and is constructing a highway from Walla Walla to North Yakima, and in Yakima County this highway has been completed to the east line of the forest reserve; and

Whereas the Government has already located a trail from the Government road in Rainier National Park to the highway from North Yakima at the east line of the forest reserve; and

Whereas the extension of the Government road through the national park and the forest reserve, approximately following the trail already located, will connect all portions of the State of Washington from the extreme southeast section to the southwest and northwest sections of the State, and will open the national park to easy access from all sections of the State:

Therefore your memorialists, the senate and house of representatives of the thirteenth legislature respectfully urge that said road through the national park and forest reserve be constructed at the earliest practicable date by the Government of the United States.

Your memorialists, the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Washington, respectfully request that—

Whereas the Sixty-first Congress of the United States, in the passage of the Weeks law, recognized the duty of the Federal Government to assist the States in protecting the forested watersheds of navigable streams; and

Whereas under the provisions of said law the Secretary of Agriculture allotted to Washington for the year 1912 the sum of $10,000 to be expended by the State forester in such protection, and it appears that because of lack of funds the Secretary is unable to continue the cooperation as fully as heretofore; and

Whereas this State possesses great forest resources, forest industries, and navigable streams, the protection of which is of vital importance; and

Whereas the State supports such protection through liberal appropriations by its legislature and great expenditure of private money and effort: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That your memorialists, the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Washington, earnestly petition and urge the Congress of the United States to continue Federal cooperation, as provided in section 2 of the Weeks law; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be forthwith transmitted to the presiding officer of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the chairmen of the Senate and House committees on agricultural appropriations, the Secretary of Agriculture, and to each Member of the Washington delegation in Congress.

Senate joint memorial 9.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas Puget Sound is the greatest inland body of water in America, extending from the Straits of Juan de Fuca inland and southward more than 100 miles; and

Whereas south of Puget Sound is the great arm of the ocean known as Grays Harbor, and on still farther south is Willapa Bay, and just beyond the great Columbia River, the second largest river in the United States emptying into the ocean; and

Whereas Puget Sound, Grays Harbor, Willapa Bay, and the Columbia River are all large navigable bodies of water and lead to many large and prosperous growing cities and communities and are surrounded by immense natural resources and a soil of unsurpassed fertility; and

Whereas because of these conditions and because of the immensity of the territory surrounding these bodies of water and tributary thereto we, your memorialists, believe there is destined to be therein the greatest and richest development of any section in the United States; and

Whereas, by an act of Congress approved March 3, 1909, Congress authorized and directed the Secretary of War to make preliminary examinations and surveys for an intracoastal canal for a continuous inland waterway from Boston, Mass., to the Rio Grande, your memorialists would request the same favors for an intracoastal canal from the Straits of Juan de Fuca inland through Puget Sound southwestward to Grays Harbor; thence south from Grays Harbor to Willapa Bay; thence south from Willapa Bay to the Columbia River; thence continuing the survey east and north along the Columbia River to the Canadian border to connect with the survey of the Canadian Government; and

Whereas for strategic purposes the Permanent Improvement Naval Board of the United States on October 10, 1889, did show the strategic value of such inland communication and natural value of inland canals to League Island naval docks on the Atlantic coast, such canal would be of actual value to the great naval dock at Bremerton, Wash., on the Pacific coast. That for the defense of a frontier threatened by an attack from without in the movement of troops sheltered water transportation affords many advantages over transportation by rail. Twenty-two ships, size of Momus (S. P. Co.), 16-foot draft, is equal to 958 passenger and freight cars; and for commercial purposes the ratio of cost and capacity of a double-track railroad to a canal of the proposed type are: Cost, about 1 to 5.6; capacity, about 1 to 12.8, and

Whereas, if such be the case, this inland waterway connecting these great aforementioned bodies of water would be not only of great commercial benefit and would mean not only a great saving in time in the arrival and departure of ships to and from the great cities on these bodies of water, but would also be of inestimable use and value to the United States in time of war for military and naval purposes:

Therefore, your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Washington, in thirteenth biennial session convened, most respectfully urge upon you the desirability and the commercial and strategic possibilities of such a canal as heretofore suggested, and we would respectfully make this a request for a survey of a route for such a canal and for an investigation of the possibilities and feasibilities thereof.

Senate joint memorial 10.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas the Pacific coast and the possessions of the United States bordering on and lying in the Pacific Ocean are without proper or adequate naval protection; and

Whereas it appears impracticable to station a larger Navy on the Pacific coast until sufficient dockage facilities have been established for the proper care of additional ships; and

Whereas the Secretary of the Navy has recommended the building of an additional dry dock on the Pacific coast, such dry dock to be 1,000 feet long by 110 feet in width; and

Whereas the Secretaries of the Navy, since the construction of the dry docks at the Puget Sound Navy Yard, Bremerton, Wash., and all officers of the Navy who have examined the same, pronounce the site and conditions for a dry dock at this location unexcelled by any other localities in the United States; and

Whereas an additional dry dock can be built at Bremerton far below the cost of the same at any other point on the Pacific coast, or elsewhere, for that matter; and

Whereas the conditions for speedy and economic construction of an additional dry dock are excellent at Bremerton over any other point; and

Whereas the easy access by vessels to Bremerton, the depth of the water, the freedom of the waters from sediment to damage the valves and machinery of the vessels, the land-locked and storm-free conditions of the harbor, and the natural and easy means afforded for the safeguarding and the protection of this harbor at Bremerton make us—

The Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Washington, in the thirteenth legislative session assembled, petition you to provide at once for the construction of an additional dry dock at the Puget Sound Navy Yard on the scale as recommended by the honorable Secretary of the Navy.

To this end your memorialists will ever pray.

Senate joint memorial 18.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Washington in legislative session assembled, do most respectfully state, represent, and petition as follows:

Whereas the jute crop of 1912 is reported large, with a surplus of grain bags carried over, indicating that scarcity is not the cause of the prevailing excessive prices; and

Whereas the price of grain bags during 1912 was about 7 cents each until it was reported that the big companies were buying up the visible supply on the Pacific coast, after which time the price steadily advanced until bags reached 12½ cents each, with no plausible reason for the advance in price except the concerted action and manipulation of these strong companies; and

Whereas India is the chief source of supply and bags can not be shipped in time for harvest after about April 1, which affords an excellent opportunity to "corner the market"; and

Whereas Gov. Lister, in his message, stated that the profit on grain bags manufactured at the State penitentiary was practically 40 per cent for 1912, and as the prison sacks were sold about 2 cents each below the sack dealers' prices, this indicates that the dealers must have made a profit of 50 per cent and upward; and

Whereas the excessive price of these sacks is a great detriment to the agricultural interests of the Pacific coast:

Therefore your memorialists do urge Congress to make a thorough investigation of the so-called "grain-bag trust."

House joint memorial 12, relating to the taxation of unsurveyed lands within the State of Washington.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas by various acts of Congress the United States has heretofore granted to the Northern Pacific Railway each alternate section of land lying within 50 miles on each side of the right of way of the Northern Pacific Railway within the State of Washington; and

Whereas by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States the title to said land is vested absolutely in said corporation and its grantees; and

Whereas under the lieu-land acts of Congress the Northern Pacific Railway Co. and other land-grant railways have been permitted to relinquish granted lands falling within the limits of forest reservations and to select in lieu thereof equal areas within the public lands of the United States situated in the State of Washington; and

Whereas several million acres of valuable timber lands within the State of Washington are now held by the Northern Pacific Railway and other railway companies and by other corporations and individuals under the above-mentioned land grants and lieu-land acts of Congress; and

Whereas the greater portion of said lands so held by private corporations and individuals is still unsurveyed; and

Whereas by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States the State of Washington is prevented from levying any taxes whatsoever upon said lands until the same are surveyed and until the surveys are approved and accepted by the Department of the Interior of the United States; and

Whereas as a result of the conditions above mentioned approximately 3,000,000 or 4,000,000 acres of valuable lands within the State of Washington are now wholly exempt from taxation and have never been taxed in any sum whatsoever, although the same are held as private property and are mortgaged, sold, and conveyed in the same manner as other lands, and constitute to all intents and purposes private property; and

Whereas by reason of the conditions herein stated the State of Washington and the counties in which said lands are situated have lost an immense sum of money in taxes which should have been levied and collected upon said lands to the great detriment of the State of Washington and the counties above referred to; and

Whereas said unjust and inequitable situation has become unbearable and calls for immediate and effective relief on the part of the Congress of the United States: Now, therefore,

We, your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Washington, in thirteenth biennial session convened, most respectfully urge upon you the urgent necessity of granting immediate and effective relief as follows:

1. By an act of Congress appropriating the sum of at least $200,000 to be used in the extension of surveys over all of the unsurveyed lands in the State of Washington to which legal or equitable title has passed from the United States to private or corporate ownership.

2. By an act of Congress appropriating the sum of at least $50,000 to cover the expense of approving and accepting the surveys of said lands as fast as the same are completed and directing the Department of the Interior to proceed forthwith to approve the surveys already made and to be made in the future.

3. By an act of Congress providing for the enforcement by the United States of the lien reserved to the United States upon the unsurveyed lands granted to the Northern Pacific Railway within the State of Washington to cover the cost of making the surveys of the same, and instructing and empowering the Department of the Interior to actively enforce said liens.

4. By an act of Congress authorizing and permitting the State of Washington to survey said unsurveyed lands within the State of Washington and to receive reimbursement of the actual cost and expense thereof from the United States.

5. By an act of Congress repealing or modifying the act passed in 1870, being Sixteenth Statutes at Large, 305, to the end that taxes may be levied by the State of Washington and by the various counties thereof against the unsurveyed lands situated therein, subject to the lien of the United States against said lands, to cover the cost of the survey thereof in making said lien of the United States superior and paramount to the lien of said taxes, in order that the unsurveyed lands now in private ownership may be rendered subject to taxation in the same manner and to the same extent that other private property is taxed.

Mr. PERKINS presented a joint resolution passed by the Legislature of California, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Assembly joint resolution 2, relative to requesting the United States Congress to authorize and direct the Postal Savings System to loan its funds to school districts.

Whereas under the act of Congress now in force, which establishes a Postal Savings System throughout the United States, there is no authority by which the board of trustees of said Postal Savings System is permitted to loan the funds of said system to the various school districts throughout the Nation; and

Whereas it appears that if such authority existed the school districts of this State and every State would be able thereby to obtain money directly from the funds of said Postal Savings System with more facility and at lower rates of interest; and

Whereas it appears that by their ability to borrow money more easily and under better conditions the school districts of this State and of every State will receive great benefits of economy, saving, and financial prosperity, which will consequently afford the rising generation of our Nation better education and development: Be it therefore

Resolved, That the Senate and Assembly of the State of California hereby join in requesting the Congress of the United States to amend the act establishing the Postal Savings System in such manner as will authorize and direct the board of trustees of said Postal Savings System to invest the funds of said system in school-district bonds of the various school districts of the several States, and that our representatives in the Senate and the House of Representatives of Congress do their utmost to further such legislation as will effect the above result: And be it further

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be forthwith transmitted by the clerk of the assembly to the President of the Senate of the United States and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and a copy hereof to each Member of Congress and to each newly elected Member of Congress.

Mr. PERKINS presented a telegram in the nature of a resolution adopted by the Legislature of California, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SACRAMENTO, CAL., April 5, 1913.

Hon. GEORGE C. PERKINS,
Senate, Washington, D. C.

I have the honor to hand you the following resolution:

Whereas owing to the lack of necessary rainfall during the past several months, the usual and necessary feed for stock has not been grown within the State of California; and

Whereas there are many thousands of sheep and cattle which are apt to suffer severely by reason of such lack of feed; and

Whereas many thousands of these animals will perish if some relief be not granted by the Department of Agriculture, granting permission under such terms and conditions as may be by it deemed proper to permit an increased number of stock and sheep to graze within the national forest and other Federal reservations: Now therefore be it

Resolved by the senate and assembly jointly, That we request and urge the Senators and Congressmen of the State of California to use every possible effort to have the Department of Agriculture, or such other departments as may have jurisdiction of the subject matter, grant permission to the owners of stock and sheep within the State of California, to permit the said stock and sheep to feed and graze within national forest and other Federal reservations, under such terms and conditions as said department may deem proper; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be immediately telegraphed to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress and likewise to Hon. D. F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture.

By Mr. GRONNA:

A bill (S. 466) relating to the use and occupation of lands of the United States for the development of water power, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Such bills usually go to the Committee on Commerce, and unless there is an intention to change the reference of all such bills this one had better take the usual course.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will state, for the benefit of the Senator from Arkansas, that the bill has been referred as it was in the preceding Congress.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Bills to authorize the construction of dams and the creation of water power have invariably gone to the Committee on Commerce. I move that the bill be so referred.

Mr. GRONNA. I have no objection to having the bill referred to the committee suggested by the Senator from Arkansas. I would just as soon have it go to the Committee on Commerce as to the Committee on Public Lands.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the bill will be referred——

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Before that order is made, we should like to have the title of the bill again read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the title of the bill.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 466) relating to the use and occupation of lands of the United States for the development of water power, and for other purposes.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Mr. President, all those questions are involved in the general question of legislation concerning water power in the present state of the discussion of that subject; and general bills providing for the construction of dams in navigable streams, for instance, having a national feature, usually go to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. From the reading of the title it appears to me the bill has reference more to public lands than it has to water power.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Of course we can not tell exactly what is the text of the bill from the title, but the general——

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I have the bill before me, and clearly it should not go to the Committee on Commerce. It provides:

That hereafter permits for the use and occupation of lands in national forests, national parks, Indian and other reservations, and the unreserved public domain of the United States may be issued, etc.

It pertains to lands along nonnavigable streams, and is a matter with which the Committee on Commerce has nothing to do. I think the bill ought to go to the Committee on Conservation of National Resources, and I make that motion.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Mr. President, the bill is not such a one as I supposed. I thought it dealt broadly with the question of water power. I have not any desire to interfere with the service of any other committee, and I have no objection to the reference of the bill to any committee to which the author of it wants it to go.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I wish to say that I think the Senator from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] is mistaken. That bill has been before the Committee on Public Lands a number of times. It relates to the occupation of lands; it does not involve the preservation of forests or the preservation of Indian reservations, but relates to the occupation of lands in forest reserves and also in Indian reservations. I believe as it refers to the public lands it ought to go to the Committee on Public Lands, where it has heretofore been referred.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. In response to the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT], I think that while this bill has been before the Committee on Public Lands, as many similar bills have been before that committee, it is simply because the Committee on Conservation of National Resources has not been particularly active, in that it was almost impossible, I am informed, to get a quorum of that committee at the last session of Congress. Clearly the bill relates to a matter that concerns the conservation of national resources. It is a question of water power within national forest reserves and on the public lands. It is not a question of land at all under this bill; it is a question of the use of waters, the conservation of waters, the conservation of power. I do not wish to make the point as against the Public Lands Committee on the ground that it is not perfectly competent for that committee to take care of the subject, but I do make it on the ground that the other committee, having much less work to do, can probably give it much more attention.

Mr. SMOOT. I desire to call the Senator's attention to the fact that if it is a question of water or the use of water, neither the Committee on Public Lands nor any other committee of the Senate has a right to handle it; the States of this Nation have that right. It does not relate to the conservation of water, but to the privilege of granting and occupying certain public lands. The bill rightfully belongs to the Public Lands Committee, and I hope that is where it will go.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the reference of the bill introduced by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. GRONNA.]

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] has moved that the bill be referred to the Committee on Conservation of National Resources.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I feel that it ought to go to that committee; but I am also a member of the Committee on Public Lands, and I shall make no further contention in regard to the matter. I withdraw the motion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The motion is withdrawn; and, without objection, the bill will be referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Senators, the hour of 12.30 o'clock has arrived. Upon yesterday the Senate accepted the invitation of the House of Representatives to repair to its Hall at this time and listen to the communication of the President of the United States. The Sergeant at Arms will carry out the order of the Senate.

Thereupon the Senate, preceded by its Secretary and Sergeant at Arms, proceeded to the Hall of the House of Representatives.

The Senate returned to its Chamber at 1 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.

The address of the President of the United States this day delivered to both Houses of Congress is as follows:

Mr. Speaker, Mr. President, gentlemen of the Congress, I am very glad indeed to have this opportunity to address the two Houses directly and to verify for myself the impression that the President of the United States is a person, not a mere department of the Government hailing Congress from some isolated island of jealous power, sending messages, not speaking naturally and with his own voice—that he is a human being trying to cooperate with other human beings in a common service. After this pleasant experience I shall feel quite normal in all our dealings with one another.

I have called the Congress together in extraordinary session because a duty was laid upon the party now in power at the recent elections which it ought to perform promptly, in order that the burden carried by the people under existing law may be lightened as soon as possible, and in order, also, that the business interests of the country may not be kept too long in suspense as to what the fiscal changes are to be to which they will be required to adjust themselves. It is clear to the whole country that the tariff duties must be altered. They must be changed to meet the radical alteration in the conditions of our economic life which the country has witnessed within the last generation. While the whole face and method of our industrial and commercial life were being changed beyond recognition the tariff schedules have remained what they were before the change began, or have moved in the direction they were given when no large circumstance of our industrial development was what it is to-day. Our task is to square them with the actual facts. The sooner that is done the sooner we shall escape from suffering from the facts and the sooner our men of business will be free to thrive by the law of nature—the nature of free business—instead of by the law of legislation and artificial arrangement.

We have seen tariff legislation wander very far afield in our day—very far indeed from the field in which our prosperity might have had a normal growth and stimulation. No one who looks the facts squarely in the face or knows anything that lies beneath the surface of action can fail to perceive the principles upon which recent tariff legislation has been based. We long ago passed beyond the modest notion of "protecting" the industries of the country and moved boldly forward to the idea that they were entitled to the direct patronage of the Government. For a long time—a time so long that the men now active in public policy hardly remember the conditions that preceded it—we have sought in our tariff schedules to give each group of manufacturers or producers what they themselves thought that they needed in order to maintain a practically exclusive market as against the rest of the world. Consciously or unconsciously, we have built up a set of privileges and exemptions from competition behind which it was easy by any, even the crudest, forms of combination to organize monopoly; until at last nothing is normal, nothing is obliged to stand the tests of efficiency and economy, in our world of big business, but everything thrives by concerted arrangement. Only new principles of action will save us from a final hard crystallization of monopoly and a complete loss of the influences that quicken enterprise and keep independent energy alive.

It is plain what those principles must be. We must abolish everything that bears even the semblance of privilege or of any kind of artificial advantage, and put our business men and producers under the stimulation of a constant necessity to be efficient, economical, and enterprising, masters of competitive supremacy, better workers and merchants than any in the world. Aside from the duties laid upon articles which we do not, and probably can not, produce, therefore, and the duties laid upon luxuries and merely for the sake of the revenues they yield, the object of the tariff duties henceforth laid must be effective competition, the whetting of American wits by contest with the wits of the rest of the world.

It would be unwise to move toward this end headlong, with reckless haste, or with strokes that cut at the very roots of what has grown up amongst us by long process and at our own invitation. It does not alter a thing to upset it and break it and deprive it of a chance to change. It destroys it. We must make changes in our fiscal laws, in our fiscal system, whose object is development, a more free and wholesome development, not revolution or upset or confusion. We must build up trade, especially foreign trade. We need the outlet and the enlarged field of energy more than we ever did before. We must build up industry as well, and must adopt freedom in the place of artificial stimulation only so far as it will build, not pull down. In dealing with the tariff the method by which this may be done will be a matter of judgment exercised item by item. To some not accustomed to the excitements and responsibilities of greater freedom our methods may in some respects and at some points seem heroic, but remedies may be heroic and yet be remedies. It is our business to make sure that they are genuine remedies. Our object is clear. If our motive is above just challenge and only an occasional error of judgment is chargeable against us, we shall be fortunate.

We are called upon to render the country a great service in more matters than one. Our responsibility should be met and our methods should be thorough, as thorough as moderate and well considered, based upon the facts as they are and not worked out as if we were beginners. We are to deal with the facts of our own day, with the facts of no other, and to make laws which square with those facts. It is best, indeed it is necessary, to begin with the tariff. I will urge nothing upon you now at the opening of your session which can obscure that first object or divert our energies from that clearly defined duty. At a later time I may take the liberty of calling your attention to reforms which should press close upon the heels of the tariff changes, if not accompany them, of which the chief is the reform of our banking and currency laws; but just now I refrain. For the present, I put these matters on one side and think only of this one thing—of the changes in our fiscal system which may best serve to open once more the free channels of prosperity to a great people whom we would serve to the utmost and throughout both rank and file.

I sincerely thank you for your courtesy. [Applause on the floor and in the galleries.]

AMENDMENT TO SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. TILLMAN submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $125,000 for the purchase of a site and construction of a wharf and buildings and purchase of the necessary equipment for a depot for the sixth lighthouse district, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

THE TARIFF.

Mr. McCUMBER submitted two amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 10) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, which were referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

Mr. GRONNA submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 10) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

COMMITTEE SERVICE.

Mr. LODGE submitted the following resolution, which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That Mr. GOFF be assigned to service on the following committees: Claims, Conservation of National Resources, Military Affairs, Pacific Islands and Porto Rico, Pensions, Railroads, and University of the United States.

ALEXANDER MACKENZIE AND HENRY L. ABBOT.

Mr. TOWNSEND submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 33), which was read and referred to the Committee on Claims:

Resolved, That the claims of Alexander MacKenzie, United States Army, retired (S. 5119), and Henry L. Abbot, United States Army, retired (S. 5120), now pending in the Senate, together with all the accompanying papers, be, and the same are hereby, referred to the Court of Claims, in pursuance of the provisions of an act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911; and the said court shall proceed with the same in accordance with the provisions of such act and report to the Senate in accordance therewith.

WATERWAYS OF CANADA AND THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. TOWNSEND submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 32), which was read:

Resolved, That the President be, and he hereby is, respectfully requested to enter upon negotiations with Great Britain or the Dominion of Canada with a view to an international agreement for the concurrent or cooperative improvement of navigation in waterways used, or which can be used, in common for the commerce of Canada and the United States.

Mr. LODGE. I think that resolution ought to go to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I will say to the Senator that it was referred to the Committee on Commerce in the last Congress.

Mr. LODGE. It involves negotiations with a foreign power.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will say that a similar resolution was referred to the Committee on Commerce in the preceding Congress.

Mr. LODGE. It may have been referred to that committee in the last Congress, but I think clearly any measure involving a treaty with a foreign power should go to the Committee on Foreign Relations. I ask the attention of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON] to the matter.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I have no objection to its going to that committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

CHEAT AND NEW RIVERS, VA. AND W. VA.

Mr. CHILTON. I submit a resolution and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration. It simply calls for documents and papers.

The resolution (S. Res. 30) was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate of the United States, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, requested to furnish to the Senate, if consistent with public interests, copies of all documents and papers in his office or under his control relating to the building of dams or reservoirs by private interests in the Cheat and New Rivers in the States of Virginia and West Virginia and copies of all correspondence had with his department relating thereto, together with copies of all rulings or permits, if any, issued or made by his department authorizing the building of any such dams or reservoirs.

Mr. GALLINGER. I do not rise to object, but to suggest to the Senator from West Virginia to substitute the word "directed" for "requested." That is the ordinary language.

Mr. CHILTON. I accept that amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there is no objection, the question is on agreeing to the resolution as modified.

The resolution as modified was agreed to.

POLICEMEN'S AND FIREMEN'S PENSION ROLLS.

Mr. BRISTOW. I submit a resolution and ask for its immediate consideration.

The resolution (S. Res. 31) was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, directed to furnish the Senate the names of all persons borne on the policemen's and firemen's pension rolls of the District, and to inform the Senate what employment such persons have, either in the service of the Government or in private life, and what compensation is received by each pensioner so employed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I object to the immediate consideration of the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi objects, and the resolution will go over.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Let it go to the proper committee.

Mr. KERN. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 1 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, April 9, 1913, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, April 8, 1913.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou who art from everlasting to everlasting, the same yesterday, to-day, and forever, our God and our Father, whose infinite wisdom, power, and goodness are everywhere apparent on land and sea and sky, incline our hearts to do Thy will that we may reflect those attributes in thought and deed.

Give us this day the bread that feeds the heart and strengthens the mind for the tasks before us, that we may live with Thee, in Thee, for Thee, and accumulate the wealth that never dies, and enjoy the heaven of the now by doing those tasks willingly, patiently, faithfully, moment by moment, hour by hour, with malice toward none, with charity for all. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

SWEARING IN OF MEMBERS.

The SPEAKER. There are several Members present this morning who were not here yesterday, and if they will come down in front of the Speaker's desk they may be sworn in.

Mr. KALANIANAOLE, Mr. MCDERMOTT, Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska, Mr. HEFLIN, Mr. CURLEY, Mr. FAISON, Mr. WHITE, Mr. SHACKLEFORD, and Mr. MOSS of Indiana appeared at the bar of the House and took the oath of office.

The SPEAKER. The Chair requests that when Members rise to speak they announce their names and States. The Chair knows a good many of them, but he has not had an opportunity to become acquainted with or recognize the faces of all of them.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the following resolution:

House concurrent resolution 1.

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the two Houses of Congress shall assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives on Tuesday, the 8th day of April, 1913, at 12.30 o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose of receiving such communications as the President of the United States shall be pleased to make to them.

JOINT SESSION OF SENATE AND HOUSE.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to make an announcement. During the joint session of the Senate and House about to be held 110 seats in front will be reserved for the Senate and the officers thereof.

The Chair will appoint a committee of three to wait on the President in the Speaker's room and escort him into the House. They will come in at this door on the left.

At joint meetings of the Senate and House the Vice President sits on the right of the Speaker. In this joint meeting the Speaker presides, because it is our invitation to the Senate.

The Chair desires to admonish the occupants of the galleries that they are here by the courtesy of the House, and that a very little conversation on the part of each one of 800 or 900 people makes a tremendous buzz and uproar. Therefore, as far as it is possible under the circumstances, during the proceedings, after the President comes in, the Chair expresses the desire that the occupants of the galleries refrain from conversation.

The Chair appoints the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER], and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] as the committee on the part of the House to escort the President into the Hall of the House.

Mr. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House stand in recess until the hour of 12.30 p. m.

Mr. MANN. Make it 12.29.

Mr. CLAYTON. I will make it 12.25.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama moves that the House stand in recess until 12.25 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 18 minutes p. m.) the House took a recess until 12 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m.

At the expiration of the recess the House resumed its session.

At 12 o'clock and 51 minutes p. m. the Doorkeeper announced the Vice President of the United States and the Members of the United States Senate.

The Members of the House rose.

The Senate, preceded by the Vice President and by their Secretary and Sergeant at Arms, entered the Chamber.

The Vice President took the chair at the right of the Speaker and the Members of the Senate took the seats reserved for them.

The SPEAKER. At the request of Vice President MARSHALL, I name Senators KERN, BACON, and GALLINGER as a committee to join with the House committee to go to the Speaker's room to escort the President into the Hall of the House.

At 12 o'clock and 57 minutes p. m. the President of the United States, escorted by the joint committee of Senators and Representatives, entered the Hall of the House and stood at the Clerk's desk, amid applause on the floor and in the galleries.

The SPEAKER. Senators and Representatives, I have the distinguished honor of presenting the President of the United States. [Applause.]

The PRESIDENT. Mr. Speaker, Mr. President, gentlemen of the Congress, I am very glad indeed to have this opportunity to address the two Houses directly and to verify for myself the impression that the President of the United States is a person, not a mere department of the Government hailing Congress from some isolated island of jealous power, sending messages, not speaking naturally and with his own voice—that he is a human being trying to cooperate with other human beings in a common service. After this pleasant experience I shall feel quite normal in all our dealings with one another.

I have called the Congress together in extraordinary session because a duty was laid upon the party now in power at the recent elections which it ought to perform promptly, in order that the burden carried by the people under existing law may be lightened as soon as possible, and in order, also, that the business interests of the country may not be kept too long in suspense as to what the fiscal changes are to be to which they will be required to adjust themselves. It is clear to the whole country that the tariff duties must be altered. They must be changed to meet the radical alteration in the conditions of our economic life which the country has witnessed within the last generation. While the whole face and method of our industrial and commercial life were being changed beyond recognition the tariff schedules have remained what they were before the change began, or have moved in the direction they were given when no large circumstance of our industrial development was what it is to-day. Our task is to square them with the actual facts. The sooner that is done the sooner we shall escape from suffering from the facts and the sooner our men of business will be free to thrive by the law of nature—the nature of free business—instead of by the law of legislation and artificial arrangement.

We have seen tariff legislation wander very far afield in our day—very far indeed from the field in which our prosperity might have had a normal growth and stimulation. No one who looks the facts squarely in the face or knows anything that lies beneath the surface of action can fail to perceive the principles upon which recent tariff legislation has been based. We long ago passed beyond the modest notion of "protecting" the industries of the country and moved boldly forward to the idea that they were entitled to the direct patronage of the Government. For a long time—a time so long that the men now active in public policy hardly remember the conditions that preceded it—we have sought in our tariff schedules to give each group of manufacturers or producers what they themselves thought that they needed in order to maintain a practically exclusive market as against the rest of the world. Consciously or unconsciously, we have built up a set of privileges and exemptions from competition behind which it was easy by any, even the crudest, forms of combination to organize monopoly; until at last nothing is normal, nothing is obliged to stand the tests of efficiency and economy, in our world of big business, but everything thrives by concerted arrangement. Only new principles of action will save us from a final hard crystallization of monopoly and a complete loss of the influences that quicken enterprise and keep independent energy alive.

It is plain what those principles must be. We must abolish everything that bears even the semblance of privilege or of any kind of artificial advantage, and put our business men and producers under the stimulation of a constant necessity to be efficient, economical, and enterprising, masters of competitive supremacy, better workers and merchants than any in the world. Aside from the duties laid upon articles which we do not, and probably can not, produce, therefore, and the duties laid upon luxuries and merely for the sake of the revenues they yield, the object of the tariff duties henceforth laid must be effective competition, the whetting of American wits by contest with the wits of the rest of the world.

It would be unwise to move toward this end headlong, with reckless haste, or with strokes that cut at the very roots of what has grown up amongst us by long process and at our own invitation. It does not alter a thing to upset it and break it and deprive it of a chance to change. It destroys it. We must make changes in our fiscal laws, in our fiscal system, whose object is development, a more free and wholesome development, not revolution or upset or confusion. We must build up trade, especially foreign trade. We need the outlet and the enlarged field of energy more than we ever did before. We must build up industry as well, and must adopt freedom in the place of artificial stimulation only so far as it will build, not pull down. In dealing with the tariff the method by which this may be done will be a matter of judgment exercised item by item. To some not accustomed to the excitements and responsibilities of greater freedom our methods may in some respects and at some points seem heroic, but remedies may be heroic and yet be remedies. It is our business to make sure that they are genuine remedies. Our object is clear. If our motive is above just challenge and only an occasional error of judgment is chargeable against us, we shall be fortunate.

We are called upon to render the country a great service in more matters than one. Our responsibility should be met and our methods should be thorough, as thorough as moderate and well considered, based upon the facts as they are, and not worked out as if we were beginners. We are to deal with the facts of our own day, with the facts of no other, and to make laws which square with those facts. It is best, indeed it is necessary, to begin with the tariff. I will urge nothing upon you now at the opening of your session which can obscure that first object or divert our energies from that clearly defined duty. At a later time I may take the liberty of calling your attention to reforms which should press close upon the heels of the tariff changes, if not accompany them, of which the chief is the reform of our banking and currency laws; but just now I refrain. For the present, I put these matters on one side and think only of this one thing—of the changes in our fiscal system which may best serve to open once more the free channels of prosperity to a great people whom we would serve to the utmost and throughout both rank and file.

I sincerely thank you for your courtesy. [Applause on the floor and in the galleries.]

At 1 o'clock and 6 minutes p. m. the President retired from the Hall of the House.

Thereupon the Vice President and the Members of the Senate returned to their Chamber.

THE TARIFF BILL.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, before the House adjourns I ask unanimous consent that there may be ordered printed twenty-five hundred copies of the bill H. R. 10, the tariff bill, 500 copies for the use of the Ways and Means Committee and 2,000 copies to be distributed through the folding room for the use of Members. I understand the present print is exhausted, and that Members desire more copies.

Mr. MANN. I take it that that is the bill as it stands now, and that when the bill is reported there will be printed a plentiful supply. I will say to the gentleman from Alabama that there is now quite a demand for copies of this bill.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If the gentleman from Illinois thinks that we need more copies at present, I will agree to enlarge the number in my request. If the gentleman thinks more are now needed, I will suggest that a larger number be printed.

Mr. MANN. I think it would be well to have 5,000 copies in addition to the 500 to go to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then, Mr. Speaker, I make the request that 500 copies be printed for the use of the Committee on Ways and Means and 5,000 copies to be distributed through the folding room for the use of Members.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that there be printed 5,500 copies of the tariff bill.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman from Alabama will permit a further suggestion, these copies that go to the folding room now should be in the ordinary document form instead of the bill form, as they are much more convenient.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman from Illinois that the type of the bill is still set, and it would cost very little to run off these additional copies in its present form. If printed in document form it would require to be set anew.

Mr. MANN. Very well.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from Alabama if any provision has been made for printing a copy of the bill with an index?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman from New York that the Democratic end of the Ways and Means Committee had prepared a handbook that explains the amendments in the bill, gives the imports and exports, the amount of the American production of each item, with the ad valorem rates and real rates in the Payne bill, and the ad valorem equivalents and rates in this bill compared. By reason of a change of the text at the last moment it threw the paging of the index of the handbook out of place, and it had to be sent back to the printers to be reprinted and reindexed. It has delayed its coming in, but I hope to have it printed for the use of the Democratic caucus by to-morrow and expect to bring it in as a part of the report on the bill. I will say that gentlemen on that side of the House, of course, will be furnished with such copies as they need for their personal use immediately, and we will have it printed in larger numbers later on.

Mr. PAYNE. So that it will be available to the minority Members as soon as it is to the Members of the caucus.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly.

Mr. MANN. Is this index in the pamphlet an index to the bill, or simply an index to the pamphlet?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It is an index to the pamphlet. It is, however, really an index to the bill, because each paragraph in the bill is indexed in the handbook, and by referring to the handbook it will give one the paragraph number of the bill.

Mr. MANN. I take it, it would delay the reprint if the gentleman had to make an index to the bill to go with it. Of course, it is very convenient in sending out the bill to people who are interested in special things to have an index.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would prefer not to have the form changed until it is reported to the House.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I want to say that four years ago we prepared an index to the bill over one night, after the bill was introduced, and it proved very convenient to the Members. The sooner the index to the bill can be prepared, of course the greater facility Members will have in reaching the information they desire.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman that I am not a prophet and I can not tell in what particulars the bill may be amended by the Democratic caucus. Therefore I did not have the index made until the caucus on this side of the House had disposed of the bill.

Mr. PAYNE. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I had forgotten that the caucus would have any say about it or would change it.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Speaker, I should like to inquire whether this handbook of which the gentleman speaks contains a comparative statement of the present duties and the proposed duties?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It will, when it comes out.

Mr. PAYNE. Would it not be well to provide for the printing of that at the same time?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The committee has leave to print, and I think it will print enough copies for the use of the Members of the House. The final print to send out to constituents will be taken care of later.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that 5,500 copies of the tariff bill—H. R. 10—shall be printed, 500 for the use of the Committee on Ways and Means and 5,000 to go to the folding room. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

ADJOURNMENT OVER.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Thursday next.

The motion was agreed to.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 18 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Thursday, April 10, 1913, at 12 o'clock noon.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. CRAWFORD presented a joint resolution passed by the Legislature of South Dakota, which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF SOUTH DAKOTA,
DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of South Dakota, ss:

I, Frank Glasner, secretary of state of the State of South Dakota, do hereby certify that the annexed bill, to wit, house joint resolution 7, was duly passed by the 1913 session of the Legislature of the State of South Dakota, approved by the governor, and is now in full force and effect.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of South Dakota this 4th day of March, A. D. 1913.

FRANK GLASNER,
Secretary of State.
By J. T. NELSON,
Assistant Secretary of State.

House joint resolution 7.

A joint resolution memorializing Congress to repeal the pact or so-called reciprocity with Canada.

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of South Dakota (the Senate concurring):

SECTION 1. That the Congress of the United States be, and hereby is, memoralized to repeal and reject the so-called reciprocity with Canada for the following among other reasons:

First. That the effect of the pact with Canada would be to decrease the price of real estate in the United States, to the great injustice of landowners and of farmers upon whom the prosperity of this country depends.

Second. Not only would a treaty or convention of reciprocity with Canada whereby farm products are admitted free seriously affect the real estate values of this country, but it would also reduce the prices of farm products, to the great detriment of those engaged in agricultural pursuits in this country.

Third. That the treaty is unfair, unjust, and discriminating against the agricultural interests of the United States, giving these interests practically nothing in return for what it deprives them of.

Fourth. That it will inure to the disadvantage, loss, and suffering of our producers without any prospect of cheaper manufactured products to the consumer.

Fifth. That the removal of the duty on wheat will accrue solely to the benefit of the miller, that of barley to the brewer, that of flaxseed to the linseed mills, and that of live stock, hogs, poultry, and dairy products to the packers and middlemen, and, while not benefiting the consumer, will mean a great loss to the producers.

Sixth. This pact, if agreed to, will retard and set back the progress toward a higher and better standard of farm life, which has become so noticeable during the recent prosperous times; it will tend to bring on again that struggle for existence so well remembered by our pioneer farmers—a struggle in which many went under; it will lessen the opportunities for a better education of our farmers' children, and thus encourage them in leaving the farm.

Seventh. It will lessen the purchasing capacity of our American producers to the extent of millions of dollars annually by depriving them of a legitimate and fair price for their products. All of this will represent a corresponding loss to the commercial interests of our country, as the farmer's profit invariably finds its way into all the channels of trade. Our commercial and manufacturing interests stand to lose as much in this way as they will gain by the expansion of their business.

Eighth. Our American farmers, by their thrift, energy, and frugality, have made this country what it is; they have made it possible for the great commercial interests to become wealthy and powerful; without the farmer this would be impossible. In view of this, our commercial interests should now stand by the farmer. To do otherwise lays them open to the charge of commercial greed and selfishness.

Ninth. The term "reciprocity" as applied to the Canadian treaty is a misnomer. Reciprocity means an equitable trade or exchange between two countries of products one country produces and the other does not, or which it produces only in insufficient quantities. We produce everything in this country that is produced in Canada.

Tenth. It constitutes an agreement made recently and without regard to any settled policies of our tariff laws. It means free trade for the farmer and protection for the manufacturer, and as such is discrimination in its rankest form.

Eleventh. That in trading off our home market of more than 90,000,000 people, a market that is and has been abundantly supplied by our own producers, a market that has been built up by American thrift and frugality and which, by every inherent right and heritage, belongs to our producers, for that of 8,000,000 Canadians, with its doubtful increased advantages to commercial and manufacturing interests, would not only be unfair and unjust to our own producers but foolish and reprehensible.

Twelfth. This proposed treaty, when divested of its sentimental features, can and will appeal only to those who are selfishly interested and who expect to gain thereby. As a whole, it will be a damage rather than a benefit to our country. We are opposed to its passage in any form which puts agricultural products on the free list and protects manufactured interests.

Thirteenth. The proposed pact would not reduce the cost of living. It would not benefit the laboring man, the mechanic, or artisan in the great cities, as the exorbitant prices paid by them for produce is not occasioned by the price received by the farmer, but is the result of the excessive charges made by the railroads and middlemen. The farmer only receives 25 per cent of the price paid by the consumer, while the transportation companies and middlemen receive the other 75 per cent.

Fourteenth. That copies of these resolutions be sent to the President of the United States and to each of our Senators and Representatives in the Congress.

Mr. GRONNA presented a memorial of members of the Woman's Study Club, of Kenmare, N. Dak., remonstrating against the transfer of the control of the national forests to the several States, which was referred to the Committee on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game.

Mr. MYERS presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 1.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas the settlers under the lower Yellowstone project, Montana and North Dakota, organized, under the supervision and direction of the Reclamation Service, the Lower Yellowstone Water Users' Association, a corporation, and executed and delivered a contract to said corporation subscribing for stock in said corporation, which empowered said corporation, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, to sell their homesteads and their lands unless the owners made application for water rights and complied with the provisions of the act of Congress of June 17, 1902; and

Whereas said contracts were entered into and executed with the understanding that the final estimated cost of the project was $30 per acre, and that the cost to them should not exceed that amount per acre on their holdings, and that the farm unit under said project was 160 acres; and

Whereas the provisions of the act of Congress of June 17, 1902, provided that the payments should be made with a view of returning to the reclamation fund the estimated cost of construction, and also that the farm unit should be fixed at the time the project is determined feasible by the Secretary of the Interior; and

Whereas the cost of construction of said project has exceeded the original estimated cost $750,000, increasing the cost thereof to the settlers to $42.50 per acre; and

Whereas many settlers prior to the initiation of said project have secured from the Government tracts of land embracing more than 80 acres, and the Secretary of the Interior by his ruling has required that such settlers reduce their holdings to 80-acre tracts, the same being adopted as the farm unit under said project, which said ruling the said settlers denounce as contrary to the provisions of the reclamation act: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved (the senate concurring), That we, the Thirteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, do hereby petition the Congress of the United States for the passage of necessary legislation, and the abrogation of unjust rulings, providing that the settlers under said Yellowstone project shall not be required to return to the reclamation fund an amount exceeding the original estimated cost of $30 per acre; and, further, that said settlers under said project who acquired from the Government prior to the initiation thereof tracts of land embracing more than 80 acres be permitted to hold the same under said project, not exceeding 160 acres each, and to acquire water rights thereunder for the whole of said holdings; further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be forwarded by the Secretary of State to the President of the United States and to the Secretary of the Interior and our Senators and Representatives in Congress, with the request that they use their every effort to bring about speedy action for the accomplishment of the ends and purposes herein indicated.

A. D. MACDONALD,
Speaker of the House.
W. W. MCDOWELL,
President of the Senate.

Approved February 25, 1913.

S. V. STEWART, Governor.

A. M. ALDERSON,
Secretary of State.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of Montana, ss:

I, A. M. Alderson, secretary of state of the State of Montana, do hereby certify that the above is a true and correct copy of house joint memorial No. 1, petitioning Congress for the enactment of such legislation as will relieve the settlers under the lower Yellowstone project, enacted by the thirteenth session of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana and approved by S. V. Stewart, governor of said State, on the 25th day of February, 1913.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of said State.

Done at the city of Helena, the capital of said State, this 25th day of February, A. D. 1913.

A. M. ALDERSON,
Secretary of State.

Mr. MYERS presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial 4.

Petition to Congress to enact such legislation as will be necessary for the establishment and the maintenance of an agricultural building for the display of agricultural products.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives in Congress of the United States assembled:

Whereas the State of Montana desires to stimulate interest in and direct attention to agricultural pursuits, and we believe that an attractive display of agricultural products will render good results in the matter of the settlement and cultivation of unoccupied lands in Montana and other States: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the Thirteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, the senate and house concurring, do hereby petition the Congress of the United States for the passage of legislation providing for the establishment and maintenance, under the supervision and regulation of the Department of Agriculture of the United States, of an agricultural building in the city of Washington, D. C., for the permanent and conspicuous display of agricultural products of every kind and description from every State and Territory of the United States. That said building be kept open during business hours of all legal days and that an examination and inspection of said products be permitted by visitors from all parts of the world.

Resolved further, That a copy of this memorial be forwarded by the secretary of state to the honorable Secretary of Agriculture of the United States and to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

Mr. MYERS presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial 3.

Petition to Congress to enact such legislation as will be necessary for the construction of a system of paved public highways connecting the capitol of the several States of the Union with the National Capitol and with each other, and also with the principal national parks.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives in Congress of the United States assembled:

Whereas a uniform system of national public highways or roads, connecting the capitols of the several States of the Union with the National Capitol at Washington and with each other, and also with the principal national parks will vastly promote commerce between the several States and reduce the cost of transportation thereof, facilitate and cheapen travel and social intercourse between the people, discourage sectionalism, and render the entire people more cosmopolitan intellectually, morally, and politically; aid the farmer in marketing his produce, and make farm life more agreeable, attractive, and profitable; induce Americans to see and know America; beautify all parts of the Union; intensify industrial activities; encourage good road building throughout the continent, and bring the entire people countless blessings, conveniences, and joys known only to a highly developed country; and

Whereas to secure uniformity, thoroughness, and economy in construction, fitness, and adaptability of grades and avoidance of such local controversies in the selection of routes as would probably delay, if not defeat, the entire enterprise, and the cost of such a system of highways being beyond the probable financial resources of the several States, it would be necessary that it be constructed at the expense and under the supervision of the General Government: Now, therefore be it

Resolved (the house concurring), We, the Thirteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, do hereby petition and earnestly pray the honorable Congress of the United States for the passage of legislation for the location and construction, under the supervision and by the General Government, of a system of national highways or roads which shall connect the capitols of the several States of the Union with the National Capitol at Washington, and with each other, and also with the principal national parks; that such national highways be constructed on firm concrete bases with hard surfaces and as nearly dustless as possible; that they be located solely with regard to the greatest public good and feasibilty of route and grades; and be it further

Resolved, That Congress provide in such legislation means of raising the necessary money for the location and construction of such national highway by the restoration of the internal revenue tax of 1879 on tobacco or in some other manner, as to it shall seem meet and proper, and that the location and construction of such system of highways be commenced as means can be provided throughout the country generally, without giving priority to any sections or locations; and it is further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be forwarded by the secretary of state of the State of Montana to the Senate of the United States, and that copies of this memorial be forwarded by the secretary of state of the State of Montana to the House of Representatives of the United States; and be it further

Resolved, That copies thereof be transmitted by the secretary of state of the State of Montana to the Senators and Representatives in Congress of the State of Montana with the request that they use every effort within their power to bring about a speedy action for the accomplishment of the ends and purposes herein indicated.

Mr. MYERS presented a joint resolution passed by the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint resolution 5, relative to suspending entries on Flathead Reservation.

Whereas a large number of citizens, on what was formerly the Flathead Reservation in Montana, have presented filings on lands which are unoccupied and unallotted; and

Whereas said filings have been rejected and suspended by reason of the fact that the said land has not been classified or appraised; and

Whereas many of these settlers have made their applications several years ago and said applications have been rejected or suspended, awaiting the action of the department, which action has not yet been taken: Be it therefore

Resolved, That the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana does hereby protest against the dilatory action of the Department of the Interior, and does hereby demand that the said Department of the Interior take steps to immediately classify and appraise said lands, to the end that settlers may have proper filings accepted and that the land in question may be cultivated and become homes for citizens of the United States who have applied for and desire the same; be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be presented to the President of the United States, the Secretary of the Interior, and to the Members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives from Montana.

Mr. MYERS presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial 8.

A memorial to the Congress of the United States praying that the abandoned military post of Fort William Henry Harrison be ceded to the State of Montana.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States:

Your memorialists, the senators and representatives of the Thirteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, respectfully represent to your honorable bodies the following facts:

First. That the military post heretofore known as Fort William Henry Harrison, situated near the city of Helena, county of Lewis and Clark, State of Montana, has been abandoned for military purposes and the reservation turned over to the control of the Secretary of the Interior, subject to the direction of the Congress of the United States.

Second. That the land upon which said military post is situated, together with the water rights appertaining thereto, was purchased by citizens of the State of Montana, at great expense, and donated to the United States Government upon the express understanding that the same should be used as a site for the maintenance of a military post, and the abandonment of said post will be an injustice to the citizens who donated said land and water rights.

Third. That the abandoned post consists of 1,200 acres of land, with appurtenances, water rights, and numerous buildings of recent construction in good repair; that if said buildings are permitted to remain unoccupied and unused for any considerable time they will become in a condition of disrepair, and in time be rendered valueless by reason of such nonuse.

Fourth. That the State of Montana has numerous State institutions, some of which are now filled to their utmost capacity, and that the buildings situated upon said reservation could be conveniently and profitably used by the State for some of its State institutions.

Wherefore your memorialists respectfully ask your honorable bodies, by appropriate legislative action, to cause to be transferred and conveyed to the State of Montana the said real estate, water rights, and buildings constituting said abandoned post.

And your memorialists will ever pray.

W. W. McDOWELL,
President of the Senate.

Speaker of the House.

Mr. ASHURST. I present a memorial signed by various citizens of Arizona, which I ask may be incorporated in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection, the memorial was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FLAGSTAFF, ARIZ., April 3, 1913.

Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: We, the undersigned, members of the Coconino Cattle Growers' Association, respectfully urge that you strenuously oppose any bill which may be introduced in the United States Senate placing meat on the free list. Such a measure, if it becomes a law, would very seriously affect the cattle industry and indirectly other interests of the western country.

Your efforts in this direction will be appreciated by this association.

Mr. O'GORMAN presented a resolution adopted by the Assembly of the State of New York, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

IN ASSEMBLY, February 10, 1913.

Mr. Cuvillier offered for the consideration of the house a resolution in the words following:

Whereas by reason of the establishment of the parcel post and the increase of the United States mail the letter carriers are compelled to work longer, and their compensation is unequal in proportion to similar work of other public employees, and they are not subject to pensions after long and faithful service, though they are required to be men of the highest character, and they are exposed to the elements; and

Whereas it is the duty of the United States to protect these faithful employees in better compensation and a future maintenance in the way of pensions after long service—

Resolved (if the senate concur), That it is the sense of the legislature that the Congress should do all in its power to increase their compensation and provide a pension for the letter carriers, the same as provided for other faithful public servants in other departments of Government; and be it further

Resolved (if the senate concur), That our Representatives in Congress use their best endeavor in behalf of the betterment of letter carriers of the United States, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Postmaster General and the Representatives in Congress from the State of New York.

Said resolution giving rise to debate, ordered that the same be laid upon the table.

FEBRUARY 17, 1913.

By unanimous consent Mr. Cuvillier called up his resolution in relation to the pay of letter carriers and the parcel post.

Debate was had thereon.

Mr. Speaker put the question whether the house would agree to said resolution, and it was determined in the affirmative.

Ordered that the clerk deliver said resolution to the senate and request their concurrence therein.

FEBRUARY 18, 1913.

The senate returned the concurrent resolution in relation to pay of letter carriers and the parcel post with a message that they have concurred in the passage of the same without amendment.

STATE OF NEW YORK,
County of Albany, Office of the Clerk of the Assembly, ss:

I, George R. Van Namee, clerk of the assembly, do hereby certify that I have compared the foregoing record of proceedings of the assembly of February 10, 17, and 18, 1913, relative to the resolution therein set forth with the original thereof and that the same is a true transcript of said proceedings so far as the same relates to said resolution and of the whole thereof.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand this 24th day of February, 1913.

G. R. VAN NAMEE,
Clerk of the Assembly.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS—WENDELL P. HOOD.

On motion of Mr. LODGE, it was Ordered, That the papers in the pension case of Wendell P. Hood (S. 8203. 62d Cong.) be, and the same are hereby, withdrawn, no adverse report having been made thereon.

RETIRED OFFICERS OF THE ARMY.

Mr. DU PONT submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 35), which was read and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be requested to transmit to the Senate of the United States, as early as possible, the following information:

(1) The nature and character of the duties that retired officers of the United States Army may be detailed to perform under existing laws, regulations, and orders;

(2) The laws, regulations, and orders, if any, that define what is known as active duty on the retired list, and whether such laws, regulations, and orders permit officers on the retired list to apply for such duty; and

(3) The number of retired officers of the Army who have applied for active duty on the retired list since January 1, 1908, and the percentage of those applying who have been detailed on active duty on the retired list during this period.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

Mr. OVERMAN. I submit a resolution, for which I ask immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 36), as follows:

Resolved, That the United States Civil Service Commission be, and they are hereby, directed to furnish to the Senate the following information:

The laws, orders, and regulations by which the civil-service system was established and has been extended in the United States.

The number of employees and officers of the United States now employed in the different departments of the Government appointed through, and subject to, the civil-service law and regulations.

The number and names of the employees and officers of the United States now employed in the different departments of the Government who have been covered into the classified service by virtue of executive orders since January 1, 1900, together with the date and copy of each order.

The number and names of persons now in the classified civil service from each State and Territory and the District of Columbia, particularly the number of persons in the classified civil service from each State and Territory and the District of Columbia as differentiated from the number of such persons who have been appointed, also number and names of persons temporarily employed as differentiated from permanent employees.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the resolution?

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, I should like to have the Senator from North Carolina modify the resolution, if he will, so as to ascertain how many employees have been covered by executive order since the law was originally passed.

Mr. OVERMAN. Did the Senator from Kansas hear the third clause of the resolution read? That clause provides for furnishing the information as to those covered since 1900.

Mr. BRISTOW. I know; but I want to go back of 1900, to the beginning.

Mr. OVERMAN. All right; I have no objection to that.

Mr. BRISTOW. The resolution should provide for the information being furnished by years from the passage of the original law.

Mr. OVERMAN. If the Senator will offer such an amendment, I will accept it.

Mr. BRISTOW. I ask the Secretary to read the clause of the resolution to which I desire to offer an amendment.

The Secretary read as follows:

The number and names of the employees and officers of the United States now employed in the different departments of the Government who have been covered into the classified service by virtue of Executive orders since January 1, 1900, together with the date and copy of each order.

Mr. BRISTOW. The resolution provides for furnishing this information since January 1, 1900. I move to strike out the words "since January 1, 1900" and to insert in lieu the words "since the passage of the civil-service law"; and also to insert the words "by years" in the proper place.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Will that show when the employees were covered into the civil service?

Mr. BRISTOW. The date of each order will show.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from North Carolina a question. It seems to me that he has omitted one feature of information that would be very valuable. I should like to know how many people are in the classified service who have been put there without any examination as to efficiency. I should like to have the resolution so amended as to insure obtaining the information as to how many have been appointed without an examination as to efficiency, and so forth. I should like the Senator to accept an amendment of that kind.

Mr. BRISTOW. If the Senator from Virginia will permit me, the Executive orders will cover exactly the information which the Senator wants, because the employees that have been covered into the service by Executive order have come in without examination.

Mr. SWANSON. I think possibly some of the Executive orders provided for examinations.

Mr. OVERMAN. I think the resolution covers every case. If the Senator will listen to the reading of it, I believe he will see that it covers every case of any person who has ever gone into the civil service.

Mr. SWANSON. All I desire is to have information as to what extent appointments have been made in the classified service without examination as to efficiency. If under the resolution that information will be furnished, I do not desire to have it amended; and the Senator from North Carolina assures me that the information will be furnished.

Mr. OVERMAN. I do not see how a person could get into the service without examination, unless there was some Executive order issued to that effect. I have asked for a copy of the order and the name of the persons who were thus put into the classified service.

Mr. SWANSON. The Senator thinks that that information will be easily obtained under the resolution?

Mr. OVERMAN. I think the resolution will cover all cases.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, as I understand from the reading of the resolution it provides that the number of employees in the different departments should be ascertained. Does the Senator understand the resolution to cover the number in each of the different departments?

Mr. OVERMAN. In each of the different departments.

Mr. SMOOT. Or the whole number in the different departments?

Mr. OVERMAN. I have put it both ways so that there could be no question about it.

Mr. SMOOT. I should like to have the number in each of the different departments specified.

Mr. OVERMAN. That is exactly what I think the resolution covers.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I think this resolution is rather a complicated one and that it should go over.

Mr. SMOOT. I should like to have it read again.

Mr. JONES. I suggest that the resolution go over. It is a complicated and long resolution, and ought to be examined.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Washington object to the immediate consideration of the resolution?

Mr. JONES. I do.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will go over under objection of the Senator from Washington.

Mr. OVERMAN. I suppose as the resolution goes over under objection, it will be printed.

Mr. JONES. Yes; let it be printed.

Mr. OVERMAN. I ask that it be printed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be printed.

FARM AND ORCHARD BIRDS.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I offer the resolution which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution submitted by the Senator from New Jersey will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 34), as follows:

Resolved, That the Public Printer be, and is hereby, authorized and instructed to cause to be printed 1,000 copies for each Senator of Bulletin No. 513, known as Fifty Common Birds of Farm and Orchard.

Mr. CLAPP. The resolution should read "for the use of Senators," not "for each Senator."

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I accept the suggestion. Let it read "for the use of each Senator."

Mr. CLAPP. The word "each" should be stricken out, and it should read "for the use of Senators."

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, I am prompted to present the resolution by the fact that the bulletin mentioned was furnished to each Senator to the number of 250 copies, I believe. It is a bulletin, very nicely illustrated, treating of distinct birds, commonly known as farm and orchard birds. I distributed my quota liberally throughout my own State among the libraries and some few to the schools. In almost every instance I have received letters from the librarians and many from the principals of the schools asking that I might send them at least 100 copies, as they thought it would do more to instruct the students and the general reading public as to birds and the necessity of maintaining and preserving them than almost any other means that could be devised.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, do I understand the Senator's purpose to be to have 1,000 copies of this document printed for each Senator?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. That is my proposition. I felt that I should like to be as generous to other Senators as I was to myself, and I can find readily a place for a thousand copies in my little Commonwealth. Knowing the Senator's domain, I think he could do the same.

Mr. STONE. Then the Senator desires 96,000 copies printed?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Well, all right. I want a thousand for myself.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from New Jersey a question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Has it been ascertained what will be the cost of the proposed printing?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Not strictly; but I can say it is a comparatively small document, and the plates are already in the hands of the Public Printer. It is the plates that involve the cost and not the little matter of printing.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, before the Senate takes action on this question, I want to call attention to what it will ultimately lead. This provides for the printing of a bulletin issued by the Agricultural Department. I desire to say to the Senate that there is scarcely a department of the Government that has not asked time and time again for the printing of special bulletins issued by those departments.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. That is true.

Mr. SMOOT. And the House and the Senate Committees on Printing have absolutely refused to assent to such requests, for this reason: The Agricultural Department, in the annual appropriation bill, is provided with $475,000 for printing and binding. If we now undertake to print extra copies of bulletins for them, Heaven only knows where it will end.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I can not imagine, Mr. President——

Mr. SMOOT. Wait till I get through, if the Senator please.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Very well.

Mr. SMOOT. There is not a Senator who has not had requests for the separate printing as a public document of some bulletin issued by some one or the other of the departments, but such requests have been universally refused. I say to the Senator now that if this resolution he has offered shall be agreed to by the Senate, there will be no end of similar requests made by all of the departments, and instead of confining themselves to the amount that is provided for in the appropriation bills for the printing and binding to each particular department, they will come to Congress and ask that such bulletins be printed as public documents and distributed instead of being printed and distributed out of their own funds.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I have no desire, Mr. President, to overstep the bounds of propriety or to make any unreasonable demand; but I felt that inasmuch as the prevention of the destruction of agricultural crops throughout the length and breadth of our land is of so much importance and the flitting about of a multiplicity of birds would relieve us from much of that destruction, that this would be a fitting and proper resolution; but instead of asking for the immediate adoption of the resolution I will ask that it be referred to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course to that, Mr. President, I have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, the resolution will be referred to the Committee on Printing.

POLICEMEN'S AND FIREMEN'S PENSION ROLLS.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there further morning business? If not, morning business is closed. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read Senate resolution 31, submitted yesterday by Mr. BRISTOW, as follows:

Resolved, That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, directed to furnish the Senate the names of all persons borne on the policemen's and firemen's pension rolls of the District, and to inform the Senate what employment such persons have, either in the service of the Government or in private life, and what compensation is received by each pensioner so employed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator from Kansas if his resolution provides that the amount of pension in each case shall be stated as well as the compensation received when the person is employed in civil life?

Mr. BRISTOW. That was my intention.

Mr. GALLINGER. That ought to be definitely included. My attention was diverted from the reading of the resolution for a moment, and I should like to have it again read. If that is not included in the resolution it ought to be.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will again read the resolution.

The Secretary again read the resolution.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let the words "and the amount of pension each person receives" be inserted. They can well be inserted at any point in the resolution.

Mr. BRISTOW. I will be glad to have those words inserted.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 4, after the word "District," it is proposed to insert "and the amount of pension each person receives," so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, directed to furnish the Senate the names of all persons borne on the policemen's and firemen's pension rolls of the District, and the amount of pension each person receives, and to inform the Senate what employment such persons have, either in the service of the Government or in private life, and what compensation is received by each pensioner so employed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

ADJOURNMENT TO SATURDAY.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, after consulting with the junior Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN], I move that when the Senate adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 12 o'clock noon on Saturday next.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. STONE. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock and 41 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Saturday, April 12, 1913, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, April 10, 1913.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father in heaven, draw us by Thy holy influence to Thee that we may be partakers of Thy spirit, denizens of the kingdom of heaven; that we may glorify the work Thou hast given us to do and pass on our way rejoicing, with music in our voice, a smile on our face, and the warmth of a generous heart in the clasp of our hand. Receiving, giving, giving and receiving, spending and being spent in a willing service to our fellow men, and Thine be the praise. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Tuesday was read and approved.

SWEARING IN OF A MEMBER.

Mr. HOWELL, of Utah, appeared at the bar of the House and took the oath of office.

AMENDMENTS TO THE CONSTITUTION.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has in his possession, and will deliver to the Clerk, communications from the proper authorities in the State of New Hampshire stating that they have ratified the sixteenth amendment, and also from the States of North Dakota, New Mexico, and Wisconsin, stating that they have ratified the seventeenth amendment. [Applause.]

The following are the communications referred to:

EDWARD N. PEARSON,
Secretary of State.

STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE, 1913.

Joint resolution ratifying the sixteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America.

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives in general court convened:

Whereas both Houses of the Sixty-first Congress of the United States of America, at its first session, by a constitutional majority of two-thirds thereof, made the following proposition to amend the Constitution of the United States of America in the following words, to wit:

"A joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following article is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the Constitution, namely, Article XVI:

"'The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several States, and without regard to any census of enumeration.'"

Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives in general court convened, That the said proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America be, and the same is hereby, ratified by the General Court of the said State of New Hampshire; and further be it

Resolved, That certified copies of this joint resolution be forwarded to the governor of this State, to the Secretary of State of the said United States, and to the presiding officers of the Senate and House of Representatives of the said United States.

WILLIAM J. BRITTON,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
ENOS K. SAWYER,
President of the Senate.

Approved March 14, 1913.

SAMUEL D. FELKER, Governor.

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER,
Madison, Wis., March 25, 1913.

Hon. CHAMP CLARK,
Speaker House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

SIR: Herewith inclosed please find a copy of joint resolution No. 5, introduced as joint resolution No. 3 S., ratifying the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States relating to the popular election of United States Senators, recently passed by both branches of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, together with the attached certificate of the Hon. J. S. Donald, secretary of state. Like copies of this joint resolution are to-day forwarded by me to the Hon. William Jennings Bryan and the Hon. THOMAS R. MARSHALL, pursuant to the terms of the resolution itself.

Please acknowledge that it has been received.

Respectfully, yours,

FRANCIS E. MCGOVERN,
Governor of Wisconsin.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
THE STATE OF WISCONSIN,
DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

To all to whom these presents shall come:

I, J. S. Donald, secretary of state of the State of Wisconsin and keeper of the great seal thereof, do hereby certify that the annexed copy of joint resolution No. 5, introduced as joint resolution No. 3, S., has been compared by me with the original enrolled act on file in this department and that the same is a true copy thereof and of the whole of such original enrolled act.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State, at the capitol, in the city of Madison, this 20th day of March, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.]

J. S. DONALD,
Secretary of State.

Joint resolution ratifying an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relating to popular election of United States Senators.

Whereas both Houses of the Sixty-second Congress of the United States of America, at its second session, by a constitutional majority of two-thirds thereof, made the following proposition to amend the Constitution of the United States of America in the following words, to wit:

"A joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That in lieu of the first paragraph of section 3 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States, and in lieu of so much of paragraph 2 of the same section as relates to the filling of vacancies, and in lieu of all of paragraph 1 of section 4 of said Article I, in so far as the same relates to any authority in Congress to make or alter regulations as to the times or manner of holding elections for Senators, the following be proposed as an amendment to the Constitution, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the States:

"'The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, elected by the people thereof, for six years; and each Senator shall have one vote. The electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State legislature.

"'The times, places, and manner of holding elections for Senators shall be as prescribed in each State by the legislature thereof.

"'When vacancies happen in the representation of any State in the Senate, the executive authority of such State shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies: Provided, That the legislature of any State may empower the executive thereof to make temporary appointments until the people fill the vacancies by election, as the legislature may direct.

"'This amendment shall not be so construed as to affect the election or term of any Senator chosen before it becomes valid as part of the Constitution.'"

Therefore be it

Resolved by the senate (the assembly concurring), That the said proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America be, and the same is hereby, ratified by the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this joint resolution, certified by the secretary of state, be forwarded by the governor to the Secretary of State at Washington and to the presiding officers of each House of the National Congress.

H. C. MARTIN,
President of the Senate.
MERLIN HULL,
Speaker of the Assembly.

STATE OF NEW MEXICO,
OFFICE OF SECRETARY OF STATE,
Santa Fe, March 17, 1913.

To the Hon. CHAMP CLARK,
Speaker of the House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

SIR: Pursuant to instructions, I have the honor to transmit herewith joint resolution No. 20, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of New Mexico, "ratifying the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing for the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people," approved March 14, 1913.

Very respectfully,

WILLIAM C. MCDONALD,
Governor of New Mexico.

STATE OF NEW MEXICO,
OFFICE OF SECRETARY OF STATE.

I, Antonio Lucero, secretary of state of the State of New Mexico, do hereby certify that there was filed for record in this office at 10.05 o'clock a. m. on the 15th day of March, A. D. 1913, senate joint resolution No. 20, ratifying the proposed amendment to the Constitution of United States providing for the election of Senators by direct vote of the people; and also that I have compared the following copy of the same with the original thereof now on file and declare it to be a correct transcript therefrom and of the whole thereof.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State of New Mexico at the city of Santa Fe, the capital, on this 15th day of March, A. D. 1913.

ANTONIO LUCERO,
Secretary of State.

Senate joint resolution 20, ratifying the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing for the election of Senators by direct vote of the people.

Whereas at the second session of the Sixty-second Congress of the United States of America a joint resolution was duly adopted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, as follows, to wit:

"That in lieu of the first paragraph of section 3 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States, and in lieu of so much of paragraph 2 of the same section as relates to the filling of vacancies, the following be proposed as an amendment to the Constitution, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the States:

"'The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, elected by the people thereof, for six years, and each Senator shall have one vote. The electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State legislatures.

"'When vacancies happen in the representation of any State in the Senate the executive authority of the State shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies: Provided, That the legislature of any State may empower the executive thereof to make temporary appointments until the people fill the vacancies by election as the legislature may direct.

"'This amendment shall not be so construed as to affect the election or term of any Senator chosen before it becomes valid as part of the Constitution.'"

STATE OF NORTH DAKOTA,
EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Bismarck, N. Dak., March 6, 1913.

Hon. CHAMP CLARK,
Speaker of the House, Washington, D. C.

SIR: In obedience to the provisions of the joint resolution ratifying, on the part of the State of North Dakota, the amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing for the direct election of United States Senators, I herewith inclose to you a certified copy of the joint resolution as passed by both branches of the thirteenth legislative assembly of this State.

A joint resolution ratifying a proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Whereas the Sixty-second Congress of the United States of America, at the second session, by a constitutional majority of two-thirds thereof, made and passed the following proposal to amend the Constitution of the United States of America in the following words, to wit:

"Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution providing that Senators shall be elected by the people of the several States.

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That in lieu of the first paragraph of section 3 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States, and in lieu of so much of paragraph 2 of the same section as relates to the filling of vacancies, the following be proposed as an amendment to the Constitution, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the States:

"'The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, elected by the people thereof for six years, and each Senator shall have one vote. The electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State legislatures.

"'When vacancies happen in the representation of any State in the Senate the executive authority of such State shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies: Provided, That the legislature of any State may empower the executive thereof to make temporary appointments until the people fill the vacancies by election as the legislature may direct.

"'This amendment shall not be so construed as to affect the election or term of any Senator chosen before it becomes valid as part of the Constitution.'"

Therefore be it

Resolved by the Legislative Assembly of the State of North Dakota, duly convened, That the said foregoing proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America be, and the same is hereby, ratified by the Legislative Assembly of the State of North Dakota; and be it further

Resolved, That certified copies of this joint resolution be forwarded by the governor of this State of the Secretary of State of the United States of America, at Washington, and to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the National Congress.

Approved March 7, 1913, 9.25 a. m.

L. B. HANNA,
Governor.
J. H. FRAINE,
Speaker of the House.
M. J. GEORGE,
Chief Clerk of the House.
A. T. KRAABEL,
President of the Senate.
W. D. AUSTIN,
Secretary of the Senate.

This certifies that the within bill originated in the House of the Thirteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of North Dakota and is known on the records of that body as house bill No. 5.

M. J. GEORGE,
Chief Clerk of the House.

Filed in this office this 18th day of February, 1913.

THOMAS HALL,
Secretary of State.

STATE OF NORTH DAKOTA,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE,
BISMARCK, N. DAK.

I, Thomas Hall, secretary of state of North Dakota and keeper of the great seal of said State, do hereby certify that the foregoing three pages, hereto attached, contain a true and correct copy of a joint resolution ratifying that amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing for the direct election of United States Senators, as passed by the Thirteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of North Dakota, which was approved by the governor on the 18th day of February, A. D. 1913, the original of which is now on file in my office.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State at Bismarck, N. Dak., this 6th day of March, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] THOMAS HALL,
Secretary of State.

ELECTION OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move the election of the Committee on Ways and Means, the Committee on Rules, the Committee on Accounts, the Committee on Enrolled Bills, and the Committee on Mileage, and I send the names of the various Members to the Clerk's desk. I wish to state, Mr. Speaker, that the Democratic names in this list were suggested as the choice of the Democratic caucus. The names of the Republicans on the list come as the suggestion of the Republican leader, and the Progressives on this list are at the suggestion of the leader of the Progressive Party.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report first the Ways and Means Committee, as proposed.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee on Ways and Means.—Oscar W. Underwood, Alabama (chairman); Francis Burton Harrison, New York; Dorsey W. Shackleford, Missouri; Claude Kitchin, North Carolina; Henry T. Rainey, Illinois; Lincoln Dixon, Indiana; Cordell Hull, Tennessee; Winfield S. Hammond, Minnesota; Andrew J. Peters, Massachusetts; A. Mitchell Palmer, Pennsylvania; Timothy T. Ansberry, Ohio; John N. Garner, Texas; James W. Collier, Mississippi; Augustus O. Stanley, Kentucky; Sereno E. Payne, New York; Joseph W. Fordney, Michigan; Augustus P. Gardner, Massachusetts; J. Hampton Moore, Pennsylvania; Sydney Anderson, Minnesota; William R. Green, Iowa; and Victor Murdock, Kansas.

The SPEAKER. Are there any other nominations? If not, they will be considered as agreed to.

There were no other nominations, and the nominees were elected.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the next list of committee appointments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee on Rules.—Robert L. Henry, Texas (chairman); Edward W. Pou, North Carolina; Thomas W. Hardwick, Georgia; Finis J. Garrett, Tennessee; Martin D. Foster, Illinois; James C. Cantrill, Kentucky; Michael F. Conry, New York; Philip P. Campbell, Kansas; Irvine L. Lenroot, Wisconsin; Edwin A. Merritt, jr., New York; and M. C. Kelly, Pennsylvania.

The SPEAKER. Are there any other nominations? If not, these are agreed to.

There were no other nominations, and the nominees were elected.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the next list.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee on Accounts.—James T. Lloyd, Missouri (chairman); William R. Smith, Texas; James A. Hamill, New Jersey; Michael F. Conry, New York; William S. Howard, Georgia; George J. Kindel, Colorado; John W. Abercrombie, Alabama; James A. Hughes, West Virginia; William W. Griest, Pennsylvania; James S. Parker, New York; and Roy O. Woodruff, Michigan.

The SPEAKER. Are there any other nominations?

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, are remarks in order?

The SPEAKER. Nominations are in order, and remarks also, the Chair suspects.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I assume that I have control of the floor.

The SPEAKER. Of course the gentleman has.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would like to ask the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] how much time he desires?

Mr. COOPER. Just three or four minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield to the gentleman five minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I rise at this time lest, by maintaining silence, I might seem to acquiesce in the present method of appointing the committees of the House. I refer especially to the method approved at the recent Republican caucus and to-day being put in practice.

Three years ago there was a revolution on this floor, partly in protest against the practice of permitting the Speaker of this House to select the committees. That revolution was successful. The Speaker now is deprived of that power.

But an attempt is being inaugurated through the action of the Republican caucus to restore it to him, for that caucus nominated a candidate for Speaker and gave to that candidate the sole power to name the Republican members of committees.

I did not attend that caucus. I would not attend it, if there were no other reason than is found in the fact that a Member of the House who attends a caucus is considered as pledging himself in advance to abide by its decision, whatever it may be. I will not enter a secret meeting under any such pledge.

This view of the nature of a caucus has often been expressed here. Men have been punished by Speakers, by removal from committees and otherwise, for no other reason than that they refused to abide by a caucus decree.

A conference differs from a caucus. Men may well attend a conference—a meeting to which Representatives are free to go, with every desire to do what is best for their party, but, after it is over, free to vote in the House as they believe, under their oaths, will be best for the country.

But the Republican caucus bound the votes of those in attendance and gave to one man—and, of course, I have no personal contest with him—the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], the exclusive right to name the personnel of the committees, so far as concerns the Republicans of the House.

Mr. MADDEN. Does the gentleman from Wisconsin believe that that is right?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Wisconsin yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN]?

Mr. COOPER. I yield. No; I do not believe that it is right.

Mr. MADDEN. Neither do I.

Mr. COOPER. It is not right, and no man can convince to the contrary any candid, intelligent person familiar with conditions here under the old plan.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. COOPER. In just one moment.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Wisconsin yield to the gentleman from Kansas?

Mr. COOPER. I yield.

Mr. MURDOCK. I agree with the gentleman in his criticism of that manner of selecting committees, but I want to ask the gentleman this: Does he know that the Progressives met in an open, nonsecret conference, and that the entire conference selected the men whom they chose to name?

Mr. COOPER. I knew that.

Mr. MURDOCK. Does the gentleman approve of that?

Mr. COOPER. I do. That is a very proper way. [Applause.] It is not only a very proper way, but it is the only proper way.

Mr. Speaker, I will read from the Washington Herald of April 13, 1911, a very significant editorial utterance:

> The experiment of appointing the committees of the House through a committee rather than by the Speaker seems thus far to have been successful. It has certainly removed complaint concerning the autocratic power of the Speaker. Instances have been numerous enough in the past when Speakers deliberately framed committees so as to coincide with their own personal views, regardless of public sentiment. This personal equation has been removed.

Observe that the Herald, a paper published in this city and familiar with the facts, declares that in numerous instances in the past Speakers have deliberately framed committees to carry out their own views regardless of public sentiment.

I have known—and we might just as well tell the truth about it——

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. How much time does the gentleman desire?

Mr. COOPER. I would like about two minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield to the gentleman five minutes more.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is recognized for five minutes more.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I know that the statement in the Herald editorial is absolutely true. In my somewhat extended experience as a Representative in Congress I have known Speakers deliberately to pack committees to defeat legislation demanded by the country—yes, demanded by a majority of the Speaker's own party on this floor.

A great writer and an able impartial observer has described the power of the Speaker under the old rules. Mr. Bryce, the ambassador from the Court of St. James to this country, in his splendid work, in many respects unrivaled as an analysis and study of American politics, discusses the Speaker's power under the old rules. Mr. Bryce says that under the rules of the House of Representatives a power is given to the Speaker—> which in the hands of a capable and ambitious man becomes so far-reaching that it is no exaggeration to call him the second, if not the first, political figure in the United States, with an influence on the affairs of men and the course of domestic events superior in ordinary times to the President.

And now I beg the earnest attention of the Members of the House to another and powerfully suggestive statement of Ambassador Bryce:

> The disposal of committee assignments is a tremendous piece of patronage, by which the Speaker can attract support to himself and to his own section of the party, reward his friends and give politicians opportunity of arising to distinction, or practically extinguishing their congressional careers.

This is saying only what intelligent Members of prior Congresses know—that through the power to make committee appointments a Speaker can reward Members who do his bidding and punish those who do not.

If the gentleman from Illinois should be elected Speaker, with the sole power of recognition which he will have, and with the power to appoint the committees, what becomes of the individual independence of legislators on this floor? It goes glimmering, just as it did before under the old rules.

Gentlemen say that they entered the caucus, but reserved to themselves the right of independence in voting upon legislative matters before the House. Yes, but that means nothing, for if the Speaker is to appoint all of the committees, how are these gentlemen going to vote upon legislative matters that the Speaker and his committees do not permit to come upon the floor?

That sort of explanation does not deceive anybody who knows of what took place here formerly. For, as is set forth in the Herald editorial, committees were deliberately packed by Speakers to carry out their wishes, regardless of public sentiment. This being true, what does your reservation of legislative independence in voting upon measures amount to?

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] desire any time?

Mr. MANN. No.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Does the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] desire any time?

Mr. MURDOCK. No.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask for a vote.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Tennessee rise?

Mr. AUSTIN. I ask the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means for three minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee is recognized for three minutes.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Speaker, it was my privilege in the recent Republican caucus to offer the resolution conferring upon the minority leader of this House the right to represent the Republican Party in selecting the minority representation on the various committees of this House.

I have served only a limited period in this House, but during those four years I think I have had an opportunity of carefully studying the conduct of the Hon. JAMES R. MANN, of Illinois. I believe that the Republican Party can trust him in the selection of its representatives on the various committees of this House. [Applause.] He has never faltered in the faithful discharge of his duty. He has never failed to measure up to the high standard of his colleagues in representing them as their leader. It will be time enough to offer these criticisms when our leader deserves them, but up to this good time he deserves—he is entitled to—and will receive the united support of the Republican Party in this House of Representatives.

Mr. COOPER. Will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Tennessee yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin?

Mr. AUSTIN. No; I have only three minutes.

Mr. COOPER. You can get more time.

Mr. AUSTIN. If the gentleman from Wisconsin had an unfortunate experience with a late Speaker of the House of Representatives, that water has gone under the bridge. Let us forget our differences in the past and stand here united to fight the Democracy with their free-trade tariff bill that they are seeking to put on the statute books. We have had strife enough; we have had dissensions enough; we have had divisions enough in the Republican Party, and in the name of that party let us sink our differences in the past and be united in this Congress. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MURDOCK. Will the gentleman from Alabama yield to me?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will yield to the gentleman from Kansas five minutes.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN] makes the very grave mistake of placing this matter upon personal grounds. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] did not make a personal attack upon the Republican leader, Mr. MANN. He was very careful not to do so. He was attacking the system, and he should attack the system. It has now been over two years since the old system passed and the Democratic Party adopted the new system. The new system has bettered things in many respects, and in other respects it has not bettered things; but, taking the change, by and large, the system the Democratic Party has given us in the House is infinitely better than Cannonism. [Applause.] Back of Cannonism at its height, I submit to all of you, was the power lodged in the Speaker under a system which permitted one man to have almost complete control over the personnel of committees. The Democrats have broken away from the old system. I think they have departed from it for all time to come. They have a committee—the Ways and Means Committee—and that committee is empowered, as I understand it, by the Democratic caucus to select the standing committees of the House.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; but to recommend them to the caucus.

Mr. MURDOCK. The Ways and Means Committee having made up such names takes the list to the Democratic caucus for its approval. Is that correct?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. MURDOCK. The Progressives have taken an advanced step. We have a committee on committees which recommends the selection of Members, and brings those recommendations back, not to a secret caucus, but to an open conference, and I submit to all the Members of this Congress on all sides of the proposition that that is eminently fair, and as the gentleman from Wisconsin has said, is the only fair way.

I want to say more particularly to the Republican Members this: You have adhered to a system which means if you should ever return to power that you will return to Cannonism. [Applause.] You have placed in the hands of your leader, Mr. MANN, the right to select your committees. If in the future you should become triumphant as a party you will go back to a system which this House discarded, and, waiving, if it is possible on an occasion like this, any partisan feeling and putting it purely from the viewpoint of an American citizen, I hope that we will never return to the old system. The old system did not make for good legislation, it was not good politics, and it was not good government. [Applause.]

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield some time to me?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois three minutes.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I think the time has come when the Members of the House should be selected for committee work on account of ability, experience, and fitness for the special work to which they are to be assigned.

Careful consideration should be given to the ability and experience of every man serving in the House by some committee qualified to canvass the situation, and after that canvass has been made, because of both experience and ability, as well as integrity, men should, without relation to their length of service or their allegiance to so-called leaders, be placed in positions of responsibility where they will be able to do the most good for the people of the country. [Applause.] This fossilized habit of selecting men regardless of their qualifications or ability or experience, and regardless of whether they will work or not, but only because of their length of service and fealty to leaders, ought to be done away with. The people of the country are looking forward to the time when the House will be organized along the lines of the suggestions that I have just made; and for one, until such time arrives. I favor the selection of men for the various places on the committees by a committee of the various parties represented in the House, instead of by any one man as the representative of a party in the House. I do more. I think that every committee in the House ought to sit in open session [applause], and that all its acts should be subject to the scrutiny of the public and of the press. I believe that a record ought to be kept of what takes place in the various committees, and I am in favor of caucuses being held with open doors [applause], so that the people may understand. We ought to peopleize the Congress of the United States. If the people of the United States have confidence enough in a man to elect him to Congress, that man ought to justify that confidence by doing his work in the open where the people can see and understand it. In my judgment, one of the things that defeated Mr. Taft for the Presidency was that instead of having confidence in the Republicans, who elected him President of the United States, he could only find men for high places among the Democrats. [Laughter.] I told him more than once that if the Republican Party had confidence enough in him to elect him President, he ought to have confidence enough in the Republicans to name his men from the Republican ranks. I am a Republican, and I have no apology to make for my Republicanism. I am going to stand as a Republican, no matter how many isms there are in the country, and I am going to fight the Democrats every inch of the way. [Applause.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL].

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] has criticized the manner of the nomination of the Republican members of the Committee on Ways and Means. I do not understand that the gentleman from Wisconsin intended any reflection whatever on the ability or fairness of the Republican floor leader in that connection. Lest some who are not fully acquainted with the gentlemen who were selected may be of the opinion, from what has been said, that there has been a mistake made in those selections, let me call the attention of the House to the fact that whatever the opinion of Members may be as to the manner of the nominations, the selections are such as should, in my opinion, receive the unqualified support of the entire House. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] has suggested that Members should be selected not altogether by reason of seniority, but because of their ability and their fitness for the service to be performed. Two of the four new nominations of Republicans for the Committee on Ways and Means are men serving the beginning of their second term in the House. As a matter of fact, the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GREEN] has not served a full term in the House. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON] has served one full term. The other two gentlemen have served longer in the House, with distinction and with credit. Whatever we may think of the manner of the nominations, the selections themselves are most excellent; and whatever we may think of the manner in which selections should be made in the future, let us remember that at this time there is no official organization of Republican Members in the House to whom the duty of selecting Republican Members for that committee could be delegated. We have no committee on committees, and the only way in which the Members could have been selected for the Ways and Means Committee, other than the way in which they were selected, was by a caucus of the Republican Members. My good friend from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] has suggested that he could not attend such a gathering, so that we would have been unfortunate had we selected them in that way in not having his valued presence. It seems to me, therefore, that under the circumstances, having selected six good men, true and faithful to the Republican doctrine of protection, it is hardly the time or the place to criticize the manner of their selection. I am thankful as a Republican that we have on this great committee four new men who may be depended upon to act in harmony with the worthy and splendidly qualified men who have heretofore served on the committee. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] knows more about the tariff than any man under the flag, and we have also the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY], stalwart and true. Mr. Speaker, our party is to be congratulated that we have on the Republican side of the Committee on Ways and Means men who can be depended upon to stand as a wall of adamant against the advancing tide of Democratic free trade. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the gentleman from Alabama to yield me three minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman from Iowa three minutes.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Speaker, I apprehend that before the adjournment of the Sixty-third Congress gentlemen on that side of the House will have ample opportunity to apologize for their plan of appointing the standing committees of the House. Vicious as is the plan of allowing the Speaker of the House to appoint committees, the plan of allowing the Committee on Ways and Means to appoint these committees is still more vicious. Look at the situation as it presents itself to-day. The committees of this House are not appointed and they will not be until the tariff bill has been passed. The Committee on Ways and Means, or the majority members thereof, will not permit the appointment of committees until the Members on that side of the House have bowed down to their masters, the members of the Committee on Ways and Means, and voted for their tariff bill. The Democratic Party is now considering, not in an open caucus but in a secret caucus, under the five-minute rule—the second house, if you please—the Democratic tariff bill. The Democratic Members of the House know all too well that if they would secure the committee appointments which they seek they must vote for the tariff bill introduced by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD]. They must vote for the program laid down by the Democratic members of the Committee on Ways and Means. Now, Members must, by their votes for the Underwood bill, buy their committee assignments. I am sure that if the people of this country have resented the old plan of the Speaker appointing committees they will resent still more the present plan of our Democratic majority of permitting the Committee on Ways and Means to appoint the committees of this House.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I dislike to ask the indulgence of the House, but will the gentleman from Alabama kindly yield me four minutes more?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I would like to close up the debate as we have a caucus this evening, but I will yield the gentleman four minutes.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, I wish gentlemen to get clearly in mind, especially the new Members of the House, what is well understood here by Members of prior Congresses, and that is the distinction between a caucus and a conference. When the Vreeland currency bill was pending in the House five years ago the Republican Members of the House had a conference. That meeting was called as a conference, and at the meeting, before the transaction of any business, Mr. George Prince, then a Member from Illinois, rose and introduced the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted. I copied this from the report in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, of a speech made by Mr. Prince in the House, in which he read this resolution. I also attended that conference, and know that what Mr. Prince said was true. This is the resolution that was introduced and adopted:

Resolved, That this meeting, or any adjournment thereof, is only a conference and not a caucus, and shall not have the binding effect of a caucus, and that those who participate in its deliberations shall be absolutely free hereafter to act in accordance with their own judgment with reference to all matters considered before it.

This resolution declared that the meeting was a conference, and not a caucus, and should not have the "binding effect of a caucus." The resolution thus plainly recognized the well-understood difference between a conference and a caucus.

Every gentleman who attended the recent Republican caucus or any other caucus did it knowing that thereby he pledged himself in advance to abide the decision of that secret meeting.

Mr. Speaker, such an autocratic power as that described by the Herald and by Ambassador Bryce I had hoped was forever driven from the Congress of the United States, and I am amazed that, after the great struggle of three years ago, the Republicans of this House would now call a caucus upon the question of the adoption of the rules and of selecting a candidate for Speaker, and in that caucus give the candidate the power to appoint committees, and that then, after that power has been given to the man who will be the next Speaker, if we are successful at the next election, they should send out cards, one of which I received yesterday, calling for a conference on the tariff bill.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] yield to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. BURKE]?

Mr. COOPER. Yes, sir.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I would like to ask the gentleman from Wisconsin if he attended——

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] has expired.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Will the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] yield to me one minute?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will yield one minute to the gentleman.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I happened to be one of the committee of three that called the Republican caucus to which the gentleman from Wisconsin has referred, and in view of his criticism of the matter I want to say that the caucus was called by direction of the Republicans of the Sixty-second Congress pursuant to a resolution that was adopted on the 28th of February. The chairman and secretary of the Republican caucus in the Sixty-second Congress were to retire, and did retire, on March 4, and therefore it was necessary to delegate a committee to call a caucus of the Republican Members of this Congress, and if the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] was not present when that caucus was held it was his fault. The committee that called the caucus in this Congress simply carried out the instructions received as I have stated, and there was no suggestion that the caucus be called a conference, but, on the other hand, the resolution was explicit that we were to call a caucus immediately preceding the convening of the Sixty-third Congress.

Mr. MANN rose.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I do not rise for the purpose of explaining or apologizing. I have no apology to make for the recommendations I have made. It is true that the material on the Republican side is so plentiful that it sometimes becomes a work quite difficult to perform—to select men out of the wealth of that material. These gentlemen who do it in open caucus have to find somebody qualified to fill the places.

Mr. Speaker, after all, it is not so much the method of appointing committees as it is the final results of legislation. The Republicans of this House are quite well qualified to speak for themselves and for their principles. They are not required to send their leader to some one man in the country and receive his instructions as to legislation. [Applause on the Republican side.] They do not call upon the President or anybody else, in order to make up a tariff bill or other bills for them, as our Democratic friends do. [Applause on the Republican side.] Whoever will be selected for Republican places on the committees will be qualified to fill the places and to perform their functions without first asking either President Wilson or ex-President Roosevelt. [Applause and laughter.]

Mr. BRYAN. Will the gentleman yield for a question——

Mr. LENROOT rose.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT].

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Speaker, this discussion this morning has gone to the question of the system of appointing committees, and, as has been stated, I think, by every speaker, there is nothing personal in it. I only rise for the purpose of correcting, I think, one misapprehension that has been indulged in in the debate by some as to exactly what the situation is. It has been assumed by my colleague and friend from my own State, Mr. COOPER, that what has been done upon the minority side is synonymous with what is called "Cannonism," against which both he and I and many others have fought as long as we have been Members of this House. But, Mr. Speaker, I want to call his attention and the attention of the other Members of this House to the fact that there is this very wide distinction: That what has been done by the Republican minority amounts only to a nomination, and the House now is required to vote on these committees and elect them, which never was true under what was known as "Cannonism." And the old Members will bear me out that if the Members of this House four years ago had been permitted to vote on the committees appointed by the Speaker——

Mr. COOPER. Does not the gentleman know that the caucus has bound every Member on this side?

Mr. LENROOT. The caucus bound them four years ago, but they never could have been elected in this House, notwithstanding the action of the caucus at that time. I want to say that I am heartily in favor of the views of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN], and I think the caucus should always ratify these selections; but in the duty imposed upon the minority leader, his power to recommend these nominations is not by virtue of his being a candidate for Speaker, but by virtue of his being made the floor leader of the minority. And neither the Republican Party nor any other party, when they elect a Speaker of this House, will ever again return to what has been known as "Cannonism," giving the Speaker the sole power of appointing committees of this House. I think it only fair to make the statement in order that this record that has been made this morning may be accurate.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a vote.

The SPEAKER. The question is on electing these Members nominated for election to the Committee on Accounts.

The question was taken, and the nominees were elected.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next one.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee on Enrolled Bills.—William A. Ashbrook, Ohio (chairman); Robert G. Bremner, New Jersey; L. Lazaro, Louisiana; S. Kirkpatrick, Iowa; Simeon D. Fess, Ohio; and Charles M. Thomson, Illinois.

The SPEAKER. Are there any other nominations? If not, these are elected.

There were no other nominations, and the nominees were elected.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the next one.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee on Mileage.—Warren Worth Bailey, Pennsylvania (chairman); James P. Maher, New York; Hatton W. Sumners, Texas; Charles A. Kennedy, Iowa; and Jacob Johnson, Utah.

The SPEAKER. Are there any other nominations? If not, without objection, these men are declared elected.

There were no other nominations, and the nominees were elected.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. GARRETT of Texas, by unanimous consent, was granted leave of absence indefinitely, on account of sickness in his family.

TRAFFIC REGULATIONS, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. SIMS. Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to take up any time, but I want to ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD an editorial from the Evening Star, of this city, under date of yesterday, and to give notice that at the proper time I shall introduce a resolution to investigate the charges of the failure to enforce the laws of the District of Columbia, as stated in that editorial. I hope everybody will read it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. SIMS] asks unanimous consent to have printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD an editorial from the Evening Star of yesterday, which he sends to the Clerk's desk. Is there objection?

Mr. CAMPBELL. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I wish to inquire what is the subject matter of this editorial?

Mr. SIMS. I ask that it be read. It will take only a minute. I ask, Mr. Speaker, that the editorial be read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent that the editorial be read. Is there objection?

Mr. CAMPBELL. There is no objection to that.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas does not know whether there is or not. [Laughter.] Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

THE TRAFFIC RULE BREAKERS.

The Star has been noting with some interest lately the manner in which the new traffic regulations are being enforced, especially in regard to the disposition of cases by the police and the courts, and it finds a striking lack of uniformity in the treatment of offenses suggestive of the need of a better understanding on the part of the traffic policemen and officers at station houses as to their duties and responsibilities. In yesterday's Star was given a list of the traffic cases during the past 24 hours, 45 in number, the charges ranging from driving a wagon to the curb on the wrong side to the collision of an auto with a pedestrian. The lowest penalty was $1 and the highest $10. The total amount of fines and collaterals was $181. Had all these cases been taken to court and all received the maximum fines prescribed by the law the aggregate of penalties would have been $1,800. In other words, the penalties imposed were about one-tenth of the maximum fines prescribed by the rules.

It may well be asked why these 45 offenders were allowed to escape so easily from the consequences of their violation of the rules. The answer is simple. It was because in 40 of the 45 cases the defendants forfeited collaterals deposited at the police stations. No attempt was made to bring them to court, the collateral being regarded as in the nature of a fine. Of the 40 collaterals 6 were for $1 each and 16 for $2. The average of the collaterals taken was $3.82½. In four cases a collateral of $10 was required, all of these being for speeding automobiles. Probably in most of these cases the court would have been justified in imposing the maximum penalty and the defendants were glad to be released on a smaller amount than they feared they would have to pay if they reported for trial.

The truth is these collaterals, taken in the 40 of 45 cases, are to be rated as no more than license fees for illegal driving and mooring and cycling. It is to be remembered that only a small percentage of traffic-rule violators are arrested. Those who regard the regulations as negligible under the present system of penalties are willing to take their chances. If every one caught were taken to court and fined to the limit there would be a much more wholesome respect for the law than there is at present. It is easy to overtake a collateral forfeiter with a court attachment. His license number is registered and, short of departure from the District, he can be brought to the bar in short order. With this advantage it is absurd to keep the law standing in its present terms and make no more practical attempt to enforce it.

Mr. SIMS. Mr. Speaker, the Star is not given to making sensational statements, and the facts stated in an editorial in that paper is sufficient authority to warrant this House in making a thorough investigation of the absolute failure to execute the laws of Congress intended to save life and limb in this city. A deposit of one or two dollars to secure the appearance of an offender is so small as to suggest that his personal appearance is not wanted.

A number of years ago I introduced a bill and secured its passage by the House, which became a law limiting the speed of automobiles and all other vehicles in the District of Columbia and providing that parties violating that law for the first offense should be fined, for the second offense fined and imprisoned, at the discretion of the court, and for the third offense it was made mandatory to impose both fine and imprisonment.

Mr. Speaker, so far as I am advised, very few persons have been imprisoned under that law, and if no better attempt is made than is indicated by the editorial just read to enforce the speed laws, they had as well be repealed.

Mr. Speaker, I realize that few persons, in proportion to the number who are guilty of violating the speed laws and traffic regulations, are ever arrested, because it is a practical impossibility to have enough policemen engaged in looking after automobile speeders to arrest all who are guilty. But this fact does not authorize such a mere pretense of enforcing the law as is shown by the Star editorial. It is useless for Congress to pass good laws if those charged with their execution make a mere farce of them.

Mr. Speaker, Congress can pass laws that will end this sort of thing. We can make the machine liable for the fine and costs incident to violations of the law and authorize the seizure and sale of same, and that no automobile shall be operated in the District of Columbia with a speed capacity exceeding 15 miles per hour. With the broad streets and avenues in this city, with the absence of the numerous dray wagons that infest large jobbing and manufacturing cities, there is no excuse for the great number of accidents due to automobile speeding in the city of Washington.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the printing of this editorial in the RECORD? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL MONDAY.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I make the motion, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama moves that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. GARDNER. Was the rule making that a privileged motion adopted permanently, or only for the last Congress?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think the gentleman is mistaken. The rule that was adopted in the last Congress was in reference to a recess. It is always in order to make a motion to adjourn to a definite time.

Mr. GARDNER. I make the point of order, Mr. Speaker, that the motion that when the House adjourns it adjourn to meet on a day certain is not a privileged motion. I have no objection, of course, to that action, but I want to have the matter settled. It is one of the motions that used to be employed to filibuster with.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman wants to have the House come here to-morrow and adjourn, I have no objection.

Mr. MANN. Why does not the gentleman from Alabama ask unanimous consent?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, if the gentleman from Massachusetts wants to insist on the rule——

Mr. GARDNER. I have no desire to do that; but the gentleman from Alabama objected to it when the Chair translated his motion into a request for unanimous consent.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman from Alabama will permit a suggestion, I am inclined to think myself that, there being nothing else in order before the House, the motion would be in order.

Mr. GARDNER. I will withdraw my point of order.

Mr. MANN. But without calling upon the Chair to rule upon that—because it may become important if that motion should be used at any time for filibustering purposes—I suggest to the gentleman from Alabama that he ask unanimous consent.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] withdraws his point of order. The question is upon agreeing to the motion of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn until Monday next.

The motion was agreed to.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 1 o'clock p. m.) the House, pursuant to the order agreed to, adjourned until Monday, April 14, 1913, at 12 o'clock noon.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I present a joint resolution passed by the Legislature of Utah, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

There being no objection, the joint resolution was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

A joint resolution relative to aid from the Government of the United States for industrial education and the inauguration and establishment of a national university and department of education.

Be it resolved by the Legislature of the State of Utah:

Whereas the perpetuity of our form of government depends on the intelligence of a free and independent electorate and the ability of the people to meet the obligations of good citizenship in every sphere of human endeavor; and

Whereas the people of the several States, firm in this belief, have established and maintained at great cost public school systems, including normal and technical schools and universities, for the education and training of the youth of the Republic; and

Whereas the preservation of and the progress made under our free institutions have been largely due to the education and training thus given; and

Whereas there exists throughout the land a growing demand for more instruction in branches that will prepare pupils for industrial pursuits; and

Whereas as results of education among the people are the mutual benefits conferred upon all by an ideal American citizenship, so the expense attending its achievement should be proportionately shared by the Nation and the several States; and

Whereas the National Government should directly aid by a per capita appropriation to such grammar, secondary, and technical schools in the several States as furnish instruction in industrial branches prescribed by Congress and by inaugurating and endowing at Washington, D. C., a national university to head the educational system of the Union; and

Whereas the time is at hand in our history when the cause of education should be advanced to a paramount position in the Government of the United States by the creation of a department of education and the appointment of a secretary thereof with a seat in the Cabinet: Therefore be it

Resolved by the senate and house of representatives jointly, That our Senators in Congress be instructed and our Representatives requested to use all honorable means to secure the aid set forth in the foregoing preamble and also the inauguration and establishment of a national university and department of education at Washington, D. C.; be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit a certified copy of these resolutions to the President of the United States, the President and Speaker, respectively, of the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States, the Commissioner of Education, and to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress; be it further

Resolved That the secretary of state be, and he is hereby, further directed to transmit a like copy to the governor and superintendent of public instruction, respectively, of each State, and also the presiding officers of the respective houses of the legislature of each State.

HENRY GARDNER,
President of the Senate.
WM. J. SEELY,
Speaker of the House.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
STATE OF UTAH,
OFFICE OF SECRETARY OF STATE.

I, David Mattson, secretary of state of the State of Utah, and custodian of the seal of said State, do hereby certify that I have carefully compared the annexed copy of senate joint resolution No. 8, of the Tenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Utah, with the original thereof as filed in the office of the secretary of state of the State of Utah, on the 10th day of March, 1913, and that it is a full, true, and complete transcript therefrom and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the State of Utah.

Done at Salt Lake City, Utah, this 10th day of March, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] DAVID MATTSON,
Secretary of State.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I present a joint memorial of the Legislature of Utah, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

There being no objection, the joint memorial was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF UTAH,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

I, David Mattson, secretary of state of the State of Utah, do hereby certify that the attached is a full, true, and correct copy of senate joint memorial No. 2, asking an appropriation of 1,000,000 acres of arid lands for the benefit of veterans who performed services in the Indian wars of the Territory of Utah and the widows of such veterans, and for the improvement of public roads of the State of Utah, as appears of record in my office.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Utah this 4th day of April, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] DAVID MATTSON,
Secretary of State.
By T. L. HOLMANS, Deputy.

A memorial asking an appropriation of 1,000,000 acres of arid land for the benefit of veterans who performed services in the Indian wars of the Territory of Utah and the widows of such veterans, and for the improvement of public roads of the State of Utah. A memorial from the governor and Legislature of the State of Utah to the President, the Senate, and House of Representatives of the United States.

To the President of the United States and to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The governor and the Legislature of the State of Utah respectfully petition that there be donated to the State of Utah 1,000,000 acres of public land, nonmineral, unallotted, and arid, within the State of Utah, to be sold by the State under such rules as Congress may prescribe, the proceeds to be applied equally for the following purposes:

First. For the benefit of the veterans who rendered actual services in any of the Indian wars of the Territory of Utah in the regular militia of the Territory or the widows of such veterans.

Second. For the improvement of the public roads of the State of Utah.

Your memorialists represent that under the provisions of chapter 55, session laws of Utah, 1909, the legislature of this State provided for and created a board of commissioners to be known as commissioners of Indian war records, and by such act provided that such board should ascertain the names of the persons who were members of any organization performing military duty during any of the Indian wars or expeditions against the Indians, or who performed the duty of home guards as members of any organization doing military duty during the time of any Indian war or expedition in the Territory of Utah, and to ascertain the character of the services rendered, and the duration of the same.

That by the provisions of the foregoing act the facts relating to such services are to be determined by the said board of commissioners upon evidence produced before it, and upon affidavits of at least two reputable witnesses in each case; that from the record so provided and as now completed it appears that there are now surviving 2,500 of such veterans, or widows of such veterans, and from such record it appears that such services covered a period of years, the aggregate time being 609,521 days.

Your memorialists further represent that such services made possible the reclamation and settlement, not only of the lands now included within the State of Utah but of the lands included within the adjoining States; that these veterans have been seeking relief from Congress for several sessions last past, but have so far signally failed in receiving any aid whatever.

Your memorialists keenly realize the debt of gratitude that is due to the veterans and to the widows of the veterans who performed such valuable services in the development and settlement of this country, and respectfully submit that financial aid should now be extended to them and that it would be a most proper act on the part of Congress to set aside for such purpose, out of the public lands within this State, 500,000 acres.

Your memorialists further represent that by means of bond issue, appropriations from the general fund of the State, and by appropriations from the funds of the respective counties of the State during the biennium of 1911–12 there has been expended in the improvement of the public highways of this State more than $1,000,000, and that the present legislature of this State has provided for an expenditure during the coming biennium for such purposes approximately a like amount, $50,000 of which is to be expended upon what is known as the Midland Trail, and which is to be a part of the transcontinental highway now projected. The building up of the territory within this State which will necessarily follow the extension and improvement of the highways throughout the State will be a benefit, not only to the people within this State but also to the people of the United States, and to your memorialists it seems most proper that the Government should aid in such work by contributing from the public lands within this State the amount herein asked to be appropriated for such purpose.

Resolved, That copies of this memorial be engrossed and forwarded one each to the President, the Senate, and the House of Representatives, to Senator REED SMOOT, Senator GEORGE SUTHERLAND, Congressman JOSEPH HOWELL, and Congressman JACOB JOHNSON with the request that Utah's congressional delegation use every legitimate effort to cause the provisions of this memorial to be enacted into law by the Congress of the United States.

Approved March 19, 1913.

WILLIAM SPRY, Governor.
HENRY GARDNER,
President of the Senate.

Speaker of the House.

Secretary of State.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I present a joint memorial of the Legislature of Utah, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

There being no objection, the joint memorial was referred to the Committee on Pensions and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF UTAH,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

I, David Mattson, secretary of state of the State of Utah, do hereby certify that the attached is a full, true, and correct copy of house joint memorial 2, memorializing the Members of Congress to enact into law the pending Crago pension bill, as appears of record in my office.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Utah this 4th day of April, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] DAVID MATTSON,
Secretary of State.
By T. L. HOLMAN, Deputy.

To the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the governor and Legislature of the State of Utah, respectfully represent that—

Whereas there are now living in Utah several hundred veterans of the Spanish-American War, and the widows and orphans of veterans who offered their lives in their country's services during said war; and

Whereas the State is always fully cognizant of the splendid service rendered by the Utah batteries and other military commands of which Utah boys were members; and

Whereas the widows and orphans of veterans of the late war in this and other States are without pension or support of any kind from the Government, notwithstanding the benefits of this kind are extended to veterans of earlier wars; and

Whereas there is pending in Congress the measure called the Crago pension bill, which places the widows and orphans of the Spanish-American War veterans on the pension rolls; and this measure is now in committee of the Senate; and it is very urgent that this measure be passed at the present session of Congress, in justice to the families of Spanish War veterans, living and dead: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the governor and Legislature of the State of Utah, respectfully memorialize the Members of Congress to enact into law the pending Crago pension bill.

Approved March 19, 1913.

WILLIAM SPRY, Governor.
HENRY GARDNER,
President of the Senate.

Speaker of the House.

Secretary of State.

Mr. GOFF presented memorials of sundry citizens of Kimball, Huntington, Good Will, Gilliam, Elkhorn, and Anawalt, all in the State of West Virginia, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation prohibiting any society, fraternal order, or organization from sending through the mails any written or printed matter representing such society, etc., which is already being used as a part of its title or name by any other society or fraternal organization, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. CHILTON. I present a joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of West Virginia, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

There being no objection, the joint resolution was referred to the Committee on Pensions and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint resolution 22.

Whereas what is known as the Home Guard soldiers of this State were called into active service of this State on behalf of the preservation of the Union in the late Civil War between the States; and

Whereas these soldiers did good and valuable service in the time of most extreme danger and peril, leaving their homes and during their service endured extreme hardships under adverse circumstances, and in most instances their services in the preservation of the Union were as valuable as that of the soldier enlisted in the Regular Army of the United States; and

Whereas they are now all old, infirm, and feeble, and unable to work to support themselves in such a manner as they should be cared for, and many of them are poor and disabled from said service; and

Whereas our National Government has not provided for them or recognized their services in any of the pension laws of the United States as heretofore passed by Congress, it is just and right that these old surviving veterans, their widows and orphans, should have a right to some consideration in the pension laws of the United States: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Legislature of West Virginia, That our Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States be requested and instructed to use all urgent and diligent means to secure any proper pension law extending the benefit to such West Virginia State troops and Home Guards as served 60 days in said service and were honorably discharged, the same as United States soldiers, and that the secretary of state to furnish each of our representatives in Congress a copy of these resolutions.

Adopted by the house of delegates February 8, 1913.

JOHN GUY PRICHARD,
Clerk of the House of Delegates.

Adopted by the senate February 18, 1913.

JOHN T. HARRIS,
Clerk of the Senate.

STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA:

I, Stuart F. Reed, secretary of state of the State of West Virginia, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of house joint resolution 22, adopted by the Legislature of West Virginia February 18, 1913.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the said State, at the city of Charleston, this 8th day of April, 1913.

[SEAL.] STUART F. REED,
Secretary of State.

Mr. CHILTON. I present a joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of West Virginia, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Claims.

There being no objection, the joint resolution was referred to the Committee on Claims and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows.

Senate joint resolution 4.

A joint resolution of the Legislature of West Virginia memorializing the Congress of the United States to enact into law Senate bill 6247 and to provide for the payment to West Virginia of the sums of money due the State from the disposition of the lands ceded by Virginia to the United States March 1, 1784, and to carry out the trust embodied in said cession of Virginia to the United States.

Whereas on the 20th day of October, 1783, Virginia authorized a cession of the northwest territory to be made to the United States, and on March 1, 1784, her deed of cession was completed, whereby Virginia yielded to the Congress of the United States, for the benefit of said States, all right, title, and claim which the said Commonwealth had to the territory northwest of the River Ohio, subject to the conditions annexed to the said act of cession; and

Whereas the following were the proceedings of Congress which occurred on March 1, 1784, in and about said cession:

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

March 1, 1784, Virginia, through her Delegates in the Continental Congress—Thomas Jefferson, Samuel Hardy, Arthur Lee, and James Monroe—completed the act of cession, the following proceedings being had in Congress:

"On motion of Mr. Howell, of Rhode Island, the following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas the General Assembly of Virginia, at their session commencing on the 20th day of October, 1783, passed an act to authorize their Delegates in Congress to convey to the United States, in Congress assembled, all the right of that Commonwealth to the territory northwest of the River Ohio; and

"Whereas the Delegates of said Commonwealth have presented to Congress the form of a deed proposed to be executed pursuant to the said act, in the words following:

"'To all who shall see these presents:

"'We, Thomas Jefferson, Samuel Hardy, Arthur Lee, and James Monroe, the underwritten Delegates for the Commonwealth of Virginia in the Congress of the United States of America, send greeting:

"'Whereas the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Virginia, at their sessions begun on the 20th day of October, 1783, passed an act entitled "An act to authorize the Delegates of this State in Congress to convey to the United States, in Congress assembled, all the right of this Commonwealth to the territory northwestward of the River Ohio," in these words following, to wit:

"'Whereas the Congress of the United States did, by their act of the 6th day of September, in the year 1780, recommend to the several States in the Union having claims to waste and unappropriated lands in the western country a liberal cession to the United States of a portion of their respective claims for the common benefit of the Union; and

"'Whereas this Commonwealth did, on the 2d day of January, in the year 1781, yield to the Congress of the United States, for the benefit of said States, all right, title, and claim which the said Commonwealth had to the territory northwest of the River Ohio, subject to the conditions annexed to the said act of cession; and

"'Whereas the United States, in Congress assembled, have, by their act of the 13th of September last, stipulated the terms on which they agree to accept the cession of this State, should the legislature approve thereof, which terms, although they do not come fully up to the propositions of this Commonwealth, are conceived, on the whole, to approach so nearly to them as to induce this State to accept thereof, in full confidence that Congress will, in justice to this State for the liberal cession she has made, earnestly press upon the other States claiming large tracts of waste and uncultivated territory the propriety of making cessions equally liberal for the common benefit and support of the Union.

"'Be it enacted by the general assembly, That it shall and may be lawful for the Delegates of this State to the Congress of the United States, or such of them as shall be assembled in Congress, and the said Delegates, or such of them so assembled, are hereby fully authorized and empowered, for and on behalf of this State, by proper deeds or instrument in writing, under their hands and seals, to convey, transfer, assign, and make over unto the United States, in Congress assembled, for the benefit of said States, all right, title, and claim, as well of soil as jurisdiction, which this Commonwealth hath to the territory or tract of country within the limits of the Virginia charter situate, lying, and being to the northwest of the River Ohio, subject to the terms and conditions contained in the before-recited act of Congress of the 13th day of September last; that is to say, upon condition that the territory so ceded shall be laid out and formed into States, containing a suitable extent of territory, not less than 100 nor more than 150 miles square, or as near thereto as circumstances will admit; and that the States so formed shall be distinct republican States and admitted members of the Federal Union, having the same rights of sovereignty, freedom, and independence as the other States. That the necessary and reasonable expenses incurred by this State in subduing any British posts or in maintaining forts and garrisons within and for the defense, or in acquiring any part of the territory so ceded or relinquished, shall be fully reimbursed by the United States; and that one commissioner shall be appointed by Congress, one by this Commonwealth, and another by those two commissioners, who, or a majority of them, shall be authorized and empowered to adjust and liquidate the account of the necessary and reasonable expenses incurred by this State which they shall judge to be comprised within the intent and meaning of the act of Congress of the 10th of October, 1780, respecting such expenses; that the French and Canadian inhabitants and other settlers of the Kaskaskies, St. Vincents, and the neighboring villages who have professed themselves citizens of Virginia shall have their possessions and titles confirmed to them and be protected in the enjoyment of their rights and liberties; that a quantity not exceeding 150,000 acres of land, promised by this State, shall be allowed and granted to the then colonel, now Gen. George Rogers Clark, and to the officers and soldiers of his regiment who marched with him when the posts of Kaskaskies and St. Vincents were reduced, and to the officers and soldiers that have been since incorporated into the said regiment, to be laid off in one tract, the length of which not to exceed double the breadth, in such place on the northwest side of the Ohio as a majority of the officers shall choose, and to be afterwards divided among the said officers and soldiers in due proportion according to the laws of Virginia; that in case the quantity of good land on the southeast side of the Ohio, upon the waters of the Cumberland River and between the Green River and Tennessee River, which have been reserved by law for the Virginia troops, upon continental establishment, should, from the North Carolina line bearing in farther upon the Cumberland lands than was expected, prove insufficient for their legal bounties, the deficiencies should be made up to the said troops in good lands to be laid off between the Rivers Scioto and Little Miami, on the northwest side of the River Ohio, in such proportion as have been engaged to them by the laws of Virginia; that all the lands within the territory so ceded to the United States and not reserved for or appropriated to any of the beforementioned purposes or disposed of in bounties to the officers and soldiers of the American Army shall be considered as a common fund for the use and benefit of such of the United States as have become, or shall become, members of the confederation or federal alliance of the said States, Virginia inclusive, according to their usual respective proportions in the general charge and expenditure, and shall be faithfully and bona fide disposed of for that purpose and for no other use or purpose whatsoever: Provided, That the trust hereby reposed in the Delegates of this State shall not be executed unless three of them, at least, are present in Congress; and

"'Whereas the said general assembly, by the resolution of June 6, 1783, had constituted and appointed us, the said Thomas Jefferson, Samuel Hardy, Arthur Lee, and James Monroe, Delegates to the said Commonwealth in Congress for one year from the first Monday in November then next following, which resolution remains in full force:

"'Now, therefore, know ye that we, the said Thomas Jefferson, Samuel Hardy, Arthur Lee, and James Monroe, by virtue of the power and authority committed to us by the act of the said General Assembly of Virginia before recited, and in the name and for and on behalf of the said Commonwealth, do by these presents convey, transfer, assign, and make over unto the United States, in Congress assembled, for the benefit of the said States, Virginia inclusive, all right, title, and claim, as well of soil as jurisdiction, which the said Commonwealth hath to the territory or tract of country within the limits of the Virginia charter situate, lying, and being to the northwest of the River Ohio, to and for the uses and purposes and on the conditions of the said recited act. In testimony whereof we have hereunto subscribed our names and affixed our seals in Congress the 1st day of March, in the year of our Lord 1784, and of the independence of the United States the eighth.'

"Resolved, That the United States, in Congress assembled, are ready to receive this deed whenever the Delegates of the State of Virginia are ready to execute the same.

"The Delegates of Virginia then proceeded and signed, sealed, and delivered the said deed, whereupon Congress came to the following resolution:

"'Resolved, That the same be recorded and enrolled among the acts of the United States in Congress assembled;' and

"Whereas by said proceedings the State of Virginia granted to the United States the territory embracing the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, part of Minnesota, amounting to one hundred and seventy million (170,000,000) acres of land; and

"Whereas said cession of the State of Virginia to the United States of America was not an absolute gift, but the same was upon expressed conditions, as follows, to wit, the same being set out in the clause of the act of Virginia and in the deed of cession:

"'That all land within the territory so ceded to the United States and not reserved or appropriated to any of the before-mentioned purposes, or disposed of in bounties to the officers and soldiers of the American Army, shall be considered as a common fund for the use and benefit of such of the United States as have become or shall become members of the confederation or federal alliance of the said States, Virginia inclusive, according to their usual respective proportions in the general charge and expenditure, and shall be faithfully and bona fide disposed of for that purpose and for no other use or purpose whatsoever;' and

"Whereas West Virginia, until the 20th day of June, 1863, was a part of the Commonwealth of Virginia, and upon said 20th day of June, 1863, was formed into the State of West Virginia; and

"Whereas the United States, after said grant went into effect, expressly recognized that said grant was not absolute in its terms, but was upon conditions; and

"Whereas the conditions of said grant were not carried out as specifically set out in the act of the General Assembly of Virginia and in the deed of cession, and said land was not used for the benefit of all of the States, as expressly provided for in said act of cession, but Congress appropriated 38,868,212 acres of land and practically $3,000,000 derived from the sale of these public lands to the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, and the same were used entirely and absolutely for local purposes within said States for the construction of schools, canals, roads, and other local purposes therein, thus in no manner carrying out the reservations in said deed of cession. The value of said land so donated to local uses, at the price at which said lands were fixed per acre, would make the value of said donation for local purposes for said States, contrary to the terms of said deed of cession, amount to $80,695,078; and by the action of the United States, in reference to said conditional cession, one-fifth of the land conveyed by Virginia under such conditional cession has been disposed of and Virginia has derived no use and benefit for the same, Virginia's proportion in the general charge and expenditure being about one-seventh of the whole, giving her interest in the lands not applied as directed by the deed at about one-seventh of the whole; and

"Whereas Senate bill 6247, to provide for the bringing of suits against the United States by Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Georgia, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maryland, South Carolina, New Hampshire, North Carolina, and Rhode Island, has been introduced in the Senate of the United States by WILLIAM E. CHILTON, a Senator from West Virginia, for the purpose of allowing each of the said States to institute a suit in the Court of Claims in and about the matters arising from said cession; and

"Whereas West Virginia, being part of the original Commonwealth of Virginia, is directly interested in the adjustment of Virginia's reserve interest in the lands ceded to the United States March 1, 1784: Therefore be it

"Resolved by the Senate of the State of West Virginia (the House of Delegates concurring), That the Congress of the United States be memorialized to enact said bill into law, allowing an adjustment of the sums of money due the State of West Virginia derived from the disposition of the lands ceded by Virginia to the United States March 1, 1784, in contravention of the terms of the said cession to the Government of the United States, and that the just proportion of the amount justly due the State of Virginia be held for the use and benefit of the State of West Virginia, and that the Senators and Representatives of the State of West Virginia in the Congress of the United States be requested to use all honorable efforts to bring about the action of the Congress of the United States, so that the rights of West Virginia in the premises may be protected, and that her part of the sums of money above set out shall be paid to her under and according to the terms of the convention aforesaid between Virginia and the United States."

Adopted by the senate January 30, 1913.

JOHN T. HARRIS,
Clerk of the Senate.

Adopted by the house of delegates January 31, 1913.

JOHN GUY PRICHARD,
Clerk of the House of Delegates.

STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA:

I, Stuart F. Reed, secretary of state of the State of West Virginia, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of senate joint resolution No. 4, adopted by the Legislature of West Virginia January 31, 1913.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the said State at the city of Charleston, this 8th day of April, 1913.

[SEAL.]

STUART F. REED,
Secretary of State.

Mr. CHILTON. I present a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of West Virginia, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

There being no objection, the concurrent resolution was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House concurrent resolution 8.

Memorial of the Legislature of West Virginia to the Congress of the United States asking that West Virginia be divided into three Federal districts for judicial purposes, and that an additional district, to be known as the central judicial district, be created.

Whereas the population of the State of West Virginia has greatly increased since the division of the State into two judicial districts and the establishment of the southern United States district court of said State; and

Whereas the wealth and other interests of said State have increased more rapidly than the population; and

Whereas transportation lines and other public service corporations have also vastly increased within said period, so that it is necessary that additional facilities for transacting the business of the public in the district court of the United States within said State should be increased, to the end that the people may have their controversies speedily settled with the least possible cost and delay: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be, and the same is hereby, respectfully petitioned and memorialized to create within said State an additional Federal district court, and that it be located in and have jurisdiction over the territory extending from the eastern to the western line through the center of said State, to include such territory and population as proportionately to divide said State into three sections, to be known as the northern, central, and southern districts; and that a judge and such other officials necessary to properly equip said court be appointed to discharge the duties thereof; and thus the legislature will ever pray.

Adopted by the house of delegates February 8, 1913.

JOHN GUY PRICHARD,
Clerk of the House of Delegates.

Adopted by the senate February 13, 1913.

JOHN T. HARRIS,
Clerk of the Senate.

STATE OF WEST VIRGINIA:

I, Stuart F. Reed, secretary of state of the State of West Virginia, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of house concurrent resolution No. 8, adopted by the Legislature of West Virginia February 13, 1913.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the said State, at the city of Charleston, this 8th day of April, 1913.

INTERSTATE TRADE COMMISSION.

By Mr. NEWLANDS:

A bill (S. 829) to create an interstate trade commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, regarding this bill I wish to say that it was introduced by me during the last Congress; it was considered by the Interstate Commerce Committee and amended and perfected by it, but was not reported to the Senate by the committee, the committee having come to the conclusion that it would not report any bill, but would make simply a general report upon the subject matter of trusts and combinations in which the members of that committee would give their individual views. That report was presented by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS] during the closing days of the last session and included the approving, qualifying, or differing views of other Senators, including my own views, in which I continued to urge, as I had for many years, the creation of a trade commission for the enforcement of the Sherman Act and other legislation relating to trusts and monopolies. I introduce this bill as a measure perfected by the committee, but not as a measure having its favorable indorsement. No final vote was had in the committee upon it. I ask that the bill be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, that order will be made.

The bill (S. 829) to create an interstate trade commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes, was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

A bill (S. 829) to create an interstate trade commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted, etc., That this act shall be referred to and cited as the interstate trade commission act. Corporations a majority of whose voting securities is held or owned by any corporation subject to the terms of this act are referred to herein as subsidiaries of such holding or owning corporation.

SEC. 2. That there is hereby created a body to be known as the interstate trade commission, which shall consist of three members, of whom no more than two shall belong to the same political party. The commission shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and the terms of such commissioners so first appointed shall be three, six, and nine years, respectively, and shall be so designated by the President in making such appointments; and thereafter all the commissioners shall hold office for the term of nine years and shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Vacancies shall be filled by like appointment and confirmation for the unexpired term. Each member of said commission shall receive a salary of $10,000 a year. The office of the commission shall be at Washington, in the District of Columbia, but the commission may hold meetings elsewhere when necessary and convenient.

SEC. 3. That the Bureau of Corporations is hereby transferred to and merged in said commission, and all of the powers, duties, records, papers, and funds belonging or pertaining to the Bureau of Corporations shall hereafter belong and pertain to the interstate trade commission, and all the officers and employees of said bureau shall thereupon be officers and employees of the interstate trade commission. The said commission shall also have a secretary, a chief clerk, and such clerks, inspectors, examiners, experts, messengers, and other assistants as from time to time may be necessary and as may be appropriated for by Congress.

SEC. 4. That all corporations engaged in commerce among the several States or with foreign nations, excepting common carriers, shall from time to time furnish to the commission such information, statement, and records of their organization, business, financial condition, conduct, and management, and the organization, business, financial condition, conduct, and management of their subsidiaries, at such time, to such degree and extent, and in such form as may be prescribed by the commission; and the commission at all reasonable times, or its duly authorized agent or agents, shall have complete access to all records, accounts, minutes, books, and papers of such corporations and their subsidiaries, including the records of any of their executive or other committees. Failure or neglect on the part of any corporation subject to this act, or of any of its subsidiaries, to comply with the terms of this section within such time after written demand shall have been made upon such corporation by the commission requiring such compliance, as shall be fixed by the commission, shall constitute a misdemeanor, and upon conviction such corporation shall be subject to a fine of not more than $1,000 for every day of such failure or neglect.

SEC. 5. That the information so obtained shall be public records, and the commission shall from time to time make public such information in such form and to such extent as it may deem necessary.

SEC. 6. That the district courts of the United States, upon the application of the commission alleging a failure to comply with any order of the commission or alleging a failure to comply with or a violation of any of the provisions of this act by any corporation subject thereto, shall have jurisdiction to issue a writ or writs of mandamus or injunction or other order enforcing such order of the commission or commanding such corporation, its officers and employees, to comply with the provisions of this act.

SEC. 7. That for the purposes of this act the commission shall have the power to require by subpœna the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of all books, papers, contracts, agreements, documents, or other things of every kind and nature whatsoever relating to any matter under investigation by the commission. Such attendance of witnesses and the production of such documentary evidence may be required from any place in the United States at any designated place of hearing, and in case of disobedience to a subpœna the commission, or any party to a proceeding before the commission, may invoke the aid of any court of the United States in requiring the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of books, papers, and documents under the provisions of this section.

And any of the circuit courts of the United States within the jurisdiction of which such inquiry is carried on may, in case of contumacy or refusal to obey a subpœna issued to any corporation subject to the provisions of this act, or other person, issue an order requiring such corporation, or other person, to appear before said commission (and produce books, documents, and papers, if so ordered) and give evidence touching the matter in question, and any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof. The claim that any such testimony or evidence may tend to criminate the person giving such evidence shall not excuse such witness from testifying.

The testimony of any witness may be taken at the instance of a party in any proceeding or investigation pending before the commission by deposition at any time after the inquiry is instituted. The commission may also order testimony to be taken by deposition in any proceeding or investigation pending before it at any stage of such proceeding or investigation. Such deposition may be taken before any person authorized so to do by the commission, and who has power to administer oaths.

Any person may be compelled to appear and depose, and to produce documentary evidence, in the same manner as witnesses may be compelled to appear and testify and produce documentary evidence before the commission as hereinbefore provided. Such testimony shall be reduced to writing.

Witnesses whose testimony is taken under the provisions of this act shall severally be entitled to the same fees as are paid for like service in the courts of the United States.

No person shall be excused from attending and testifying, or from producing books, papers, documents, or other things before this commission or in obedience to the subpœna of the commission, whether such subpœna be signed or issued by one or more of the commissioners on the ground or for the reason that the testimony or evidence, documentary or otherwise, required of him may tend to criminate him or subject him to a penalty or forfeiture. But no natural person shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter, or thing concerning which he may testify under oath or produce evidence, documentary or otherwise, before said commission in obedience to a subpœna issued by it in a proceeding instituted upon its own initiative: Provided, That no person so testifying shall be exempt from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in so testifying. The purpose of this provision is to give immunity only to natural persons who under oath testify in response to a subpœna of the commission in an inquiry instituted by the commission.

SEC. 8. That the said commission shall, on or before the 1st day of January in each year, make a report, which shall be transmitted to Congress. This report shall contain such information and data collected by the commission as it may deem of value in the determination of questions connected with the regulation of commerce, together with such recommendations as to additional legislation relating thereto as the commission may deem necessary.

SEC. 9. That any person willfully making or furnishing to said commission any statement, return, or record required by this act, when knowing such statement, return, or record to be false in any material particular, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

SEC. 10. That in case a final decree shall be issued against any corporation under the act entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," approved July 2, 1890, or under sections 73 to 77, inclusive, of "An act to reduce taxation, to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes," which became a law August 27, 1894, the court entering such decree may, in its discretion, refer to the commission its decree, with instructions to take evidence, consider such facts, and report to the court the findings as to method of dissolution or reorganization as the commission shall consider best fitted to carry out such decree; if a reorganization takes place under a decree, the commission shall inform itself respecting the reorganization, and if it is of the opinion that it is not in harmony with the decree it shall, through counsel, inform the court for such action as the court may take.

SEC. 11. That the said commission may at any time, upon complaint of any person or corporation, or upon its own initiative, or upon the request of the Attorney General, or of the corporation affected, investigate any corporation subject to the provisions of this act, for the purpose of determining whether such corporation has been guilty of a violation of the act entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," approved July 2, 1890, or under sections 73 to 77, inclusive, of an "Act to reduce taxation," etc., which became a law August 27, 1894, or of any of the provisions of this act, and may hold such hearings and take such evidence as it may deem necessary; and in case the commission shall find that such corporation has been guilty of a violation of the provisions of said acts or of this act it shall make a finding, stating the facts and prescribing the acts, transactions, and readjustments necessary in order that said corporation may thereafter comply with the terms of said acts and of this act, and shall transmit a copy of the said finding in full to such corporation. If within 60 days after transmitting said finding, or such extension thereof as shall be given by the commission, the corporation shall not have complied with the terms of the finding, and shall not have performed the acts prescribed as necessary to make it comply with the said acts or with this act, the commission shall report the fact of noncompliance to the Attorney General, together with a copy of such finding, for his action under the said acts or of this act. But the commission may, if it deems it proper, report the facts to the Attorney General without calling upon such corporation for compliance with said acts or with this act.

Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to prevent or interfere with the Attorney General in enforcing the provisions of the act to protect commerce, etc., approved July 2, 1890.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. BRISTOW submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $500 to pay the expenses incurred in connection with the death of and transportation to the place of interment of the body of Charles Woodyard, of Baldwin, Kans., etc., intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

Mr. GORE submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $300,000 in aid of the common schools in the Cherokee, Creek, Choctaw, Chickasaw, and Seminole Nations in Oklahoma during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

HEARINGS BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 39), which was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Appropriations, or any subcommittee thereof, be authorized during the Sixty-third Congress to send for persons and papers and to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee, and to have the same printed for its use, the expenses thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and that the committee or any subcommittee thereof may sit during the sessions of the Senate.

SUBWAY ELECTRIC MONORAIL.

Mr. STONE submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 41), which was read and referred to the Committee on Rules:

Resolved, That the Committee on Rules be, and is hereby, directed to inquire and report to the Senate under and by what authority the so-called electric monorail passing through the subway connecting the Capitol with the Senate Office Building was constructed, the cost to the Government of the construction, and such other information as may be necessary to fully advise the Senate with respect to the premises.

2. That said committee inquire and report to the Senate whether some other methods of conveyance than those now in operation between said Office Building and the Capitol, more economical and comfortable, can not be provided, or whether all conveyances for that purpose should not be discontinued.

PAINT CREEK COAL FIELDS, WEST VIRGINIA.

Mr. KERN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 37), which was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That a committee of three Members of the Senate be appointed by the President of the Senate to make a thorough and complete investigation of the conditions existing in the Paint Creek coal fields of West Virginia for the purpose of ascertaining—

First. Whether or not a system of peonage is maintained in said coal fields.

Second. Whether or not access to post offices is prevented, and if so, by whom.

Third. Whether or not the immigration laws of this country are being violated, and if so, by whom.

Fourth. If any or all of those conditions exist, the causes leading up to such conditions.

Fifth. Whether or not the Commissioner of Labor, or any other official or officials of the Government, can be of service in adjusting such strike.

Sixth. Whether or not parties are being convicted and punished in violation of the laws of the United States.

Said committee, or any subcommittee thereof, is hereby empowered to sit and act during the session or recess of Congress, or of either House thereof, at such time and place as it may deem necessary; to require by subpœna or otherwise the attendance of witnesses and the production of papers, books, and documents; to employ stenographers to take and make a record of all evidence taken and received by the committee and keep a record of its proceedings; to have such evidence, record, and other matter required by the committee printed and suitably bound; and to employ such assistance as may be deemed necessary. The chairman of the committee, or any member thereof, may administer oaths to witnesses. Subpœnas for witnesses shall be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee or subcommittee thereof. The claim that any testimony or evidence given may tend to incriminate the person giving such evidence shall not excuse such witness from testifying, but such evidence or testimony shall not be used against such person on the trial of any criminal proceedings except in prosecuting for perjury committed in giving such testimony. Every person who, having been summoned as a witness by authority of said committee or any subcommittee thereof, willfully makes default, or who, having appeared, refuses to answer any questions pertinent to the investigation herein authorized, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 nor less than $100 and imprisonment in a common jail for not more than one year nor less than one month, as provided in section 102 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

The expenses thereof shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate on vouchers ordered by said committee, signed by the chairman thereof and approved by the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

EMPLOYMENT OF ASSISTANT CLERKS.

Mr. WILLIAMS submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 38), which was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committees on Coast and Insular Survey; on Enrolled Bills; on Expenditures in the Department of Agriculture; on Expenditures in the Departments of Commerce and Labor; on Expenditures in the Department of State; on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game; on National Banks; on Public Health and National Quarantine; on Woman Suffrage; to Examine the Several Branches of the Civil Service; on Indian Depredations; on the Mississippi River and its Tributaries; on Pacific Railroads; and on Transportation and Sale of Meat Products be, and they are hereby, authorized to employ one assistant clerk each, at $1,440 per annum, to be paid from "Miscellaneous items" of the contingent fund of the Senate until otherwise provided for by law.

HEARINGS BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON MILITARY AFFAIRS.

Mr. JOHNSTON of Alabama submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 40), which was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Military Affairs, or any subcommittee thereof, be authorized to send for persons and papers and to administer oaths and to employ a stenographer to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee, and to have the same printed for its use; that the committee may sit during the sessions or recesses of the Senate; and that expenses contracted hereunder shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

PROHIBITION OF SMOKING IN THE SENATE CHAMBER.

Mr. TILLMAN. I submit the following resolution, which I ask may be read.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 42), as follows:

Resolved, That Rule XXXIV be amended as follows:

Strike out the period at the end of the first clause and insert a semicolon, and then add the following: "no smoking shall be permitted at any time on the floor of the Senate, or lighted cigars be brought into the Chamber."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. As the resolution proposes to amend the rules, it will lie over.

Mr. OVERMAN. I ask that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Rules, as there is a similar resolution pending before that committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution can only be so referred by unanimous consent. The Chair understands the Senator from North Carolina to ask unanimous consent that the resolution be referred as he requests. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

SILK INDUSTRY IN THE UNITED STATES (S. DOC. NO. 3).

Mr. GALLINGER. I have a brief article, taken from the New York Commercial of April 10, 1913, on the silk industry in the United States, which I ask shall be printed as a Senate document.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire presents a paper which he asks unanimous consent may be printed as a public document. Unless there is objection, such will be the order. The Chair hears none.

PUBLICATION OF CRIMES AND ACCIDENTS.

Mr. WORKS. I desire to give notice that on next Thursday, immediately after the conclusion of the routine morning business, I shall submit some remarks on clean and reliable journalism, in support of the bill (S. 496) making it unlawful to publish details of crimes and accidents in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no further concurrent or other resolutions, morning business is closed. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a former day, which the Secretary will read.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 36) submitted by Mr. OVERMAN on the 9th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the United States Civil Service Commission be, and they are hereby, directed to furnish to the Senate the following information:

The laws, orders, and regulations by which the civil-service system was established and has been extended in the United States.

The number of employees and officers of the United States now employed in the different departments of the Government appointed through, and subject to, the civil-service law and regulations.

The number and names of the employees and officers of the United States now employed in the different departments of the Government who have been covered into the classified service by virtue of Executive orders since the passage of the civil-service law, together with the date and copy of each order.

The number and names of persons now in the classified civil service from each State and Territory and the District of Columbia, particularly the number of persons in the classified civil service from each State and Territory and the District of Columbia as differentiated from the number of such persons who have been appointed, also number and names of persons temporarily employed as differentiated from permanent employees.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. OVERMAN. As suggested by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON] when this resolution was last before the Senate, I do not think, as I then said, that it exactly covers the point that the Senator from Virginia then made. I therefore move to amend the resolution, on page 2, by adding, after the word "employees," in line 8, the following:

The number of civil-service employees who have been promoted for causes other than upon their records for efficiency.

The number and names of laborers who have been promoted to clerkships without regard to their records for efficiency to do clerical work.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments proposed by the Senator from North Carolina will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add, at the end of the resolution, the following words:

The number of civil-service employees who have been promoted for causes other than upon their records for efficiency.

The number and names of laborers who have been promoted to clerkships without regard to their records for efficiency to do clerical work.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator in charge of the resolution the object of obtaining the names as well as the number of these employees and also to ask him whether he has considered the size and the number of volumes that it will take to print all the names for which he calls in the resolution? It seems to me, if I have any understanding about the number of these employees, that it will take a good many volumes to print the names and to distinguish one class from another. I do not understand that there is any provision contained in the resolution for an appropriation to cover that expense or for the extra clerks who will be required to compile the information.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, the Civil Service Commission has been busy since this resolution has been introduced, and I think the Senate ought to "call the bluff." I send to the desk a letter sent here by the Civil Service Commission, in which they say that to obtain this information will cost about $29,000. If it does cost $29,000, or if it costs even $50,000, I think Senators ought to know the facts. I think everybody wants to know them. In order to do justice to the Civil Service Commission, I ask that the letter of its president be read and that the accompanying exhibits be printed in the RECORD, together with the letter.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that the letter which he sends to the desk may be read and that the accompanying exhibits be printed in the RECORD. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read the letter, as follows:

UNITED STATES CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION,
Washington, D. C., April 10, 1913.

Hon. LEE S. OVERMAN,
United States Senate.

SIR: The commission notes with concern certain features of S. Res. 36, regarding the executive civil service. Some of the information can be readily supplied, and the commission is desirous of affording all the information possible. The furnishing of the laws, orders, and regulations by which the civil-service system was established and has been extended is a matter of ready compilation. The number of employees and officers now employed in the different departments of the Government appointed through and subject to civil-service laws and regulations is printed in the appendix of the commission's twenty-ninth report. (See Exhibit A, herewith.)

The commission has published in its annual reports, as required by the civil-service act, the name of each employee appointed in the classified service by Executive order, waiving any requirement of the rules in his behalf, and these names and Executive orders can be readily furnished. If, however, it is the intention of the last two paragraphs of the resolution to call for the names of all persons in the classified service, by States, who owe their appointment to examination under the civil-service rules, as distinguished from those who were already in the service when the rules were extended to cover their positions, the preparation of this information for 297,472 individuals will be a task of great magnitude, similar in extent and fully equal in cost to the preparation and printing of the Official Register, for which it was necessary in 1909 to expend $28,489.20 for clerical work, and for which a large number of clerks were required to perform the necessary compilation, this being exclusive of the cost of printing the Register, which was $27,487.76 additional. The percentage of persons in the classified service who entered the service without examination is rapidly diminishing, now being 21.4 per cent. The commission in its twenty-ninth report, now in press, is presenting tables (Exhibit A) showing by States and departments, in Washington and elsewhere, the number and per cent of classified employees now in the service who entered the service through examination and through classification.

The civil-service act of January 16, 1883, classified clerks at $1,200, $1,400, $1,600, and $1,800 in the several departments and employees in post offices and customhouses having as many as 50 employees, a total of less than 14,000. This was the original extent of the classified service. When the act took effect every one of the employees was covered into the classified service without examination under the civil-service act of 1883, and this has been true of every classification since that time. The per cent of persons in the classified service who were appointed through examination for several years was very small, but has gradually increased, until now 78.6 per cent of all those in the classified service have entered through competitive examination under the civil-service act and by this commission, the per cent at Washington being 66.3 and elsewhere 80.2, and this process continued will in a few years make the number of persons in the service without examination negligible. The commission transmits herewith a statement showing the various extensions of the classified service and the number of persons brought into the service without examination by each such extension. (See Exhibit B.)

The commission begs your indulgence in one particular. Its entire force is now working an hour beyond the regular office hours, owing to the pressure of work. Work of the commission, which should be strictly current, is now months in arrears. It is hoped that if this additional information shall be called for your resolution will carry some appropriation for a temporary force, to enable the commission to give the desired information in a satisfactory manner, without embarrassing it in the performance of its regular duties.

By direction of the commission:
Very respectfully,

JOHN C. BLACK, President.

DEAR SENATOR: We will do all we can and as soon as we can; but you should know our predicament and you can then decide whether you wish to push the resolution in its present shape or otherwise.

Truly, yours,

JOHN C. BLACK.

The exhibits referred to are as follows:

EXHIBIT A.

NUMBER OF EMPLOYEES WHO ENTERED THE SERVICE BY EXAMINATION AND CLASSIFICATION.

From July 16, 1883, to the present time appointments to vacancies in the classified service have been through competitive examinations; but the persons occupying positions at the date of their classification have been covered into the classified service. For many years the number appointed through examination amounted to a very small share of the entire service, but has steadily increased until now the official force is mainly composed of those who were appointed through examination.

On February 15, 1912, according to service-record cards in the files of the commission, there were 224,665 employees in the competitive classified service. Of these 176,666, or 78.6 per cent, entered through examination, and 47,999, or 21.4 per cent, entered through classification. The number of employees in Washington was 25,860, of whom 17,150, or 66.3 per cent, were appointed through examination, and the number outside of Washington was 198,805, of whom 159,516, or 80.2 per cent, were appointed through examination and 19.8 per cent through classification. These figures indicate that over three-fourths of all classified competitive employees at present in the service entered through competitive examination, two-thirds of those in Washington and four-fifths of those outside having entered thus.

The Civil Service Commission leads all Government establishments in Washington in the matter of employees who entered the service through examination, 88.5 per cent having so entered. The Interstate Commerce Commission follows with 82.8 per cent; Department of Agriculture, 78.8 per cent; Navy Department, 74.8 per cent; Post Office Department, 70.3 per cent; Treasury Department, 69.1 per cent; Interior Department, 67.9 per cent; Isthmian Canal Commission, 67.1 per cent; State, War, and Navy Department Building, 62 per cent; Department of Justice, 61.4 per cent; State Department, 60 per cent; Department of Commerce and Labor, 57.3 per cent; Government Printing Office, 56.2 per cent; Smithsonian Institution, 53.2 per cent; and War Department, 52.7 per cent.

Outside of Washington the Interstate Commerce Commission has 97.1 per cent who entered through examination; Agriculture, 90.9 per cent; Civil Service Commission, 86.4 per cent; Post Office, 82.5 per cent; Navy, 80.5 per cent; Interior, 79.5 per cent; War, 75 per cent; Commerce and Labor, 69.7 per cent; Treasury, 66.7 per cent; Isthmian Canal Commission, 58.3 per cent; and Justice, 49 per cent.

Considering the Washington and field branches of each department and independent office in their entirety, the percentages of employees appointed through examination are as follows: Civil Service Commission, 88; Agriculture, 87.6; Interstate Commerce Commission, 86.8; Post Office, 82.3; Navy 78.9; Interior, 74.5; War, 72.9; Treasury, 67.4; Commerce and Labor, 66.4; State, War, and Navy, 62; Isthmian Canal Commission, 59; Government Printing Office, 56.1; Smithsonian Institution, 53.3; Justice, 52.7.

The following table contains more extended information regarding the methods by which the present employees of the Government entered the service:

Statement showing by departments and independent offices, in Washington, D. C., and outside, the number and per cent of competitive classified employees in the service Feb. 15, 1912, who entered by examination and by classification.

The above does not show the number of persons in the classified service, as increase by mere natural growth has not been included. The number of positions subject to examination as reported to June 30, 1912, was 236,061.

On December 7, 1912, the President classified navy yard artisans, the estimated number being 25,000.

As stated above, the number of positions subject to examination on June 30, 1912, was 236,061. Including the above extension, natural growth of the service, etc., the number at the present time (April 11, 1913) is about 300,000.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, it will be noted from that letter that most of the information asked for can be readily furnished without much expense. The only expense will be that involved in furnishing the names of some 297,000 persons, showing who they are, where they are located, and from what States they hail. I am told that a great many people are on the rolls claiming to be, for example, from North Carolina, who never saw North Carolina. If Senators could see the names of these persons they would know that they are not always charged to the right State, and that some of them are fraudulently there. I want to say that if one-tenth of what I have heard since I have introduced this resolution and what I have read from people who seem to know about the administration of the affairs of the civil service is true, it bears out the charge I have heard that its administration is a fraud. I do not make that charge; but I say if one-half that is said is so, there ought to be an investigation by the committee appointed to look into such matters, to wit, the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment.

It is said in the letter which has been read at the desk that it will cost $29,000 to furnish those names. That would be 10 cents a name. Some Senators know that we can secure the names of persons in our own States, where they are scattered all up and down the State, for about 1 cent each.

The names involved in this inquiry are right here on the records, and why it should cost 10 cents each merely to copy the names, I can not understand. I believe it can be done for $2,900, or a cent a name. That is the only difference between the commission and myself.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, does not the Senator realize that the information he is asking for really requires an inquiry as to the individuals named? It is not merely copying the names. If it merely involved copying a list of names you might get it for a cent a name.

Mr. OVERMAN. It only asks for the name and the State from which the employee is appointed; and that is on the record.

Mr. BRISTOW. And when he was appointed, and whether he took an examination.

Mr. OVERMAN. Well, that is all on the record.

Mr. BRISTOW. It will take some time to ascertain the facts in regard to the individual names.

Mr. OVERMAN. John Smith, North Carolina, examined so and so, and date; that is all that is required.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BRISTOW] is perfectly right; no doubt there will have to be an inquiry made as to every name. I know, so far as the State of Utah is concerned, that there are persons under the civil service and accredited to Utah who never saw Utah, just as in the case reported by the Senator of North Carolina and perhaps of every State in this Union; but if you will inquire you will find that such employees made affidavits that they were from those particular States. In such cases it will furnish no information to the Senate to have a copy of the records of the Civil Service Commission sent to it.

Mr. POMERENE. If I understood the Senator from Utah correctly, he stated that there were on this list, accredited to the State of Utah, the names of many persons who had never seen the State of Utah.

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; a few.

Mr. POMERENE. He also stated, if I understood him correctly, that this record was made up from affidavits which were filed. Do I understand the Senator to mean that false affidavits have been filed?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I should have said that the applications, instead of the affidavits, showed that the persons were from those States. I really am not informed as to whether they are now required to make affidavits or whether they did make affidavits in years past as to whether they were from a particular State or not; but I do know that the applications require the name of the State in which they live.

Mr. POMERENE. Do I understand that men who are now occupying positions in the civil service have made applications in which they have made misstatements as to the facts?

Mr. SMOOT. I so understand, and understand that that is the case in all of the States. Therefore, Mr. President, if this information is given just as shown by the records, it will not convey to the Senate the information it desires. There will have to be an investigation of all the names to find out whether the statements as to residence are true or are not true.

Mr. OVERMAN. We can make an investigation after we get the names and know who they are and see them on the rolls.

Another thing, if the Senator will permit me. It will be a very easy matter for the Civil Service Commission to comply with this resolution. It is not going to require all of this expense. They can send to the heads of the departments for the information. They can send to the Navy Department, for example, and the Navy Department in 24 hours or in a week can furnish them the name of every person in that department, without any expense to the Civil Service Commission. They have the records also. So it is not going to cost all this amount, in my opinion. I do not believe it will cost over $2,000. But suppose it does cost $50,000?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. SMOOT. Certainly.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I desire the Senator to yield simply for a suggestion. While it may be true that, in response to this resolution, we would not get information that would be accurate or correct, because it might appear from the rolls that A, B, C, and D were accredited to Utah and did not belong to Utah, we would still acquire some very valuable information, to wit, that A, B, C, and D were guilty of falsehood and misrepresentation in order to procure an office. Does not the Senator agree with me that any man who is guilty of that sort of conduct is unworthy of office and ought to be discharged for cause at once?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, if I had not been interrupted but had been allowed to proceed, I should have stated frankly that I do not care whether this information costs $29,000 or more. I am not complaining as to its cost. It certainly ought to be investigated. I think, however, that in the annual report that will be made by the commission all the information asked for in the resolution will be furnished, with perhaps the exception of the 294,000 names. As this will require the expenditure of money, the resolution ought to go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. OVERMAN. Not at all, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution on its face does not call for the expenditure of any money.

Mr. OVERMAN. Not a dollar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Some such information as that may be communicated to the Senate by the committee to which it is referred. There is nothing on the face of it, however, that calls for the expenditure of public money. It may be that the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment may find they can make the investigation without the expenditure of any money. However, that is a matter for the Senate. Before any money is taken out of the Treasury, the resolution, or some application for action under it, must be referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. SMOOT. Certainly.

Mr. OVERMAN. The Senator from Utah knows very well that if there is a deficiency it can be cared for in an appropriation bill. That is the way those things are done. If information comes from the heads of departments that they have not sufficient funds to carry out the orders of Congress, the Appropriations Committee investigates it and gives them a sufficient amount to cover the matter.

Mr. SMOOT. That does happen every year, Mr. President; there is no question about that. But this is a resolution that is offered in the Senate, and its adoption is asked without reference to a committee, I understand.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is upon agreeing to the resolution offered by the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course, if the resolution were going to the appropriate committee I would not have anything more to say; but if the adoption of the resolution is asked, I think the question ought to be decided as to whether it should not go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I respectfully suggest that the request for immediate consideration was made when the resolution was introduced, and at the suggestion of the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] it went over, and it now comes up regularly.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is properly before the Senate now, having come over from Wednesday. The Senator from North Carolina has offered sundry amendments, which have been read to the Senate. The question is on agreeing to the amendments.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I have no objection to the amendments. I only want to suggest that the resolution as drawn makes no draft upon the contingent fund of the Senate. It requires the Civil Service Commission to furnish certain information. If that necessitates the expenditure of money, it will be provided in an appropriation bill. It has nothing to do with the contingent fund of the Senate. It would not go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate in any event.

Mr. CLAPP. Mr. President, I think a statement ought to be made in this connection. The presentation of this resolution, of which I am in favor, and especially the discussion of it, might be construed as a reflection upon the Civil Service Commission. The RECORD is quite generally read; and I think the statement ought to be put in the RECORD now that the commission are in no way to blame for the fact that clerks are accredited to States to which they do not belong. That is not a matter for the commission to investigate. They take the application; they accept as correct the statement as to residence. While we all understand that, the public might not. For that reason I make this statement for the RECORD, so that no criticism may attach to the commission on that account.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I am so thoroughly in sympathy with the general purpose of the resolution that I hesitate even to express a dissent from the part now under debate. I think there is no subject that more imperatively demands a revision than the law which relates to the executive civil service.

While I was chairman of the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment I spent some time in an effort to codify the law upon the subject. It is in dire confusion; and I applaud the attempt on the part of the Senator from North Carolina to bring some order out of the chaos that now exists.

I want very much to see the law so amended that the Executive shall not have the power either to exempt any individual from the operation of the civil-service law or to cover classes into the civil service. That ought to be determined by the law. It is a power that never ought to have been delegated to the Executive.

I trust, therefore, that there will be a persistent and continuous effort made to correct the law in this respect and bring it into harmony with its original spirit.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. CUMMINS. I do.

Mr. GALLINGER. I believe it never has been contended that the civil-service law gives the Executive that power; but it is found in some other statute, to which I can not refer the Senator at the present moment.

Mr. CUMMINS. The Senator from New Hampshire is quite right about that.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have read that statute several times, and I have been constrained to feel that there may well be some question as to whether it gives the sweeping power that Presidents have exercised in putting into the classified service thousands and thousands of men and women who underwent no examination.

Mr. CUMMINS. I have the gravest doubt about it, and I always have had; but, nevertheless, it is a power that has been exercised many times in the past. I have no doubt that from the standpoint of the Executive it was exercised for the public good; but so long as we have ordained a competitive civil service, Congress ought to declare what classes of employees shall be drawn into it.

The difficulty with regard to the distribution of appointments in the civil service has not been the fault of the Civil Service Commission. Until within two years the applicant was not required to hold an actual residence in the State from which he made his application and to which he was accredited. About two years ago—possibly three years ago—the law was amended so as to require actual residence of a year in the State from which the applicant alleged that he came, and there has been no real difficulty since that time.

I rose primarily to say that I hope the Senator from North Carolina will reflect upon the value of the 300,000 names sought by this resolution. It will cost a great deal of money; but that is not the real objection I have to it. It is a list that changes every day, every month, and it will be of no consequence at all within a very short time after it is received.

From my examination of the subject, I think the Senator from North Carolina can reach every point which he desires to reach, and which I hope he will reach, without asking for the names of all the employees in the classified civil service.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I appreciate what the Senator from Iowa says. If he will draw an amendment which will carry out his idea and mine, and give us the information which we desire without calling for these names, I shall certainly accept it and be glad to have it adopted. I do not want to expend money unnecessarily; and if the Senator will suggest how it can be done at less cost, I shall be obliged to him.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. OVERMAN. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I simply wish to ask a question. Is it not the purpose to send the resolution to a committee, after the amendment offered to it by the Senator is accepted, so that amendments like that of the Senator from Iowa may be considered and it may be reported back here after some deliberation by the committee? It seems to me that that ought to be done, because of the importance of the subject and the necessity for using care in the phraseology of the resolution.

Mr. OVERMAN. I do not see why we can not perfect the resolution here, Mr. President. The Senator from Iowa has suggested that the desired result might be accomplished without spending this money; and if he can draw an amendment which will bring that about, I shall be glad to accept it.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I am not prepared to write, upon the moment, an amendment that I think would answer the object of the Senator from North Carolina. There are in the archives of the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment a great many papers that I think would be of value in reaching the point we all have in mind. While I hesitate to do it, I suggest a reference of the resolution to the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment. I have no doubt that, after conference with the Senator from North Carolina, that committee could very speedily report a resolution that would accomplish all that we desire to accomplish.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Since a question has arisen as to the apportionment of the names to States from which the people did not come, I should like to ask the Senator from North Carolina whether there is a law affecting that matter, and apportioning them to the States, so many to each? What is the rule on that subject?

Mr. OVERMAN. There is no rule about it. My idea is that when we have the information we shall see that hundreds and hundreds of men are now on the rolls by fraud that ought to be turned out because they got into the service in that way.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. The specific point upon which I want information is this: In the apportionment of employees in the executive civil service are they apportioned to the several States by some rule or law?

Mr. OVERMAN. As the Senator from Iowa has said, three years ago we passed a law requiring that that should be done thereafter; but prior to three years ago it was not done.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. But now there is a law apportioning them according to the States?

Mr. OVERMAN. There is, now.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Therefore, if on referring to the roll we should find that certain individuals were accredited to States to which they did not belong, they would be removed from the roll, and that State would be given its quota of bona fide applicants?

Mr. OVERMAN. It would then be possible to correct the evil.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, the able Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS] was the chairman of the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment; he knows more about this matter than any other individual on the floor of the Senate, and I adopt his suggestion. I ask that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Carolina asks that the resolution, with the pending amendments, be referred to the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. OVERMAN. I think the amendments I offered have not been adopted, and I should like to have that done before the resolution is referred.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. They can be referred to the committee, together with the resolution, and be considered by it.

Mr. JONES. I desire to ask also that an amendment that I wanted to offer may be referred to the committee with the resolution. The amendment is, after the word "order," in line 16, to add "and the number affected by each order."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment suggested by the Senator from Washington will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 1, line 16, after the word "order," it is proposed to insert:

And the number affected by each order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unless there is objection, the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington will be referred to the same committee to which the resolution and the pending amendments have been referred. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL TUESDAY.

Mr. KERN. I move that when the Senate adjourns to-day it shall stand adjourned until next Tuesday, at 12 o'clock meridian.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The morning business is closed. What is the further pleasure of the Senate?

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. KERN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After seven minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 1 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Tuesday, April 15, 1913, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, April 14, 1913.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Eternal God, our heavenly Father, always present and ever ready to help those who seek Thy help, impart unto us plenteously of Thy grace, that with courage and fortitude we may live our convictions, according others the same right to think and act their convictions that we claim for ourselves; that with open minds and hearts we may give and take with perfect urbanity, and pass on to the larger life, in Christ Jesus our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Thursday, April 10, 1913, was read and approved.

SWEARING IN OF MEMBERS.

The SPEAKER. There are certain Members here who desire to be sworn in. If they will present themselves, the oath of office will be administered to them.

Mr. DANFORTH, Mr. NELSON, Mr. SUMNERS, and Mr. GRAY appeared at the bar of the House and took the oath of office.

LEAVE TO EXTEND REMARKS.

Mr. WALLIN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to present a paper, and ask unanimous consent to have it inserted in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD a paper which the Chair undertands consists of certain tables touching the tariff question. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The tables referred to are as follows:

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a letter written by the Hon. William Randolph Hearst to the editor of the Washington Post, appearing in the Washington Post of April 14.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD by publishing a letter written by the Hon. William Randolph Hearst and published in the Washington Post of April 14.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK] objects.

Mr. MANN. We will get it in the RECORD later, all right.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting an article on the subject of pensions to mothers with dependent children.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DYER] asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD by publishing an article on the subject of pensions to dependent widows and their children.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I desire to suggest this to the House, at a time when my action can not be construed as being in any sense personal: I think there has been a great abuse in the use of the RECORD, and as far as I can as an individual Member, I want to prevent the use of the RECORD for purposes other than what seem to be its proper purposes. Where there are extensions of remarks, or where there are articles directly relating to matters before the House, and about which gentlemen have spoken, I see no objection; but touching matters which tend to make the proceedings appear to be something they are not, and to deceive the public as to what occurs on the floor, I shall in the future object.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHERLEY. Yes.

Mr. DYER. I will state to the gentleman that I am sure he will not object to this, because it is an article on public pensions to mothers with dependent children, concerning which there is now in many States a movement to provide for such pensions.

Mr. SHERLEY. I have no objection to publishing, when the House sees fit, various articles on various subjects as documents, but I do think that the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD ought to be kept as a method of showing the proceedings of this House, and ought not to be abused to the extent it has been in the past.

Mr. DYER. I heartily agree with the gentleman on that.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHERLEY. Certainly.

Mr. MANN. Considering that the House is now meeting only twice a week and adjourning over for three days at a time, there is very little in the RECORD, the business of the House being transacted in a secret Democratic caucus. In view of that fact, does not the gentleman think that, in the ordinary amenities of the situation, it is permissible for members of the minority, who are awaiting the pleasure of the Democratic caucus, to print things in the RECORD that may be instructive and interesting?

Mr. SHERLEY. In so far as the gentleman's question is meant seriously——

Mr. MANN. It is meant seriously.

Mr. SHERLEY. I think it is desirable that the RECORD should show the proceedings of Congress.

Mr. HARDWICK. And nothing else.

Mr. SHERLEY. And that it ought not be padded with a lot of matter which individual Members may think important and which may or not be important.

Mr. MANN. Since the RECORD does not now show the proceedings of Congress, as the proceedings of the House at the present time are not being published, because they are taking place in a secret Democratic caucus, does not the gentleman think members of the minority ought to be allowed the courtesy of inserting other things in the RECORD?

Mr. SHERLEY. I am glad to see that the time has arrived when the gentleman from Illinois admits that Republicans do not count in the House of Representatives. [Applause and laughter on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MANN. We do not count at all in the Democratic caucus.

Mr. SHERLEY. The gentleman is undertaking to confuse the proceedings of the caucus with the proceedings of the House.

Mr. MANN. No; it is the Democrats who are undertaking to confuse the Democratic caucus with the House. It is not this side of the House at all. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. SHERLEY. The trouble with the gentleman from Illinois is that he finds himself loath to admit that any situation is proper in which he is not allowed full sway to speak.

Mr. MANN. Well, very likely it would add very much to the interest of the proceedings of the Democratic caucus if anyone from this side of the House could be admitted to its deliberations. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I object to this request for unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky objects, and that is the end of it.

Mr. KENT. Mr. Speaker, prior to the organization of the Sixty-third Congress a number of Members of Congress here in the city organized to obtain funds for the relief of the flood sufferers. I ask unanimous consent to publish a statement of funds collected and the disbursements of that committee.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

Mr. BARTLETT. Let us hear what it is.

Mr. KENT. I ask that it be read for information; it is only four lines in length.

Mr. BARTLETT. No; that gets it into the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. What does the gentleman's paper refer to?

Mr. KENT. It is a statement of the funds raised among the Members of the House for the sufferers by flood and the disposition of this fund. It is only four lines long.

Mr. LANGLEY. That has nothing to do with the proceedings before the House. Why does not the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SHERLEY] object?

Mr. BARTLETT. I will object, and that will save the gentleman from Kentucky from objecting.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the subject of woman suffrage.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD on the subject of woman suffrage. Is there objection?

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, that I may not be misunderstood, I know from the practice of the gentleman that his remarks will be so indicated that it will be evident that they are inserted under the leave to print.

Mr. MONDELL. They will.

Mr. SHERLEY. With that understanding, I do not object.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object——

Mr. MADDEN. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MADDEN. I would like to ask the Speaker if he will state to the House under what rule of the House a Member reserves the right to object and then goes on to discuss the merits of the question?

The SPEAKER. That has been the practice ever since the Chair has been in the House—for 18 years.

Mr. MADDEN. Under what rule?

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not know.

Mr. LANGLEY. Under the rule of immemorial usage.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman from Illinois wants an opinion from the Chair, the Chair thinks that debate under the reservation to object is frequently employed to the waste of time.

Mr. MADDEN. That is what I think.

The SPEAKER. There is no rule about it; it is a practice that has grown up in the House.

Mr. MADDEN. Then I am going to reserve the right from now on to insist on a strict enforcement of the rule as to propositions of this kind.

The SPEAKER. All the gentleman has to do is to demand the regular order.

Mr. MADDEN. I demand the regular order now.

Mr. LAFFERTY. Mr. Speaker, I reserved the right to object; I have not objected.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois demands the regular order, and that is equivalent to a demand for the putting of the question whether there is objection. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

ADJOURNMENT OVER.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Thursday next.

The motion was agreed to.

RECOGNITION OF THE CHINESE GOVERNMENT.

Mr. AUSTIN rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Tennessee rise?

Mr. AUSTIN. I rise to ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the following resolution, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. Is it a privileged resolution?

Mr. AUSTIN. I will have to ask the Speaker to determine that after it is read.

The SPEAKER. The resolution is not privileged, and will have to take the usual course under the rule.

Mr. MANN. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Tennessee having been recognized by the Speaker——

Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman from Tennessee was not recognized.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee has not been recognized. The Chair asked him distinctly for what purpose he rose.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Tennessee having arisen and addressed the Speaker, no one else having addressed the Speaker, under the rules of the House is not the gentleman from Tennessee entitled to recognition?

The SPEAKER. No.

Mr. MANN. There being no regular order of business before the House?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee arose, and the Chair may possibly have said "The gentleman from Tennessee" before he asked him for what purpose he rose. The whole statement is to be taken together. The Chair asked him for what purpose he rose.

Then the gentleman sent up the resolution, and the Chair, having in mind the Unanimous Consent Calendar, obtained the resolution from the Clerk and read enough of it to determine that it was not a privileged resolution. The Chair then announced that it would take the usual course and must go through the basket.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the resolution might properly be put in the basket, but the Speaker will remember that at this time there is nothing before the House which takes precedence of anything else that I know of, unless it be a motion to adjourn.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. As there are a great many new Members present, the Chair will take the privilege of stating that at the end of the Sixtieth Congress, according to his recollection, the House established a Calendar for Unanimous Consent. One day last summer there were several matters pressing here in which the Government was financially interested, and on which, if they were not put through, the Government would lose money because of the deterioration of work. The Chair at that time stretched the rule sufficiently to let in four or five of those things. Then a distinguished Member of the House rose and protested against the proceedings and wanted to know if we were going back or relapsing into the bad situation which he alleged had existed heretofore. The Chair then announced that we were not going to do anything of the sort. Since then the Chair has been very careful about recognizing gentlemen to bring up matters that ought not to be brought up under that rule.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I have no desire to hold the Speaker to any strict accountability for recognizing the gentleman when he intended to ask for what purpose the gentleman rose, before he recognized him.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not think that if the gentleman from Illinois would rise, for instance, and the Chair would then ask for what purpose the gentleman rose, that he would thereby recognize the gentleman from Illinois until he found out whether he was entitled to be recognized. At first to-day the Chair did not do that, and several gentlemen obtained in that way recognition for matters which they had no right to bring up; but afterwards the Chair adopted the old procedure of propounding a question that was very unpopular here for awhile, namely, for what purpose the gentleman rose. The Chair thinks that is the only orderly way to proceed.

Mr. MANN. I quite agree with the Chair, although I remember the Chair held a different opinion about that when he sat on the floor. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

The SPEAKER. The Chair has learned something in the lapse of time. [Renewed laughter.]

Mr. LANGLEY. The Speaker, then, is getting ahead of his party.

ANNA M. COULTRY.

Mr. HARRISON of New York and Mr. LLOYD rose.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will ask the gentleman from New York to withhold his motion for a moment.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. Very well.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Missouri rise?

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a privileged resolution from the Committee on Accounts, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 38 (H. Rept. 3).

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House is hereby authorized to pay, out of the contingent fund, to Anna M. Coultry, widow of P. L. Coultry, late an assistant foreman of the folding room of the House, a sum equal to six months of his salary as such employee and an additional amount, not exceeding $250, for the funeral expenses of said P. L. Coultry.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, Mr. Coultry, a House employee, died in the early days of March last. This is the usual resolution that is adopted in the event of the death of a House employee, whereby the widow is paid an amount equal to six months of the deceased's salary, and funeral expenses, not exceeding $250.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken, and the resolution was agreed to.

MESSENGERS FOR POSTMASTER OF HOUSE.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I submit the following privileged resolution from the Committee on Accounts, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 24 (H. Rept. 2).

Resolved, That the Postmaster of the House be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint seven messengers, who shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House at the rate of $100 per month from and including the 1st day of April, 1913, during the first session of the Sixty-third Congress.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I would ask the gentleman from Missouri if this is the usual resolution or the usual number of extra employees that is provided for the postmaster?

Mr. LLOYD. This is the usual number. It is the number we always have during the regular sessions of Congress. It is not provided for in the appropriation bill, because the appropriation bill did not provide for the extra session of Congress. There are some amendments to this which I desire to have the Clerk report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Line 4, after the word "and," strike out the word "included" and insert the word "after."

Line 5, after the word "thirteen," insert the word "and."

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the amendments is to provide that these individuals may receive pay from the 1st day of April. The resolution is intended to provide that pay, but it is so worded that there is doubt as to whether or not it does it. The purpose of the amendments is to make sure. These individuals have been at work since the 1st day of April, and the membership of the House—nearly all of it—was here and the services needed to be rendered. They were rendered by these individuals.

Mr. MANN. If the individuals rendered the services, I do not know that anyone can object, although I think there were comparatively few Members of Congress present on the 1st day of April.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments.

The amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amended resolution.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following privileged resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 23 (H. Rept. 1).

Resolved, That the Postmaster of the House be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint four messengers, who shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House at the rate of $100 per month during the first session of the Sixty-third Congress.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, this provides for four messengers in the House post office. Three of those will be new employees or appointees. Under the regulations heretofore, we have provided by House resolution for one messenger, but three additional messengers are needed because of the addition to the membership in the House and because of the necessity for the use of the Maltby Building. The purpose of this resolution is to provide mail facilities for those Members who are at the Maltby Building.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes.

Mr. MANN. What are the duties of the three employees just provided for in the prior resolution at $125 per month?

Mr. LLOYD. They are provided for at $100 a month.

Mr. MANN. I thought the prior resolution provided for them at $125.

Mr. LLOYD. No; in both the rate is fixed at $100 a month.

Mr. MANN. Are the duties the same?

Mr. LLOYD. They are similar duties.

Mr. MANN. There is no distinction?

Mr. LLOYD. None whatever.

Mr. MANN. Except that the three are not carried in the annual appropriation bill for the regular session?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes, sir.

Mr. MANN. And this one messenger heretofore has been paid out of the contingent fund?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes, sir; and this now provides that the four shall be so paid.

Mr. MANN. Does the Maltby Building require the additional three messengers?

Mr. LLOYD. The postmaster insists that it does. He has one man over there who has charge of the stamps and registered letters and that kind of work, and two other men, one of whom receives mail and the other distributes it.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman's committee has not yet become liberal enough to provide for the delivery of mail in the Capitol Building itself, I believe?

Mr. LLOYD. No, sir. The gentleman from Illinois and myself occupy the same position, along with the Speaker. Our mail is not delivered to us at all.

Mr. MANN. We have to go and get our mail.

Mr. HAMILTON of Michigan. There are some compensating advantages, however.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. HELM rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. HELM. I would like to ask the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. LLOYD] a question, if he will yield.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Missouri yield?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes, sir.

Mr. HELM. I have had some difficulty, and I think it is quite generally true that mail that passes through the post office, where it is of real value, such as these United States maps and some kinds of books, often goes astray. I have had so many instances of that kind that I seldom, if ever, give an order for the mailing or delivery of one of those large maps without having to put a registered stamp on it. Is the gentleman from Missouri familiar enough with the situation to know where that fault lies?

Mr. LLOYD. No, sir; I am not. But if the gentleman can point out where the fault lies——

Mr. HELM. That is what I am trying to find out——

Mr. LLOYD. And if the fault lies with any appointee of this House of Representatives, I think we will take steps pretty quickly to get rid of the individual responsible for the wrongdoing.

Mr. LANGLEY. I will say to my colleague from Kentucky [Mr. HELM] that I think the fault is due to the fact that there is a Democratic administration of the House post office. That is the reason it is not running smoothly. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. LLOYD. I beg the gentleman's pardon. We had the same trouble under the Republican administration of the House.

Mr. BARTLETT. We had more trouble under the Republican administration. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. LANGLEY. I never heard of it.

Mr. HELM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Missouri yield to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. HELM]?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes, sir.

Mr. HELM. Judging from the remarks of my colleague from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY], and the remarks in response thereto by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARTLETT], it seems that this is no new thing, and I judge from what has occurred here that in the matter that I have brought to the attention of the gentleman from Missouri I am not the only victim. I further conclude that in this matter that I have inquired about there are others who are in the same boat as myself, who have had the same trouble and experience that I have had. It is a condition that ought to be remedied in some way, it occurs to me.

Mr. LLOYD. So far as "the gentleman from Missouri" is concerned, I may say that I have never heard, during the administration of the House by the Democrats, of the nondelivery of maps.

Mr. HELM. What I have said has reference to the former régime; I have no such trouble under this régime; but I am afraid that something of that kind may occur hereafter.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Missouri yield to the gentleman from South Dakota?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. I would like to ask the gentleman from Missouri whether, under his observation, he considers that the mail at the House Office Building is delivered as early as it should be? My room in the House Office Building is located on the third floor, and according to my observation for some months past my mail is delivered there by 9.15 o'clock in the morning. If a Member has his mail sent to his hotel, it will arrive there at something like 7.30 o'clock in the morning. Does not the gentleman think there is a possibility that in the operation of the postal service under the control of the administration of this House the mail should be delivered to the House Office Building earlier than 9.15?

Mr. LLOYD. It could be arranged for; but I think it has been the custom to have it delivered, for a number of years past, at that time.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. I do not want to bring up invidious comparisons. I am more interested in the service than in a comparison, but my recollection is that heretofore, at least before the last two years, our mail was delivered to the House Office Building much earlier than it is at the present time.

Mr. LLOYD. If there are any complaints about the service of the post-office department of the House, the Committee on Accounts will be glad to have them presented. If there is anything that ought to be remedied, and can be remedied, it shall be done.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. I desire to make a suggestion——

Mr. LLOYD. I am speaking authoritatively when I make that statement.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. As a Member of the House, I desire to suggest that the delivery of mail to Members, often relating to the business of the day's session, at their offices at 9.15 in the morning is a very tardy delivery, and I should like to ask the gentleman whether that can not be improved upon.

Mr. LLOYD. I will make inquiry about it and see whether it can be done, and if it is the desire of the Members of the House to have an earlier delivery we shall have it earlier.

Mr. MARTIN of South Dakota. Will the gentleman note my desire for an earlier delivery?

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. HAMLIN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes.

Mr. HAMLIN. How many Members are at present domiciled in the Maltby Building?

Mr. HOWARD. Forty-four.

Mr. LLOYD. Forty-four, I understand.

Mr. HAMLIN. I should like to know why it is that those of us who are officing in the Capitol can not have our mail delivered to us.

Mr. LLOYD. We are supposed to be a select class. Ordinarily the man who finds himself in the Capitol is connected with a committee, and he is supposed to have a messenger to send and get his mail.

Mr. HAMLIN. That is a very rash presumption, so far as the majority of us are concerned. We find ourselves without a messenger, and at the present time we find ourselves without any committee. There are about a dozen or 15 of us, I think, who are officing in the Capitol. If 45 are entitled to have 4 men deliver their mail to them——

Mr. LLOYD. Three.

Mr. HAMLIN. Three—why are we not entitled to at least one, so that we can get our mail? It seems to me that is hardly fair.

Mr. LLOYD. I think that will adjust itself so that there will be no trouble about that later on.

Mr. HAMLIN. All right. With that assurance, I will not press the matter.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

The SPEAKER. There are three or four bills that have been put into the basket without the names of any Members attached to them. The Clerk will read the titles of the bills, and the Members who put them in the basket can put their names on them.

The Clerk read the titles of the following bills:

A bill authorizing the extension of First Street east, and for other purposes.

A bill to authorize the extension of Twenty-fifth Street SE. and of White Place.

A bill granting an increase of pension to Frederick C. Hammeter.

A bill to pension widow and minor children of any officer or enlisted man who served in the War with Spain or Philippine insurrection.

The SPEAKER. This last bill is the one that had Mr. Crago's name attached to it. Mr. Crago is no longer a Member of the House.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, Mr. MARTIN of New Jersey was granted leave of absence for one week, on account of important business.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.) the House, under the order previously agreed to, adjourned until Thursday, April 17, 1913, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the chairman of the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Park Commission inclosing a letter from the superintendent of the park relative to the appropriations for said park (H. 5. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on examination of Cape Fear River, below Wilmington, N. C., with a view to securing a depth of 20 feet to quarantine station (H. Doc. No. 17); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed with illustration.

6. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, reports on examination and survey of Anclote River, Fla. (H. Doc. No. 18); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed with illustration.

7. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on examination of Choctaw Bayou, Tensas Parish, La. (H. Doc. No. 19); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed with illustration.

8. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on examination of Black River, Ark., near Buttermilk Bank (Bend), with a view of protecting the bank in the interests of navigation (H. Doc. No. 20); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed with illustration.

9. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on examination of harbor at Great Salt Pond, Block Island, R. I. (H. Doc. No. 21); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed.

10. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on examination of New River, Dade County, Fla., from head of navigation to its outlet in the Atlantic Ocean, with a view to creating a deep-water harbor for seagoing vessels (H. Doc. No. 22); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed with illustration.

11. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on examination of Dutch Island Harbor, R. I., with a view to removal of rocks now obstructing approach channel (H. Doc. No. 23); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed.

12. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, reports on examination and survey of Newbegun Creek, N. C. (H. Doc. No. 24); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed with illustration.

13. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on preliminary examination of harbor at Elk Rapids, Mich. (H. Doc. No. 25); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed.

14. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on examination of Charlevoix Harbor, Mich., with a view to an increased depth between Lake Michigan and Pine Lake (H. Doc. No. 26); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed with illustration.

15. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, reports on examination and survey of north and south forks of Tred Avon River, Md. (H. Doc. No. 27); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed with illustration.

16. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on preliminary examination of San Luis Obispo Harbor, Cal., with a view to removal of rocks and other obstructions (H. Doc. No. 28); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed with illustration.

17. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, reports on preliminary examination and survey of Hampton Creek, Va., with a view to making this river deeper and more suitable for anchorage and use of boats and vessels (H. Doc. No. 29); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed with illustration.

18. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on preliminary examination of Buffalo Harbor, N. Y., with a view to increasing the width of the entrance of the inner harbor to 400 feet by removing the Government south pier at the mouth of Buffalo River; also, with a view to increasing the width of Black Rock Harbor and the entrances thereto (H. Doc. No. 30); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed with illustration.

19. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on examination of Fox River, Wis., with a view to determining what repairs or extensions, if any, should be made to the levee at Portage, Wis., in the interests of navigation and to prevent injury to the Government works on Fox River, consideration being also given to the question of cooperation on the part of the State of Wisconsin and other local interests in the repair, extension, and maintenance of such levee (H. Doc. No. 31); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed with illustration.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. FITZGERALD: A bill (H. R. 2441) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Appropriations.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, April 15, 1913.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D.

The VICE PRESIDENT resumed the chair.

WILLIAM P. DILLINGHAM, a Senator from the State of Vermont, and LUKE LEA, a Senator from the State of Tennessee, appeared in their seats to-day.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday last was read and approved.

ELECTION OF SENATORS BY DIRECT VOTE.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of Tennessee, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF TENNESSEE.
DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

I, R. R. Sneed, secretary of state of the State of Tennessee, do hereby certify that the annexed is a true copy of house joint resolution No. 48, being a joint resolution ratifying an amendment to the Constitution providing that Senators shall be elected by the people of the several States, the original of which is now on file and a matter of record in this office.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto subscribed my official signature and by order of the governor affixed the great seal of the State of Tennessee at the department in the city of Nashville this 12th day of April, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] R. R. SNEED, Secretary of State.

House joint resolution 48.

A joint resolution ratifying an amendment to the Constitution providing that Senators shall be elected by the people of the several States.

Whereas both Houses of the Sixty-second Congress of the United States of America, at its second session, by a constitutional majority of two-thirds thereof, passed a resolution submitting to the several States the following proposition to amend the Constitution of the United States of America in the following words, to wit:

"Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution providing that Senators shall be elected by the people of the several States.

"Resolved by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That in lieu of the first paragraph of section 3 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States, and in lieu of so much of paragraph 2 of the same section as relates to the filling of vacancies, the following be proposed as an amendment to the Constitution, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the States:

"'The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, elected by the people thereof, for six years; and each Senator shall have one vote. The electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State legislatures.

"'When vacancies happen in the representation of any State in the Senate, the executive authority of each State shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies: Provided, That the legislature of any State may empower the executive thereof to make temporary appointments until the people fill the vacancies by election as the legislature may direct.

"'This amendment shall not be so construed as to affect the election or term of any Senator chosen before it becomes valid as part of the Constitution.'"

Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Tennessee, That the said proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America be, and the same is hereby, ratified by the General Assembly of the State of Tennessee; and further be it

Resolved, That certified copies of this joint resolution be forwarded by the governor of this State to the Secretary of State at Washington and to the presiding officers of each House of the National Congress.

Adopted, April 1, 1913.

W. M. STANTON,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
NEWTON H. WHITE,
Speaker of the Senate.

Approved, April 4, 1913.

BEN W. HOOPER, Governor.

Mr. NEWLANDS presented a joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of Nevada, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Assembly joint and concurrent resolution 4.

Ratifying the amendment to section 3 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States of America.

Approved February 19, 1913.

Whereas both houses of the Sixty-second Congress of the United States of America, at its second session, by a constitutional majority of two-thirds thereof, made the following proposition to amend the Constitution of the United States of America, in the following words, to wit:

"Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution, providing that Senators shall be elected by the people of the several States.

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That in lieu of the first paragraph of section 3 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States and in lieu of so much of paragraph 2 of the same section as relates to the filling of vacancies the following be proposed as an amendment to the Constitution, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the States.

"'This amendment shall not be so construed as to affect the election or term of any Senator chosen before it becomes valid as part of the Constitution.'"

Therefore be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of Nevada (the Senate concurring), That said proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States of America be, and the same hereby is, ratified by the Legislature of the State of Nevada.

That certified copies of this preamble and joint and concurrent resolution be forwarded by the governor of this State to the President of the United States, to the Secretary of State of the United States, to the presiding officer of the United States Senate, and to the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives.

STATE OF NEVADA, Department of State, ss:

I, George Brodigan, the duly elected, qualified, and acting secretary of state of the State of Nevada, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true, full, and correct copy of the original assembly joint and concurrent resolution ratifying the amendment to section 3 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States of America, approved February 19, 1913, now on file and of record in this office.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of State at my office in Carson City, Nev., this 20th day of February, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] GEO. BRODIGAN, Secretary of State.
By J. W. LEGATE, Deputy.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint memorial of the Territorial Legislature of Alaska, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial 1.

To the President of the United States and the honorable Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

The Senate and House of the Territorial Legislature of Alaska memorialize the President and the Congress of the United States for the repeal of the law entitled "An act extending the time in which to file adverse claims and institute adverse suits against mineral entries in the District of Alaska," approved June 7, 1910 (36 Stat., 459), which law applies to Alaska only, and allows 8 months additional to the 60-day period of publication in which to adverse applications for mineral patents in Alaska. Three years of experience have demonstrated that such law is wholly unnecessary and serves no useful purpose, but, on the contrary, it imposes additional delays upon an already tedious procedure and places unreasonable burdens upon those who seek in good faith to develop our mineral lands. No good reason exists for such special legislation in Alaska. The conditions in this Territory warrant every possible effort to simplify the procedure and to expedite such applications instead of imposing additional delays and unnecessary burdens as is done by this objectionable and unjust law.

In many cases the long delay of the present law causes an additional year's assessment work under the law providing for yearly assessments of $100 to be performed upon each claim located.

Adopted by the senate March 26, 1913.

L. V. RAY,
President of the Senate.

Concurred in by the house April 1, 1913.

EARNEST B. COLLINS,
Speaker of the House.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, District of Alaska, ss:

I, William L. Distin, secretary of the District of Alaska, do hereby certify that the above is a full, true, and correct copy of senate joint memorial No. 1 of the Alaska Territorial Legislature.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of Alaska, at Juneau, this 2d day of April, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] WM. L. DISTIN,
Secretary of Alaska.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Arizonia, which was referred to the Committee on the Library and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 1.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the First Legislature of Arizona, in special session convened, respectfully represent:

That the title and possession of Monticello, the home place of Thomas Jefferson, is vested in Mr. LEVY, a private citizen of the State of New York, and the place is now practically in a state of ruin and decay;

That the title to the grave of Jefferson, wherein lie the remains of the author of the Declaration of American Independence and those of his beloved wife, and which grave is embraced within a space about 100 feet square of the grounds of Monticello, is vested in the descendants of Jefferson;

That access to the grave of Jefferson is open to his descendants, but not to the general public, except upon the payment of a fee to Mr. LEVY, thus commercializing one of the most sacred spots in America; but no admission to the house of this great apostle of humanity is allowed to any person:

Now, therefore, it is peculiarly appropriate that this place should not be in private ownership; and it is peculiarly appropriate that Monticello, the home in life as it is the home in death of this great American, should be the common heritage of the people of this country.

It is especially fitting now for the people of the United States to obtain this hallowed place, that they may keep and beautify and adorn it as a shrine to which every lover of liberty may go at will to pay his tribute of respect: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Legislature of the State of Arizona, That the Congress of the United States be, and it is hereby, urged to enact such legislation as may be necessary to vest in the United States the title and possession to the home and grave of Thomas Jefferson; and

Resolved further, That a copy of this memorial and these resolutions be forwarded to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to the representatives of Arizona in Congress, and that our representatives in Congress be, and they are hereby, requested to do all in their power to accomplish the enactment of such legislation.

Passed the Senate April 7, 1913, by a vote of 17 ayes, — noes, — absent, 2 excused.

M. G. CUNNIFF,
President of the Senate.

March 22, 1913. Read third time in full and passed by the following vote: 29 ayes, 3 nays, 1 absent, 2 excused.

H. H. LINNEY,
Speaker of the House.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a petition of Local Union No. 335, Boilermakers' International Union, of Grand Junction, Colo., praying for the appointment of competent men as Federal boiler inspectors; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I present a resolution adopted by the Senate of the State of Michigan, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection, the resolution was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SENATE, STATE OF MICHIGAN,
Lansing, Mich., April 9, 1913.

Hon. CHARLES E. TOWNSEND,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: By direction of the senate, I hand you herewith copy of the resolution this day adopted by the senate relative to proposed changes in the tariff.

Very respectfully,
DENNIS E. ALWARD,
Secretary of the Senate.

Senate resolution 72.

Whereas there are located and have been in operation in the State of Michigan during recent years 17 beet-sugar factories, which factories represent an investment of about $12,000,000, and which factories have paid out to the farmers of the State of Michigan during recent years about $7,000,000 per annum for sugar beets; and

Whereas the beet-sugar industry in the State of Michigan employs a large amount of labor, both in raising sugar beets and in manufacturing said beets into sugar, and said industry has resulted in largely increasing the value of the farm lands in the State of Michigan, and any injury to said beet-sugar industry in this State would be a serious blow to the State; and

Whereas the sheep and wool industry in this State is an important one, the number of sheep now owned by the farmers of Michigan being approximately two and one-half millions, and their value more than $10,000,000; and

Whereas both the beet-sugar industry and the sheep and wool industry above mentioned are of great importance to the farmers of the State of Michigan, as well as to other classes of its people, and any reduction of the tariff upon either sugar or wool would be a great blow to both said industries, and a great injury not only to the farmers of the State, but also to the laboring classes: Therefore be it

Resolved by the State Senate of the State of Michigan, That the President and the Congress of the United States be, and they are hereby, respectfully requested not to take off or reduce the tariff upon sugar or upon wool, as by so doing they will be striking a heavy blow at the State of Michigan; and be it further

Resolved, That a certified copy of this resolution be mailed by the secretary of the senate to each of our United States Senators, to each of our 13 Representatives in Congress, and to the President of the United States.

I hereby certify that the foregoing resolution was adopted by the senate this 8th day of April, 1913.

DENNIS E. ALWARD,
Secretary of the Senate.

Mr. NEWLANDS presented a joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of Nevada, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Assembly joint and concurrent resolution 9.

Joint and concurrent resolution of the Assembly of the State of Nevada, relative to a grant by the United States to the State of Nevada of 1,000,000 acres of public lands to be disposed of for the benefit of a State road fund, approved March 15, 1913.

Whereas good roads and highways are fundamentally an economic necessity affecting directly and indirectly all industry and commerce, intrastate and interstate, and the social and economic welfare of the citizens of this State and its sister States; and

Whereas the State of Nevada is the sixth State in the Union in the amount of its area, and contains a smaller number of inhabitants than any of its sister States, and contains thousands of miles of roads, with limited means of building and maintaining the same, and by reason thereof is unable to construct new roads and to accomplish the equally important task of maintaining them after they are constructed or improved; and

Whereas the improvement of the present roads in the State of Nevada and the construction of new roads necessary to its economic welfare, and the maintenance of both after construction, will require a vast sum of money: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly of the State of Nevada (the Senate concurring), That we urge our Representatives in Congress to earnestly request the Congress of the United States to enact a proper legislative grant to the State of Nevada of 1,000,000 acres of unoccupied and unappropriated nonmineral lands of the United States for the benefit of a State road fund of the State of Nevada. That such grant be a floating grant and the land thereby granted to be sold and disposed of under the same terms and conditions as the grant heretofore made of 2,000,000 acres for the benefit of the public schools of this State; be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to our Representatives in Congress and to the President of the United States.

STATE OF NEVADA, Department of State, ss:

I, George Brodigan, the duly elected, qualified, and acting secretary of state of the State of Nevada, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true, full, and correct copy of the original substitute for Assembly joint and concurrent resolution 7, relative to a grant by the United States to the State of Nevada of 1,000,000 acres of public lands, to be disposed of for the benefit of a State road fund, approved March 15, 1913, now on file and of record in this office.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of State, at my office, in Carson City, Nev., this 20th day of March, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.]

GEO. BRODIGAN, Secretary of State.
By J. W. LEGATE, Deputy.

Mr. NEWLANDS presented petitions of the Commercial Club of Reno, the Chamber of Commerce of Las Vegas, the Chamber of Commerce of Fallon, and of sundry citizens of Carson City, Reno, and Yerington, all in the State of Nevada, praying that 1,000,000 acres of the public lands be granted to the State of Nevada for the creation of a road fund, which were referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented a resolution adopted at a meeting of the Nevada Bar Association, held at Reno, Nev., favoring the enactment of legislation to simplify Federal procedure on the law side of the court, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented a memorial of the executive committee of the Nevada State Equal Franchise Society, remonstrating against the treatment accorded the participants in the woman-suffrage parade held in Washington, D. C., on March 3, 1913, which was referred to the Committee on Woman Suffrage.

Mr. McLEAN presented resolutions adopted by the Business Men's Association of Hartford, Conn., remonstrating against the consolidation of the customs districts in the State of Connecticut into one district, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. LODGE presented petitions of sundry citizens of Springfield, Greater Boston, Winchester, Watertown, Lexington, and Medford, all in the State of Massachusetts, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Panama Canal law exempting American coastwise shipping from the payment of tolls, which were referred to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE presented a petition of members of the National Woman's Temperance Union, praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the closing of the Panama Exposition grounds on Sundays, which was referred to the Committee on Industrial Expositions.

He also presented resolutions adopted by members of the Woman's Suffrage Association of Racine, Wis., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution granting the right of suffrage to women, which were referred to the Committee on Woman Suffrage.

TARIFF DUTY ON SUGAR.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I have been receiving hundreds of communications from my own State and from other places protesting against placing sugar on the free list. A great many of these communications are merely formal in their character, and they might as well not have been sent.

Some of the most earnest appeals for protection that have come to me are from the Hawaiian Islands. I have here a letter from Right Rev. Henry B. Restarick, bishop of the Episcopal Church in Honolulu, on that subject. I have known Mr. Restarick for a good many years. At the time I went to California, 30 years ago, or very soon thereafter, he was the rector of the Episcopal Church in the city of Los Angeles. He has been in Honolulu for a good many years and is familiar with conditions in the islands. He is a man of high character, of superior intelligence, and a keen sense of right and justice. His letter contains, I think, most valuable information on this subject. For that reason, Mr. President, I ask that the letter may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HONOLULU, HAWAII, March 26, 1913.

The Hon. JOHN D. WORKS,
Senator from California, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: You will remember me as rector of St. Paul's Church, San Diego, and my relations with you have always been pleasant. I wish to write you in regard to the proposed reduction or abolition of the duty on raw sugar.

I have been a resident of the islands nearly 11 years. I know every one of the sugar plantations by personal inspection. I know all the managers; I know also the condition of the laborers in the islands.

I hope, therefore, that you will bear with me for a statement in regard to the matter, because a large reduction in the tariff would absolutely ruin these islands. The sugar industry was built up owing to the reciprocity treaty under Kalakaua. Many of the sugar plantations never paid a cent on the stock until years after the venture of planting was made. Two plantations known to me, Olaa and McBryde, have never paid in the 12 or 15 years of their existence one cent on the stock, and have had difficulty in meeting the interest on their bonds. There is no other crop which can be raised on the Hawaiian Islands on the lands now occupied by sugar. Most of the land previous to the sugar industry was comparatively barren, and much of it would not feed a cow to the acre. It was covered with brush and weeds and some grass. Immense sums of money have been spent by the corporations for irrigation purposes. Many of the ditches and irrigation systems have cost half a million dollars. Take one plantation—Ewa. A few years ago their pumping from artesian wells cost them for coal $1,000 a day. That has been reduced since they have used oil. In a few years, when sugar is high, there may be large profits; but when there is drought, there are none. I know of one plantation, Pahala, on the island of Hawaii, where the leaf hopper destroyed the entire crop; where they expected 22,000 tons, they got less than 2,000. Other plantations were affected by the loss of a third of the crop.

It must be remembered, also, that the plantations are not owned by individuals. I meet Army officers and Navy officers occasionally who still think that Spreckels owns most of the plantations in the islands. As a matter of fact there are no Spreckels interests here in any plantation. That is why the Spreckels interests want free sugar, so that they can buy Java and Philippine sugar free of duty. The stocks in the sugar companies are widely distributed. There is hardly a teacher or a clerk in the islands that does not own shares in some company. With the exception of two small plantations, there are none that are owned by individuals. The stocks are for sale in small blocks—5 and 10 shares can be purchased. If some men have gotten rich here, it has been by ventures of faith, by hard work, and by ability to take advantage of circumstances. The sons of the old Congregational ministers were almost always educated in the United States, and most of them were college men. When the reciprocity treaty was signed they took advantage of the situation, and many of them are wealthy.

I wish to say to you that nowhere in the world where I have been are the managers of large corporations so generous in the support of all church, charitable, and benevolent institutions as the people here, nor did I ever see anywhere in any industries the consideration, the kindliness, and the good feeling there is here between the employer and the employee.

It must not be thought that we have cheap labor here. I consider that on the whole it is a highly paid labor, far higher than it is in most of the States of the Union. The lowest paid of any Portuguese, Spanish, or Russian laborer is $22 a month, house rent free, water free, doctor and hospital free, fuel free. The Japanese and other workers on the plantations send large sums of money home. I have said that the lowest wages are $22 a month, but most of the labor is done now on the contract system, and a great many men in cutting cane or planting make from $35 to $40 a month, in addition to the free house and the other things mentioned above.

There is another thing to be remembered. That is that the Orientals who have come here have come in touch with western civilization, and while neither Japanese nor Chinese are coming now, yet those who are here are learning western ways and being enlightened with western ideas. We of our church have nearly 50 boys studying in universities in China and the United States. The late Provisional President of China was five years in one of our church schools. The chief justice under the empire was also from our school here, afterwards a graduate of Cambridge, England. The mining engineer of a Province in China is also another of our boys, after graduating at Columbia. A Chinese woman of great intelligence told me that our Honolulu boys had revolutionized the university at Shanghai, not only by teaching them sports and giving them western ideas, but by teaching them patriotism. The late revolution in China really sprang from Honolulu.

I have gone into details in rather a rambling way that you may judge of the importance of this "crossroads of the Pacific."

As I said before, no crop can be substituted for sugar. We can and do produce pineapples, but there is only a limited demand for them. We can and do produce coffee, but we can not compete with Brazil. We can send a certain number of bunches of bananas to San Francisco, but we can not compete with Central America. If the duty on sugar is materially reduced, most of the white people will have to leave the islands, and Hawaii will be ruined as Jamaica was by the action of the British Government in the early part of the last century. I have no financial interests whatever in sugar. I do not own one share of sugar stock, and I am independent for my salary upon the people here, but I know the United States thoroughly and know the situation here. Hawaii is a melting pot for the nations and races, and, as Prof. Blackman, of Yale, says, people of different races are living together in Hawaii on terms of more intimacy and kindly relationship than anywhere else in the world. It is a serious thing not only for Colorado and California and other places in regard to the beet-sugar industry, but it would simply paralyze industry of every kind in the islands. It seems to me that because of the treaty of reciprocity and annexation that the United States owes something to these islands. We imported $28,000,000 worth of goods from California last year—hay, grain, horses, mules, and general supplies. It would be a considerable loss to California if these were stopped. The Hawaiian-American Steamship Line depends entirely for its return cargoes upon Hawaiian sugar, and with free sugar this line would have to go out of business. So would the Matson Line. In fact, American steamship lines may be counted as those which do business with the Hawaiian Islands, as there are very few which go elsewhere.

It will be interesting for you to know that there is no poorhouse or county farm in the islands. The poor are taken care of by private benevolence. There is a splendid hospital free to all who need it, and a large endowment. There is a home for old people and incurables at no expense to the Territory. There are homes for old women and old men, created and endowed by private benevolence. You may live in Honolulu a long time without seeing a beggar. The Americans who have made money here are democratic, generous, and patriotic. To destroy the industry of the islands would be a far-reaching calamity, because, as "Crossroads of the Pacific," our civilization, our educational institutions and our Americanizing influence goes far and wide.

Let me give you one point: Two men who had been in Cuba told me in 1907 that they would wager anything that Cuba would be annexed in five years. They told me that they had been all over Cuba, and the American Sugar Co. was buying up every piece of available land and that they were so anxious for free sugar that they would seek to bring about a revolution that would necessitate annexation. I told them that I did not believe it; that the people of the United States would not stand for the annexation of that number of Spanish-Americans and negroes. They were quite positive that it was going to be done. The American Sugar Co. is now back of this movement for free sugar because they know positively that they would make the profit and that the consumer would have to pay just as much as he does now, and that the revenue of over $50,000,000 a year would be lost to the Treasury of the United States.

I believe that if the frauds of the American Sugar Co. had not been exposed, that they would have endeavored to have carried out their scheme for the annexation of Cuba.

As soon as the beet-sugar industry and the Hawaiian and Louisiana sugar industries are knocked out by taking off the tariff, the world's sugar supply would be so affected that, in my opinion, sugar would go up in price instead of down.

Asking your pardon for this long letter, and with kindest regards,

Faithfully, yours,

HENRY B. RESTARICK,
Bishop of Honolulu.

P. S.: I would add to the above, that in accordance with the desires of the authority at Washington the planters and sugar men here have spent large sums in trying to get white labor. All incomes above a certain amount are levied on by an income tax for the bringing in of white labor. But, of course, under the laws of the United States any contract with such labor is impossible, and many of them take a free trip from Portugal, Spain, or Russia to the Hawaiian Islands, and some of them before they have done a stroke of work go on to San Francisco, and many more when they have worked here a few months. They have used the assistance of the Territorial Government (given through the money derived from the income tax) to get this far on their way to California.

Again, Alaska canners and others have had frequent agents here to get the labor away—Filipino, Portugese, Spanish, and Russian.

If people would only consider that the Tropics produce staple articles, such as sugar, coffee, and so on, and that the production of these articles need a certain class of labor, and that the Hawaiian Islands are in the Tropics and have to compete in the production of sugar with Java, Cuba, and other countries, which could increase their production indefinitely and have no restrictions as to labor, it would readily be seen that the tariff taken off would mean the ruin of these islands from a commercial point of view.

Two Congressmen here, on separate occasions, have said to me: "These large holdings must be broken up, and the people must have the land." One of the men was from Kansas. I said to him, "Why do not you break up your big farms?" "And besides," I asked, "what would you produce on these lands if divided up?" Of course, he could not tell, nor can anyone else. I have been all over these islands and know all about homesteads and small holdings, but there is not a white man living who could make his living expenses from the land. Many have tried, and all have failed. When a homestead is taken up the man works on the plantation for a living and uses his small homestead as a side issue. There is not much tillable land on the islands anyway, for they are all mountainous in the middle and the strips around the sea are the fertile parts.

In speaking of wages, I did not mean that the Japanese got $22 a month. They get about $18, with room or house, fuel, doctor, etc.

In addition to their wages the Planters' Association have an agreement that each year they will give to all employees a certain percentage of the earnings of the plantation. Last year being a good one, with large crops and high prices, this addition was 13 per cent, which increased the wages of all considerably.

A man from California recently said to me: "I saw women working on the plantations, and they told me they only got $14 or $15 a month." I said to him: "Did you ever hear of the women in Pennsylvania working on the coal dumps for less money when you think that these women get so many things free?" "Moreover," I said, "those Japanese women are married, and they are working simply because they like work and to add to the family income, so that they can send more money home to Japan or save it for investments here. The work is light hoeing, and as they were used to working in the fields in their own country it is no hardship."

PROPOSED TARIFF LEGISLATION.

Mr. WORKS. I present a telegram in the nature of a resolution adopted by the Chamber of Commerce of Corona, Cal., which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection, the telegram was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CORONA, CAL., April 12, 1913.

Hon. JOHN D. WORKS,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.:

At a meeting of the Corona Chamber of Commerce held on Friday evening, April 11, 1913, at 8 p. m., the following resolution was passed and secretary instructed to wire same to you at Washington, D. C.:

Whereas the proposed new tariff bill, which was introduced into the House of Representatives April 7, 1913, by the Hon. OSCAR UNDERWOOD, of Alabama, and which is now before the Committee on Ways and Means of the House for consideration, reduces the customs rates on a great number of California products to such a degree that in several instances it will have the inevitable result of seriously crippling if it does not absolutely destroy great interests upon which depend large numbers of people and the public welfare of the State; and

Whereas the present reading of the proposed tariff bill indicates that California has been more severely dealt with than other States of the Union, and its products more severely and unnecessarily exposed to foreign competition: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Corona Chamber of Commerce, That an earnest protest is hereby made against the adoption of the tariff bill in its present form and with its severe discrimination against the products of the State of California.

Resolved, That this protest be mailed to the Hon. CHAMP CLARK, OSCAR UNDERWOOD, and the California Senators and Representatives in Congress with the request that they use their utmost endeavors to have the proposed tariff bill amended so that it shall deal more justly with California and Pacific coast products.

SANGER E. FRENCH,
Secretary Chamber of Commerce.

LOSS OF STEAMSHIP "TITANIC" (S. DOC. NO. 8).

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, a year ago the steamship Titanic went down in mid-ocean, having on board 2,223 persons, when she collided with an iceberg. Fifteen hundred and seventeen human lives were sacrificed in that great disaster. The United States promptly took action looking to an inquiry into the causes which led to the wreck of the Titanic, and has taken steps to afford possible remedies and to provide further for the safety of life at sea.

I think on this occasion it would be well for us to take stock of what has been accomplished in that regard. I inquired of the Secretary of Commerce and requested that he submit a statement upon the subject, and he has very kindly responded. I believe it would be instructive and helpful to have this information as to what has been done up to this time in promoting safety of life at sea available to all and in some public, permanent form.

I therefore request that the letter from the Secretary of Commerce to which I have referred be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, I would suggest to the Senator from Florida that he ask to have the letter also printed as a document, for the use of Senators.

Mr. FLETCHER. I am perfectly willing to add to the request that the letter be printed in the RECORD and also as a public document.

There being no objection, the letter was orderd to be printed as a document and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, April 10, 1912.

Hon. DUNCAN U. FLETCHER,
United States Senate.

DEAR SENATOR FLETCHER: It affords me pleasure to reply to your inquiry of the 8th instant as to what has been done or is being done with reference to the international conference and also in promoting safety to life at sea.

You will recall that the magnitude of the disaster which occurred on April 15, 1912, forced thoughtful men on either side of the Atlantic to the conclusion that the real problem presented called for international solution, and that such a solution could be reached satisfactorily only after searching inquiry into all the conditions affecting the safety of ocean travel. This thought found immediate utterance in the British press and the German Emperor was prompt in summoning his technical advisers to determine the attitude which Germany should take toward a problem which all recognized could not be settled by any one nation. The first measure, however, dealing with the subject in comprehensive detail was the joint resolution introduced on April 18 by Mr. ALEXANDER, of Missouri, chairman of the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries of the House of Representatives. This resolution has been the basis of action at home and has helped to shape action abroad.

After informal consultation, London has been deemed the most suitable and convenient place for the assemblage of the conference, and by common consent the British Government will take the lead in determining the date, which will probably be late in the coming summer or early in the autumn.

PRELIMINARY WORK.

In the meantime technical committees of the most competent men have been making painstaking studies in Great Britain and Germany of matters which must be determined at the conference. I need scarcely remind you of the great amount of time and effort which you and your colleagues of the Senate Committee on Commerce and the members of the House Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries devoted during the last session to some of these subjects. Indeed, it must be gratifying to you, as it is to all who served in the Sixty-second Congress, to recall that within a fortnight after it assembled on December 4, 1911, and weeks before the steamship Titanic left her builder's hands, committees of both branches of Congress had begun work on legislation relating to the safety of ocean navigation and were well advanced toward the solution of problems to the existence of which the attention of the rest of the world was turned abruptly on April 17, 1912.

The preparations for the conference have so far advanced that the British Government has proposed an informal consultation at London in June or July between representatives of the technical committees at work in Great Britain and those who will be qualified to express with some technical precision the views held in the United States. Toward this end the British Government late last December sent informally to Washington Mr. George E. Baker, representing the British Board of Trade. He submitted to my predecessor, Secretary Nagel, and to members of the Senate Committee on Commerce and the House Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries, invited to meet at the department, the revised British regulations concerning lifeboats which subsequently were put into effect. I welcome this opportunity to express my appreciation of the efforts of Secretary Nagel to promote the international conference and to endenvor to secure adequate preparation on the part of the United States for the performance of our share of the work.

I regret that during the pressure of the closing days of the late session of Congress and the general and intense interest attending the change of administration and of the control of Congress the appropriation of $10,000 to make our necessary preliminary arrangements failed to secure the approval of the conference committee on the general deficiency bill. I am entirely confident, however, that Congress at an early date will vote the money needed for the purpose.

The time remaining for preparation is short, and very much hard work must be done. For this reason I have already undertaken, subject to appropriation by Congress, to organize technical committees to study in this country the subjects covered by the Alexander resolution, which in essentials are similar to the lines of inquiry followed for some months by the British expert committees.

HULLS AND BULKHEADS.

Had there been lifeboats for all on board, the great loss of life on the Titanic could have been averted. We may perhaps be allowed the sad satisfaction of contemplating that while she carried boats for only 1,040 persons, our own rules then existing would have required a similar vessel with a like complement of passengers and crew to have carried lifeboats for 2,367. I do not overlook the fact, however, that the circumstances attending this calamity were exceptional, and that in many cases, when the sea runs high, the launching of lifeboats is difficult, if not impossible. We must go more thoroughly into the subject if we are to meet adequately the perils of the sea.

I am disposed to believe that the following utterance, a few weeks after the loss of the ship, by the late Sir William H. White, points out the most important and the most difficult problem to which we should address ourselves:

"When calmer consideration of the subject becomes possible it will be seen that the question of boat equipment, important as it undoubtedly is, must be treated as subordinate to that of efficient water-tight subdivision. Possibly the time is approaching when shipowners will concur in action by which such subdivision shall be made the subject of legislation on lines to be agreed upon by the board of trade and themselves. In view of the experience gained in connection with legislation for the load lines of merchant ships it is permissible to hope that if such action is taken it may be of an international character; and that arrangement would undoubtedly be most advantageous if it could be made."

The subject of the efficient water-tight subdivision of hulls of vessels has been under consideration now for over 10 months by a committee of some of the most eminent authorities in the United Kingdom; and in Germany the excellent bulkhead and hull regulations of the Seeberufs-genossen-schaft, framed after two years' inquiry following the sinking in 1895 of the German S. S. Elbe, are being thoroughly revised.

Meanwhile the Olympic, sister ship of the Titanic, has had her hull entirely reconstructed, so far as bulkheads and double skin are concerned.

Nearly 2,000,000 passengers cross the Atlantic annually to and from the United States. By far the greater part of these are either American citizens or those who seek to take up their homes here. The American delegates to an international conference must meet the most highly trained minds of Europe on the subject of ship construction, which is of direct interest to our people. I am sure, therefore, that it is prudent to endeavor to secure now the strongest possible American advisory committee on this phase of the subject.

I wish to organize a committee on which shall be represented the American Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers, the American Society of Naval Engineers, and the technical schools which offer instruction in naval architecture and marine engineering, such as the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the University of Michigan, the Leland Stanford Junior University, Cornell University, and the Stevens Institute of Technology. I have also requested the principal shipbuilding companies which build ocean passenger steamers to suggest to me names of those most competent to express the views of shipbuilders on this subject. The American passenger-ship owners on the Atlantic and on the Pacific, respectively, have been asked to name those most competent to express their views; and I have also invited Mr. William Livingstone, president of the Lake Carriers' Association, to suggest a name that will carry authority throughout the marine interests of the Great Lakes. The American Record of Shipping, generally known as American Lloyds, has also been invited to participate; and I have also designated Mr. J. Bernard Walker, editor of the Scientific American, with whose instructive work, An Unsinkable Titanic, you are doubtless acquainted. To this committee I have asked the Secretary of the Navy to add an officer of the construction corps of that department, for although the hulls of battleships and ocean passenger steamships are designed to meet quite different conditions, I wish to avail myself of the high technical knowledge and standing of the members of this corps. Of course, the Steamboat-Inspection Service of the Department of Commerce will be represented. Suggestions will be welcomed from other sources, for the above list is not meant to be exclusive.

EFFICIENT OFFICERS AND CREWS.

In the last analysis the efficacy of all material precautions against marine disasters depends on the efficiency of the officers and crew who handle the ship and all that goes with it. Superficially, uniform international regulations prescribing standards of efficiency of officers and men may seem difficult to establish and maintain, but I am confident that if the subject be approached in the proper spirit an international agreement on at least some essential points may be reached. I am confirmed in this opinion by the knowledge that the provision for efficient lifeboat hands included in the seamen's bill—upon which the committees of the Senate and the House spent so much time and study at the last session—is acceptable in principle to the British authorities, and, indeed, in substance resembles the recommendation of the British committee which considered the subject of lifeboats, their manning and equipment. Already the laws of Germany, Norway, the Netherlands, and France are in advance of our laws in prescribed tests of the vision of lookouts, adequate rest for those required to stand watch, and sanitary conditions of the forecastle and the engine room; and in so far as the seamen's bill would have raised standards in these respects, its failure to receive Executive approval on March 4 is a matter for general regret. All the work done by Congress at the recent session as well as foreign laws and regulations will be available for the use of the committee on efficiency of officers and crews which is being formed. I have asked the American Association of Masters, Mates, and Pilots to propose a suitable deck officer, the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association to propose a suitable representative of the engine-room staff, and Mr. Andrew Furuseth, president of the International Seamen's Union of America, has been also requested to serve on this committee. The maritime exchanges and chambers of commerce of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Portland, Oreg., and Seattle have been requested to propose captains of trans-Atlantic and trans-Pacific Ocean passenger steamers, respectively, in active service or retired, to serve on the committee, and I trust that American shipowners on the Atlantic and Pacific will agree upon representatives of their views on the subject. With the cooperation of the Secretary of the Treasury I hope to secure the advice of officers of the Revenue-Cutter Service and of the Public Health Service. This last service, through the marine hospitals and because of its visual tests of licensed officers, is acquainted with the physical condition of officers and crews in our merchant service. Here also the list is not meant to be exclusive; light from any source will be welcome.

RADIOTELEGRAPHY.

You helped to frame the acts of Congress concerning radiotelegraphy and aided in the ratification of the Berlin and London radiotelegraphic conventions, so I need not tell you that on this subject the legislation of the United States, in principle and in most of its provisions, already has been accepted, or bids fair soon to be accepted, as the basis for the international prescription and regulation of this far-reaching agency for the promotion of safety at sea. You will, I am sure, allow me to take this opportunity to recall that the principle of a constant wireless watch on ocean passenger steamers (two operators) as a measure of Government regulation, to which there is now no dissent, was first proposed by my colleague, the Secretary of State, Hon. William J. Bryan, in November, 1911. Our own act of June 24, 1910, has been amended in accord with this suggestion, and at the international radiotelegraphic conference last June in London 31 countries approved the principle of a constant wireless watch, at least in the case of large passenger steamers, as a measure of international regulation. The same convention also provides for auxiliary apparatus for use in event of the failure of the ship's main power plant, as does our act of July 23, 1912. So far as radiotelegraphy is concerned, the work, from our point of view, before an international conference will be mainly the adjustment of minor differences between our regulations and those which may be suggested by other powers so as to secure uniformity. To prepare for this work I have requested the wireless companies furnishing operators and apparatus for ship and coast stations and the shipowners concerned to propose the names of suitable experts who may confer with the Commissioner of Navigation and representatives of the Naval Radio Service and the Bureau of Standards.

AIDS AND PERILS TO NAVIGATION.

You have doubtless noted that the Secretary of the Treasury has already dispatched two revenue cutters to the North Atlantic to maintain alternately a patrol north of the spring and summer tracks of transatlantic steamships and to give wireless notice of perils from ice, a service performed last year by two scout cruisers of the Navy. During his December visit here, Mr. Baker, of the British Board of Trade, inquired informally whether our Government would cooperate in endeavors which the British Government contemplated, to make a thorough scientific study, covering several years, of ice movements in the North Atlantic and simultaneously to provide warnings to ships of approaching ice. The British Board of Trade and transatlantic companies have already sent the Antarctic exploring ship Scotia, equipped with powerful radio apparatus to give ice warnings, and with a scientific staff and equipment to study ice movements and meteorological conditions in the regions of early ice appearance. The Hamburg-American Line has also, in behalf of German companies, announced its cooperation with patrol work.

Thus the way is prepared for an agreement on this subject at the international conference on safety at sea. In the meantime I have requested the Secretary of the Treasury to allow Capt. Commandant Berthoif, of the Revenue-Cutter Service, who has had long experience in the Arctic, to serve on a committee on aids and perils to navigation, which will consider ice and other problems. The same committee will also consider transatlantic steamship lanes, on which a British committee already has reported, and I have requested, through the Secretary of the Navy, the cooperation of the Hydrographic Office. The London radiotelegraphic convention, ratified by the Senate on January 22, 1913, provides for the wireless dissemination of meteorological reports, and I have asked the Secretary of Agriculture for the help of the Weather Bureau on this committee, which under the Alexander resolution will be requested to consider systems of reporting and disseminating weather reports and information relating to aids and perils to navigation. The Maritime Exchanges of New York and Philadelphia and the Boston Chamber of Commerce have been asked to unite on the name of the captain of an ocean passenger steamship and also on the name of a representative of their organizations for duty on this committee.

I know of no other body of men brought so frequently and continuously into contact with the varied perils of North Atlantic navigation from the Grand Banks to Nantucket as the captains of the deep-sea fishing fleets of New England, so I particularly desire to secure the services of a member of the Gloucester Master Mariners' Association. But it will be unreasonable to ask for the services of many of those whose experience and knowledge are needed unless Congress shall provide for their necessary expenses while engaged in work to enable this country to offer intelligent advice, perform intelligent work, and secure rational results at an international conference in which all our people, rich and poor, have so much at stake.

Atlantic yachting forms so large a part of our national maritime life that I have asked the yacht clubs, through the New York Yacht Club, to be represented on this committee. The Lighthouse Bureau has wide experience with submarine bells, high-powered lights, and similar apparatus, of which I shall avail myself through its representative.

LIFEBOATS AND DAVITS.

The loss of the steamship Titanic led to an immediate demand for lifeboats and life rafts for all on board, and that principle is now generally recognized by regulation or the voluntary action of shipowners. The subject, however, is not as simple as it might seem at first blush, because the use of davits and other means of putting such boats over the ship's side, of lowering them fully loaded, or lowering passengers into them when afloat, as well as stowage on deck, which may affect the ship's stability, all offer difficulties. The Steamboat-Inspection Service has already done much good work in these lines, and the regulations recently approved will, I trust, prove effective. As already stated, the new British regulations on the subject were informally laid before my predecessor and members of the Senate and House committees especially concerned before they were put into effect abroad. Good progress has thus been made toward agreement on this subject, but its importance warrants consideration of all details. The rescue work of the Life-Saving Service and of the Revenue-Cutter Service is carried on mainly with lifeboats, often under conditions of peril, and I have asked the Secretary of the Treasury for the cooperation of skilled officers of those services with the Supervising Inspector General of the Steamboat-Inspection Service in preparing in detail a statement of American views on this subject. I have also requested the shipowners and the shipbuilders to name men, representing their views, to work with the officers mentioned.

FIRE PROTECTION.

The Alexander resolution wisely provided that the United States should lay before nations the subject of protection against fire at sea, which, to my mind, is of equal importance with subjects that have attracted more general notice. Loss of life from this source is, of course, much less frequent than in the days of wooden vessels. On the other hand, the inflammable character of many cargoes, which under the lower modern freight rates can be carried, gives opportunity for spontaneous combustion, creating a risk almost unknown in earlier days. In trying to meet adequately this requirement of the joint resolution, I am asking for the services of expert representatives of the National Board of Marine Underwriters, the National Board of Fire Underwriters, and also of the Associated Factory Mutual Fire Insurance Companies, whose tests, I am aware, are applied mainly to apparatus used on shore but whose experience will be valuable. I also count on securing technical advice from the Patent Office when needed and on the committee to study fire conditions on shipboard, and shall, of course, include a representative of the Steamboat-Inspection Service charged more immediately with the approval and supervision of existing fire-fighting appliances.

LIABILITY OF SHIPOWNERS.

You recall that in January, 1912, the Senate ratified the Brussels international convention unifying certain rules regarding assistance and salvage at sea, and subsequently Congress enacted legislation to give it effect. One of the provisions of the convention and of the statute prescribes that every master is bound, so far as he can do so without serious danger to his vessel, crew, and passengers, to render assistance to everybody found at sea in danger of being lost, and failure to render such assistance subjects the delinquent master to heavy penalties. The obligation imposed by humanity has thus been strengthened by statutory requirement. The question of limitation of the liability of shipowners has taken large proportions in the thoughts of men here and abroad since the disaster of last April. It was already a topic set apart for consideration by the Brussels international conference on the unification of maritime law. In view of its increased importance, the Belgian Government decided to postpone until September of this year the international maritime law conference, which will be quite apart from the London conference, to consider this subject. Congress has already made the necessary appropriation for the expenses of a delegation of men of the highest legal attainments to represent the United States at this conference, and the Secretary of State and myself have already invited the Hon. A. J. Montague, of Richmond, Va., and Edwin W. Smith, Esq., of Pittsburgh, Pa., to continue to represent the United States at the conference, and have secured the services of the Hon. Henry Galbraith Ward, United States circuit judge of the second circuit. The composition of the delegation will probably be completed soon, and Secretary Bryan and myself will arrange for consultation with the delegation at Washington, so that the attitude of the United States on this difficult subject may be carefully and fully determined.

Yours, very truly,

WILLIAM C. REDFIELD, Secretary.

OVERFLOW OF THE GREAT MIAMI RIVER, OHIO.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, during the recent floods in the State of Ohio the city of Dayton, among our growing cities which suffered, was particularly stricken. In the city of Dayton, with a population of perhaps 125,000 people, 14,000 homes were flooded. Nearly all the business portion of the city was inundated. Lives were lost and property to the estimated value of more than $100,000,000 was destroyed.

The cause was primarily the excessive fall of water. Secondarily, it was due to the condition of a navigable stream, the Great Miami River. This condition was due in part to the fact that bridges had been constructed across the river the abutments of which encroached upon the channel of the stream, and great piers were builded in the midst of the stream, thereby lessening the channel and increasing the opportunity for the damming up of the river. The city council of Dayton feel that the National Government should have given more attention to the construction of those bridges, and that the channel of the stream should be changed.

The other day the city council adopted a preamble and resolution in the nature of a petition addressed to the Congress of the United States, looking to ultimate relief against the possibility of a recurrence of floods of this character. I send the preamble and resolution, in the form of a petition, to the desk, and ask that it be read and referred to the Commerce Committee.

There being no objection, the resolution was read and referred to the Committee on Commerce, as follows:

A resolution offered for consideration to the council of the city of Dayton, State of Ohio.

Whereas the Great Miami River is controlled as a navigable stream by the Federal Government, it is the duty of the Government to examine plans for all bridges and to prevent the channel from being encroached upon by private interests; and

Whereas the Government has failed to perform its obligation in regard to the inspection and supervision of our waterway and is thus directly responsible, in our opinion, to the people of Dayton for the great calamity from which they are now suffering; and

Whereas the neglect of the Government in this instance has resulted in a great loss of life and a monetary loss to Dayton of more than $100,000,000, through the disastrous forces with which we are too weak to cope; and

Whereas the Federal Government should not continue its neglect of this condition, but should at once appropriate a sufficient amount of money to place the city of Dayton beyond the liability of another disaster such as that through which we have just passed: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the council of the city of Dayton, State of Ohio, That we now respectfully demand some just reparation from the Government for the neglect from which we are suffering; this demand is made because it is just, and because we are entitled to that protection which the Federal Government affords and gives to all cities located along navigable waterways; and

That we now petition the Congress of the United States to provide sufficient funds to cut a new channel for the Great Miami River and to supervise the work of cutting this new channel; and

That the clerk of council be, and he is hereby, directed to certify copies of this resolution to the Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States.

Adopted by council, April 9, 1913.

WM. D. HUBER,
President of Council.

Attest:

WAYNE G. LEE,
Clerk of Council.

I hereby approve the foregoing resolution this 11th of April, 1913.

EDWARD PHILIPPS,
Mayor of the City of Dayton, State of Ohio.

I, Wayne G. Lee, clerk of council of the city of Dayton, State of Ohio, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of a resolution duly adopted by the city council at a special meeting had and held in the council chamber of the city of Dayton, State of Ohio, on the 9th day of April, A. D. 1913, and which is duly recorded in minute book C–I, page 435, of the records of the council of said city of Dayton, State of Ohio.

[SEAL.] WAYNE G. LEE,
Clerk of Council, City of Dayton, State of Ohio.

ACTING ASSISTANT DOORKEEPER CARL A. LOEFFLER.

Mr. KERN. From the Committee on Privileges and Elections I submit the following unanimous report. I ask that it be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Indiana presents a report from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, which will be read.

The Secretary read the report (No. 3), as follows:

Mr. President, your Committee on Privileges and Elections, to whom were referred the verbal charges made on the floor of the Senate on the 13th of March, 1913, against the official conduct of Carl A. Loeffler, Acting Assistant Doorkeeper of the Senate, having considered and fully investigated such charges and the facts upon which the same were based, unanimously report:

First. That there is no evidence showing any official misconduct on the part of the said Loeffler.

Second. That the Senate should make no further investigation of such charges.

Your committee asks to be discharged from further consideration of the matter so referred to them and that the whole subject be indefinitely postponed.

JOHN W. KERN, Chairman.

Mr. KERN. Inasmuch as the report is unanimous, and as an act of justice to the young man against whom the charges were made, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the report that I may move its adoption.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. KERN. I move that the report of the committee be adopted.

The motion was agreed to.

FRED N. WEBBER.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I am directed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contigent Expenses of the Senate, to which was referred Senate resolution 29, to pay Fred N. Webber, jr., a sum equal to six months' pay of his late father, Fred N. Webber, sr., a Senate policeman, to report it back favorably, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read Senate resolution 29, submitted by Mr. BRADLEY on the 7th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to pay, out of the contingent fund of the Senate, to Fred N. Webber, jr., son of Fred N. Webber, sr., deceased, late a Senate policeman, a sum equal to six months' salary at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered as including funeral expenses and all other allowances.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, I move to amend the resolution by inserting "twelve" instead of "six," making the allowance of pay for 12 months in lieu of 6 months. I do this because the Senate set a precedent at the close of the last session fixing one year's salary as the amount voted to the widow of a deceased Sergeant at Arms, and I see no reason why there should be a discrimination against an employee who received a much smaller salary than did he.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I hope that the amendment will not be adopted by the Senate. Perhaps the worst thing that any legislative body can do is to follow a wrong precedent. Both the Senator from Kansas and I, as members of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, opposed the amendment which granted 12 months' pay to the family of the deceased Sergeant at Arms. Simply because something has been done which was, both in his opinion and in mine, a wrong thing to do, is no reason why it should be followed by making the wrong universal with regard to all the employees of the Senate.

In my opinion the whole system of paying the families of Senators and employees when they happen to die, for time which they have not served, on this earth at any rate, is wrong; but it is a custom, and has been for a long time, to grant 6 months' pay to the family of a deceased Senator or a deceased employee. During the last session we went beyond precedent to some extent and granted 12 months' pay to the family of one of the employees of the Senate. I do not mean by saying that we went beyond precedent to some extent that there never had been any precedent at all for it. There had been three or four bad precedents, which ought to have been "honored in the breach" rather "than the observance."

I hope the amendment will be voted down, and I hope the resolution as reported by the committee will be passed.

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, if the Senator from Mississippi will yield, I desire to say that I am in absolute harmony with his views as to what ought to be done. I opposed with what vigor I could the precedent that was set in the payment to the family of a higher officer of the Senate a full year's salary, but it seems to me to pay to the family of an officer who has received a salary of five or six thousand dollars a year a full year's salary and then refuse to pay to the family of just as faithful an employee who received, say, a thousand dollars a year a full year's salary and to cut his family down to six months' salary, is an unjustifiable and indefensible discrimination.

I do not want to set any precedent of allowing 12 months' pay in such cases. I do not believe in it. I tried to prevent it before, though I could not; but I want the Senate to be consistent, to do one thing or the other, so as to treat the families of its deceased employees alike. That is the reason why I made the motion to amend, and I hope if the amendment is voted down that action will be observed as a precedent in the future.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I do not think there is really any difference between the Senator from Kansas and myself, except that he seems to think the proper way to right a wrong is to do another wrong thing just like it. I want the Senate to pursue a consistent course, and I want to make it consistent by going back to the regular practice of allowing six months' pay to families of deceased employees until such time as possibly the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate may destroy the whole system.

Mr. President, I have finished what I have to say, and I ask for the adoption of the resolution as reported.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, as a member of the committee that passed upon this resolution I voted against it, because I do not believe that the practice involved is good; but the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BRISTOW] has proposed an amendment which, it seems to me, if it should be adopted as a precedent, will make the practice still worse. Six months' pay is surely enough to give to the families of deceased employees of the Senate. In fact, it seems to me that the law which prescribes the exact amount of compensation to Senators and Representatives and employees of Congress is really what ought to be adhered to. Inasmuch, however, as the practice has heretofore been that which is proposed in the pending resolution and this case has occurred while that practice remained, I do not know that I shall now object, although I did vote against the resolution in committee; but to add six months' more salary in the case of the death of an employee seems to me is going far beyond what we ought to do, and I hope the Senate will vote down the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. BRISTOW].

The SECRETARY. In line 5, before the word "months," it is proposed to strike out "six" and to insert "twelve."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I simply desire to say a word about this question, because I want my own position to be clear. With great reluctance I yielded to the report as made. I do not believe the Senate is justified in appropriating money beyond the salary due at the time of death in any case, and I stated to the committee I would prepare a bill to that effect, in order that this practice might be terminated. It is not justifiable, in my opinion. It is a mere grant of largess; it is a devotion of the people's money to an illegal purpose. It never should have been the custom; the custom should not longer prevail; but it seemed, in view of the fact that the custom has heretofore existed, rather an invidious thing to do, to stop the operation of the custom as to a particular man whose relatives are to receive this reward, the death having already occurred. So I was content then, and am content now, to see this particular resolution pass in the form reported by the committee; but I shall introduce at my earliest convenience a bill to stop the practice, and I shall ask the Senate to consider it.

With reference to the position taken by the Senator from Kansas, it seems to me that its logic is that if a legislative body has ever made a mistake it must continue to make that mistake, and the greater the mistake the more incumbent is the duty to perpetuate it. That is really not the position of the Senator from Kansas. What he desires to do, I think, is to impress upon the Senate the evil of this practice. The lesson having been given and the expresssion of opinion having been very full,

I think his amendment ought to be voted down, and that we ought to give six months' pay in this instance and then cease this practice.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kansas.

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question recurs upon the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

COMMITTEE ON THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. WILLIAMS. From the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate I report back favorably, with an amendment, Senate resolution 26, and I submit a report (No. 4) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution; and there being no objection, the Senate proceeded to its consideration.

The amendment of the committee was, in line 4, after the word "stenographer," to insert "at a price not to exceed $1 per printed page," so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That the Committee on the District of Columbia, or any subcommittee thereof, be authorized to send for persons and papers and to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer, at a price not to exceed $1 per printed page, to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee; that the committee may sit during the sessions or recesses of the Senate, and that the expense thereof be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I inquire if that is an amendment reported by the committee?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes.

Mr. SMOOT. I think that that will involve an expense perhaps greater than would be incurred by hiring a stenographer regularly by the day. The amendment, I understand, proposes to fix the rate of compensation at $1 per printed page.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, the present law provides just what is proposed by the amendment, except that the present law stipulates that the rate of compensation shall not exceed $1.25 per printed page. We have here reduced the rate to a dollar per printed page.

By the way, I want to say in this connection that it was stated to the committee that during a contested-election case a stenographer, paid at the rate fixed by law—$1.25 per printed page—made nearly $50 a day in reporting the hearing. It was thought that the rate fixed by law could not be affected or repealed except by law, but that in a matter merely concerning a Senate committee the committee could fix the maximum rate, provided it did not exceed the maximum fixed by law. We therefore reduced it from $1.25 to $1 per printed page.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I am fully aware that the law provides that the rate shall not exceed $1.25 per printed page, and I am quite in harmony with the amendment so far as it goes; but I want to ask the Senator——

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator from Utah will pardon me just a moment, I will state for the benefit of the Senate that the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate has appointed a subcommittee to look into the entire matter of the payment of stenographers for reporting hearings, and so forth, to examine the House system and to examine other systems, and see if we can not inaugurate a better system than the one which now prevails. The Senator is aware of the fact that over in the House they have a certain number of men, called committee stenographers, who are borne upon the roll at an annual salary, and who are detailed from time to time to attend committees and report hearings.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I was fully aware of that, and I thought at this particular time it was opportune to call attention to that fact, because I think such a system would save the Senate committees a great deal of money. I am fully aware of just what the Senator says—that many of the stenographers reporting committees of the Senate have made perhaps as high as the Senator says, $50 a day. It would be much better for the Senate to employ certain stenographers and have the committees use those stenographers. I believe that would be cheaper——

Mr. WILLIAMS. I am inclined to think that the House system is better than ours.

Mr. SMOOT. And that is the reason why I brought up the question. I thought perhaps it could be arranged in this resolution, but if not——

Mr. WILLIAMS. I would rather this resolution would not be complicated with that matter——

Mr. SMOOT. If not, I shall not object to the resolution.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Because we have appointed a subcommittee to investigate and make a full report. I ask for the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, just a word. The Committee on the District of Columbia has employed stenographers from time to time, and they have been paid the usual rate of $1.25 per printed page. There ought not to be any discrimination as between the employment by committees and employment under the general law, but very likely that can not be corrected now. I am inclined to think that a dollar a page is a sufficient compensation, and inasmuch as we have no regularly employed stenographers upon whom we can call to do this work, I hope the resolution will pass as the Senator from Mississippi has reported it.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

ADDITIONAL CIRCUIT JUDGE FOR THE FOURTH CIRCUIT.

Mr. CHILTON. From the Committee on the Judiciary I report back favorably, without amendment, the bill (S. 577) authorizing the President to appoint an additional circuit judge for the fourth circuit. It is a bill of only five lines, and as it refers to a purely local matter I am going to ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration. I desire to explain that it provides for the appointment of an additional circuit judge in the fourth circuit, a circuit which is the only one in the United States limping along with two circuit judges. The need for an additional judge has been great for a number of years, and in the Sixty-second Congress a bill similar to the one now reported was passed, but for some reason it failed of passage in another place. I think the bill should be passed, and I hope there will be no opposition to its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from West Virginia asks unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill reported by him from the Committee on the Judiciary. Is there objection?

Mr. BRISTOW. Mr. President, I must object. What are we going to do after the 1st of July with the four circuit judges who are now serving as judges of the Commerce Court? Why can not one of them be assigned to this work?

Mr. CHILTON. I hope the Senator will not endeavor to send one of them to West Virginia or to the fourth circuit.

Mr. BRISTOW. Well, there are four of them who will have to be assigned somewhere. What are we going to do with them?

Mr. CHILTON. That is not our affair, Mr. President. Of course, though, if the Senator objects the bill can not be considered.

Mr. BRISTOW. I think we have a surplus of circuit judges now, or will have after the 1st of July.

Mr. CHILTON. Mr. President, this bill was passed by the Senate during the last Congress, and the Senator did not object then, although the same condition regarding the judges to whom he refers was present then that is present now.

Mr. BRISTOW. Well, I have been lectured this morning for undertaking to perpetuate a bad precedent, and so——

Mr. CHILTON. I voted with the Senator after he was lectured, and I did not join in the lecturing. I went the Senator one better. I voted for his amendment when he did not vote for it himself.

Mr. BRISTOW. Of course, I regret to object to anything that the Senator from West Virginia may desire, but I feel constrained, until we know what is to become of the four surplus circuit judges who will be on our hands after the 1st of July, to object to creating any more.

Mr. CHILTON. Mr. President, I merely want to say to the Senator that he ought to have considered that when he was voting to create extra judges for almost every other circuit in the United States except the fourth circuit. I hope the Senator will now consider this proposition. It is not an idle matter; the fourth circuit is really suffering for an additional judge. It needs him. There is so much business there that it really can not be transacted without another circuit judge. I think the Senator is making a mistake now in interposing the objection.

Mr. BRISTOW. I understand if there is a crowded condition of business there, judges can be assigned to attend to that business for a couple of months at any rate, and there will be four circuit judges on our hands on the 1st of July, and what are we going to do with them?

Mr. CHILTON. That is a matter for the Senate to determine; it is not for me to answer. I only know that the Congress of the United States has been treating the fourth judicial circuit very badly for a number of years, and I want the Senate to correct the situation by taking the same action that it took at the last session.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Kansas insist upon his objection?

Mr. BRISTOW. I certainly must; yes.

Mr. GOFF. I desire to ask the Senator from Kansas not to object, and to state that there are reasons why he should not. That was my motive in rising. Am I too late for that?

Mr. BRISTOW. Of course I regret very much to oppose the Senators from West Virginia in this matter, but I shall have to insist upon my objection to the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. GOFF. The Senator probably would not do so if he heard the facts to the contrary.

Mr. BRISTOW. The facts can be presented when the bill is up for consideration, and amendments can be offered to it at that time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection being made, the bill will go to the calendar.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY FOR CONNECTICUT.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. From the Committee on the Judiciary, I report back favorably, with an amendment, the bill (S. 281) providing for an increase of salary of the United States attorney for the district of Connecticut, and I submit a report (No. 2) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for the information of the Senate.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The amendment of the Committee on the Judiciary was, in line 5, after the word "of," to strike out "$5,000" and insert "$4,000," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the passage of this act the salary of the United States attorney for the district of Connecticut shall be at the rate of $4,000 a year.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I did not object to the consideration of the bill, but I should like to have a little explanation from the Senator from Connecticut as to why this change in the salary should be made.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, a similar bill was passed by the Senate at the last session of Congress, and it was unanimously reported favorably by the Judiciary Committee in the House, but failed of action by the House itself. The present salary of the United States attorney for the district of Connecticut is $2,500. The whole State, containing a million and a quarter people, is one district. The business of the office has increased greatly in recent years. Both Judiciary Committees, that of the House and that of the Senate, have thought the salary ought to be increased so as to put it on a par with the salaries paid in other States similarly situated.

I will ask that the report be printed in the RECORD, as it explains the whole matter.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, that order will be made.

The report (No. 2) submitted this day by Mr. BRANDEGEE is as follows:

Mr. BRANDEGEE, from the Committee on the Judiciary, submitted the following report, to accompany S. 281:

The Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (S. 281) providing for an increase of salary of the United States attorney for the district of Connecticut, having had the same under consideration, unanimously recommend that the bill do pass with the following amendment: On line 5, after the word "of," strike out "$5,000" and in lieu thereof insert "$4,000."

The State of Connecticut comprises one judicial district with a population of 1,114,756, and the law provides for the holding of court at New Haven and Hartford. The present salary of the United States attorney for this district is $2,500, with no allowances for assistance except $350 a year for a clerk. The district has increased more than 400,000 in population since the salary was fixed at $2,500, and your committee believe that at present it is wholly inadequate, and a comparison of the salaries paid in the other districts and number of cases in which the United States is a party can only justify such a conclusion. It was represented to your committee by those familiar with the duties of the United States attorney for this district that the number and importance of the cases in which the United States is a party have very largely increased.

The salaries paid the United States attorneys, their assistant attorneys, and clerks in the New England districts are as follows:

Maine, $3,000; assistant attorney, $1,200; clerk, $600.
New Hampshire, $2,000; clerk, $500.
Vermont, $3,000; clerk, $840.
Massachusetts, $5,000; assistant attorneys, $8,600; clerk, $3,760.
Rhode Island, $2,500; assistant attorney, $1,500; clerk, $750.
Connecticut, $2,500; clerk, $350.

The clerk was paid in 1911 $4,939.60. The salary of the marshal for this district is $2,500.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. On Saturday last I introduced a bill (S. 737) prohibiting the use of fish traps or other device for impounding fish in waters in and adjacent to Alaska. At my request the bill was referred to the Committee on Commerce. I have since been informed that the proper committee is the Committee on Fisheries. I reintroduce the bill and ask that the reference be corrected.

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY AND WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I introduce a bill to provide compensation for accidental injuries, resulting in disability or death, to employees of railroad companies. I desire to say just a word, with the indulgence of the Senate, with reference to it.

This is a bill which was before the Senate at the last session, and passed by a vote of 64 to 15, and in an amended form passed the House by a vote of 218 to 81, as I recall it. In the preparation of this draft of the bill I have adopted most of the House amendments. Some of them I have not adopted. The principal amendment which I have not adopted is that which provides for a 5 days' waiting period instead of a 14 days' waiting period, as provided in the Senate bill. I have restored the Senate provision in that respect. The House amended the bill so as to provide for a maximum salary upon which the computation of compensation was to be made of $120 per month.

In the bill that I have introduced I have taken off the maximum altogether, simply providing for a minimum salary, upon which the computation of half wages is to be made, of $50 a month, so that the minimum compensation under this bill, if passed, will be $25 a month, and there will be no maximum whatever. I have thought best to do that, because I think if we restore the provision with reference to the waiting period to 14 calendar days instead of 5 calendar days, the aggregate of the amount which will be saved by doing that will justify us in taking off the maximum. The 9 days which will be saved, applied to all of these employees, will amount in the aggregate to a considerable sum, while it will amount to a very trifling sum to each individual.

The policy of this sort of legislation is primarily to take care of the serious accidents, the calamities; and by cutting out these trivial injuries we will save a large sum of money to apply to the more serious injuries.

I ask, Mr. President, that 5,000 additional copies of the bill be printed, 2,000 of which shall be for the use of the Committee on the Judiciary, and 3,000 for the document room. I make that request because this bill applies to some seventeen hundred thousand railroad employees. There has already been a demand for many copies of it, and there will be a demand for a large number of copies.

The bill (S. 959) to provide an exclusive remedy and compensation for accidental injuries, resulting in disability or death, to employees of common carriers by railroad engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, or in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. The Senator from Utah asks that 5,000 additional copies of the bill be printed, 2,000 for the use of the Committee on the Judiciary, and 3,000 for the Senate document room. If there be no objection, that order will be made.

THE TARIFF.

Mr. BRYAN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 10) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

Mr. CUMMINS. I submit an amendment intended to be proposed by me to the bill (H. R. 10) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes. I ask that the amendment be printed and referred to the Committee on Finance, and that it also be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the amendment was referred to the Committee on Finance, ordered to be printed, and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. CUMMINS to the bill H. R. 10, viz: Add to paragraph 552 the following:

"Provided, however, That none of the foregoing meats shall be imported into the United States from any foreign country unless and until the President, after due investigation, has found and proclaimed that the government of any such foreign country has established and is maintaining a system of meat inspection which is the substantial equivalent and is as efficient as the system established and maintained by the laws of the United States in the Department of Agriculture; and especially that the system of such foreign country provides for the examination of all cattle, sheep, swine, and goats, before they are allowed to enter into any slaughtering, packing, meat canning, rendering, or similar establishment in which they are to be slaughtered and the meat or meat products thereof are to be used for food; and

"Provided further, That no meat imported into the United States from any foreign country shall be sold in the United States until it is examined and inspected, after arrival and before sale, by inspectors appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture; and the provisions of an act making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1908, relating to post-mortem examinations and inspections of the carcasses and parts thereof of cattle, sheep, swine, and goats, are hereby made applicable to carcasses, parts thereof, and meats so imported into the United States from any such foreign country."

OIL AND GAS LANDS OF OSAGE NATION.

Mr. OWEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to enter an order authorizing the return to the Secretary of the Interior of certain papers relating to the leasing of oil and gas lands of the Osage Nation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The proposed order will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Ordered, That the papers relating to the proposed leasing of oil and gas lands of the Osage Nation, Oklahoma, with rules and regulations, etc., forwarded to the Senate by the Secretary of the Interior in response to Senate resolution 485, Sixty-second Congress, third session, agreed to February 28, 1913, be withdrawn from the files of the Senate and returned to the Secretary of the Interior for the files of his office.

Mr. SMOOT. I should like to ask the Senator from Oklahoma if there has been any action taken upon the resolution?

Mr. OWEN. No action was taken upon it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, the order will be made.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the resolution ought to be amended by inserting the words "no action having been taken upon the resolution."

Mr. OWEN. It is simply an order returning the papers which are now on file in the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. SMOOT. I have no objection at all to the order, but it ought to state that no action has been taken upon the resolution.

Mr. OWEN. The original resolution simply called for the papers, and no action was necessary. I have no objection to those words being added.

Mr. SMOOT. I think, though, the amendment ought to be made, because that is the usual form—"no action having been taken upon the resolution."

Mr. OWEN. Let there be added to the order the words "no adverse report having been made thereon."

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, those words will be added, and the order as amended will be agreed to.

ASSISTANT CLERKS TO SENATORS.

Mr. JONES submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 44), which was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That each minority Senator not the chairman of a committee be, and he is hereby, authorized to employ one assistant clerk, at $1,440 per annum, to be paid from "miscellaneous items" of the contingent fund of the Senate until otherwise provided for by law.

SENATE RESEARCH BUREAU.

Mr. OWEN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 45), which was read and referred to the Committee on the Library:

Resolved, That there is hereby established the research bureau of the Senate, to be located in, or as near as practical to, the Senate room in the Library of Congress. The duties of the staff of the said bureau shall be (1) to brief legislative issues for the Senate committees whenever so requested, the work to include bill drafting; and (2) to assist the Senate conference committees whenever so requested. Rules for the operation of the bureau shall be formulated by the majority leader.

Second. Under the said rules the bureau shall be in charge of an expert in political science, political economy, and social science in general, who shall be elected by the Senate, and receive a salary of $———— per year. The appointments within the bureau shall be under a competitive system, the aim of which shall be to secure the services of those who are best fitted to do the work. The confirmation of appointments shall be by the majority leader. At the start the number of employees in the bureau shall be the expert in charge, one expert assistant, and a stenographer. The salaries shall be adjusted to efficiency and be fixed by the director of the bureau.

SOIL SURVEY OF ESCAMBIA COUNTY, FLA.

Mr. BRYAN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 46), which was read and referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved, That there shall be reprinted 1,000 additional copies of the Soil Survey of Escambia County, Fla., for the use of the Senate document room.

HEARINGS BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 47), which was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Public Lands, or any subcommittee thereof, be authorized during the Sixty-third Congress to send for persons and papers, and to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee, and to have the same printed for its use, the expense thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and that the committee or any subcommittee thereof may sit during the sessions of the Senate.

GOVERNMENT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. GALLINGER submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 48), which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That there be printed together in pamphlet form, for the use of the Senate document room, 1,000 copies of an act entitled "An act for the government of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved June 20, 1874, and an act entitled "An act to provide a permanent form of government for the District of Columbia," approved June 11, 1878.

CLAIMS OF COLOMBIA.

Mr. HITCHCOCK submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 50), which was read:

Whereas there has been published in Colombia what purports to be an official version in Spanish of the minutes of a conference between the American minister to Colombia and the minister of foreign affairs of Colombia, held February 15, 1913, at Bogota, together with a memorandum then presented by the American minister outlining the terms of a proposed settlement and arbitration of certain claims of Colombia against the United States, which proposals the Colombian minister of foreign affairs then and there rejected, according to said published minutes: Therefore, in order that the Senate may be fully informed,

Resolved, That the President be, and he is hereby, requested, if not incompatible with the public interest, to transmit to the Senate a copy of the minutes of said conference between the American minister to Colombia and the Colombian minister of foreign affairs, together with a copy of the memorandum offer then submitted by the United States, as well as copies of all correspondence between the two countries not heretofore submitted to the Senate and relating to the claims of Colombia against the United States, including also a copy of the report made to the State Department September 30, 1912, by the American minister to Colombia and mentioned in said memorandum.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, in explanation of the resolution I desire to say that something over a year ago I offered and the Senate passed a resolution calling upon the President to present to the Senate copies of all correspondence which had passed between the United States and Colombia relative to the claim of Colombia against the United States arising out of the secession of Panama in November, 1903.

The Senate passed the resolution, but the President returned it to the Senate later with a letter from the Secretary of State to the effect that it was not deemed expedient at that time to send the correspondence of recent years to the Senate, for the reason that certain negotiations were then pending, and a report from the minister of the United States was expected. It appears now that the report has been received; that negotiations have been had at Bogota, and that Colombia received certain proffers from the United States amounting, as I am told, to something over $25,000,000, which were rejected by Colombia. I think the time has arrived when the Senate and the country should be advised of the character of the proposition made and the present status of the negotiations between the two countries on this important question. I ask for the adoption of the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

GOVERNMENT EXPRESSAGE ON LAND-GRANT RAILROADS.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I send to the desk a resolution which I ask to have read for the information of the Senate, and then I will ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The resolution (S. Res. 49) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to report to the Senate whether or not payments have been from time to time made out of public moneys to express companies for the transportation of property of the United States over lines of railway companies which received grants of land from the Government upon the express condition that such lines "shall be and remain a public highway for the use of the Government of the United States, free of toll or other charges upon the transportation of property or troops of the United States; and the same shall be transported over said roads at the cost, charge, and expense of the corporations or companies owning or operating the same, when so required by the Government of the United States," or conditions of like import.

And the Secretary of the Treasury is further directed, in case payments for transportation of property of the United States over such land-grant railroads have been made to express companies, to report to the Senate the authority for making such payments and the extent to which the practice of making them has been followed.

CONFERENCE REPORTS ON TARIFF MEASURES.

Mr. CUMMINS. I desire to give a notice, and I send it to the desk to be read, with the accompanying resolution (S. Res. 43).

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

Pursuant to the rules of the Senate, I hereby give notice that on Thursday, the 17th day of April, or the next session of the Senate, I will offer a resolution proposing the adoption of an additional standing rule. A copy of the resolution and rule is attached hereto.

Resolved, That there shall be added as one of the standing rules of the Senate the following, to wit:

"When the report of a conference committee upon the disagreeing votes of the two Houses upon a bill proposing to change duties upon imports from a foreign country into the United States is under consideration by the Senate there shall be, upon the request of any Senator, a separate vote on any point or item of disagreement concerning which there is a recommendation that the Senate recede in whole or in part."

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, in pursuance of the rules of the Senate, the notice that I have given must lie on the table until the next meeting of the Senate, and it can then be referred to the Committee on Rules.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The notice and accompanying resolution will lie on the table.

INTERNATIONAL IRRIGATION CONGRESS (S. DOC. NO. 6).

Mr. NEWLANDS. I ask unanimous consent to have printed as a public document proceedings of the International Irrigation Congress of October, 1912, containing certain resolutions adopted by that congress and the constitution adopted by it.

Mr. SMOOT. I should like to ask the Senator from Nevada if that has not already been printed as a public document.

Mr. NEWLANDS. It is my recollection that the Senator from Utah was to make that motion, but that in the pressure of business near the close of the last session it was not done.

Mr. SMOOT. I may be mistaken, but if my memory serves me aright it is now a public document. I can find out in a few moments, however.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I will then withhold the request until the Senator from Utah ascertains the fact.

Mr. SMOOT. I have no objection at all to the printing, and if I did not ask that it be printed as a public document I intended to do so. I will let the Senator know in a very few minutes.

Mr. NEWLANDS subsequently said: I learn from the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] that he was mistaken in the impression that the matter referred to a few moments ago has already been printed as a document. I ask unanimous consent that it be published as a document.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I do not care to object to this request, but it does seem to me that we have to draw the line somewhere in the matter of printing public documents, and it should not be done without some thought or understanding as to the expense. I have no doubt the Senator makes the request in perfect good faith, and perhaps the paper ought to be printed; but I think it is due to the Senate, due to the public, and due to everyone that such matters should be referred to the committee which has in hand this sort of business. There is a Committee on Printing which, when matters of this kind are referred to it, has an investigation made as to the cost of the printing, and then we get an idea as to whether it is advisable to print the different papers that are offered to be printed.

I think it is a bad precedent to insist that we should print whatever is asked to be printed at any time without any regard to what the expense may be and the number of copies required, or anything of that sort.

I wish the Senator would allow the request to be referred, so that we may have it understood that such matters shall go to the committee which is charged with the business of ascertaining the cost and the necessity of printing matters as public documents.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I will state to the Senator from Florida that this paper comprises a pamphlet of four or five pages. It represents the resolutions passed by the International Irrigation Congress at its session last fall and the action of that Congress relating to a new constitution enlarging its scope.

The congress has already received the recognition of the Congress of the United States by two appropriations regarding its meetings. Those meetings are of national consequence and cover a subject matter of great interest. This has been a very potential organization in the formation of public opinion regarding the method of dealing with our waters.

Of course if the Senator from Florida insists that the matter shall go to the committee, I will have to yield, but the public importance is so obvious and the expense is so trivial I hope the Senator will not press his objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that the Senator from Florida objects.

Mr. FLETCHER. I do not yet quite catch the request of the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. NEWLANDS. The request is for unanimous consent for the publication as a public document of the matter referred to.

Mr. FLETCHER. I realize the importance of the subject to which the Senator has referred, and I will not make an objection now. I do, however, insist that the proper course is to refer such requests to the Committee on Printing. I do not object to the Senator's request.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, it will be so ordered.

REPORT OF PARK COMMISSION.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, the report of the Park Commission of the District of Columbia, a very valuable publication, has been several times reprinted, but it is now practically out of print. Many calls are being made for that publication.

I present a condensed form of that report. It is considerably abbreviated. I would like to have from five to ten thousand copies of it printed, but will ask that the document be referred to the Committee on Printing for consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The publication, with the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire, will be referred to the Committee on Printing.

INCOME-TAX PROVISION OF THE TARIFF BILL (S. DOC. NO. 4).

Mr. CLAPP. I make a request for the publication of 2,000 copies of section 2 of House bill No. 10. It is the section which relates to the income tax. Requests are being made for it, and there is no use to print the entire bill in order to comply with the requests.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Minnesota? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I ask unanimous consent for a reprint of a Senate document of the last Congress. At the last Congress I submitted to be printed as a Senate document the Constitution of the United States with annotations. There has been such a demand for it that the edition has been exhausted. I ask now that it be printed with corrections to date as a Senate document and that 1,500 additional copies be printed for the use of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? If not, it will be so ordered.

ADJOURNMENT TO THURSDAY.

Mr. KERN. I move that when the Senate adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Thursday next at 12 o'clock noon.

The motion was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. BACON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 10 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

REORGANIZATION OF CUSTOMS SERVICE (S. DOC. NO. 7).

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

On August 21, 1912, and October 19, 1912, there were appointed by the President, in accordance with the authority granted to him to reorganize the customs service, Winfield T. Denison, Esq., an Assistant Attorney General; William Loeb, jr., Esq., collector of customs at New York; and Felix Frankfurter, Esq., law officer of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, as a committee to inquire into the procedure, practice, and administrative methods of the Board of United States General Appraisers.

I transmit herewith the report of this committee on these subjects.

WOODROW WILSON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, April 15, 1913.

Mr. GALLINGER. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 1 o'clock and 38 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Thursday, April 17, 1913, at 12 o'clock meridian.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, April 17, 1913.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of Tuesday last was read and approved.

SENATOR FROM ILLINOIS.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, the Senator elect from the State of Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], whose credentials have heretofore been presented and filed, is now present and ready to take the oath of office.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator elect will present himself at the desk for the purpose of taking the oath of office.

Mr. LEWIS was escorted to the Vice President's desk by Mr. SHERMAN, and the oath prescribed by law having been administered to him, he took his seat in the Senate.

COMMITTEE SERVICE.

Mr. LODGE. I offer a resolution placing the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SHERMAN] on sundry minority committees.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The resolution was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That Mr. SHERMAN be appointed a member of the Committee on the District of Columbia in place of Mr. LIPPITT, resigned; of the Committee on Canadian Relations in place of Mr. CUMMINS, resigned; of the Committee on Privileges and Elections in place of Mr. OLIVER, resigned; of the Committee on Disposition of Useless Papers in Executive Departments in place of Mr. SMOOT, resigned; of the Committee on Expenditures in the Post Office Department in place of Mr. BRISTOW, resigned; of the Committee on Transportation Routes to the Seaboard in place of Mr. BURTON, resigned; of the Committee on Forest Reservations and Protection of Game in place of Mr. POINDEXTER, resigned.

POLICEMEN'S AND FIREMEN'S PENSION ROLLS (S. DOC. NO. 10).

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 10th instant, certain information relative to the names of all persons borne on the policemen's and firemen's pension rolls of the District, etc., which, on motion of Mr. GALLINGER, was, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair presents a concurrent resolution adopted by the Territorial Legislature of Hawaii, which will be referred to the Committee on Finance and printed in the RECORD.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I understand that that is a memorial of a legislature.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is a memorial of the Legislature of Hawaii.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. It occurs to me that it should be read.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let it be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. All right.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The memorial will be read if the Senator from Wyoming desires.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. To have it printed in the RECORD is sufficient.

The memorial was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Concurrent resolution.

Whereas a special session of the Congress of the United States has been called by the President for the purpose of revising tariff duties; and

Whereas the commercial life of the Territory of Hawaii and almost its entire population is dependent on the sugar industry in said Territory, in which industry there is at present invested more than one hundred and fifty millions of dollars; and

Whereas a material reduction of the tariff duty on sugar will work incalculable harm to the industry, and the abolition of the said duty will actually destroy the same and impoverish the thousands whose savings are invested therein, or whose business or employment is dependent thereon; and

Whereas in the past eight years in addition to the amount derived from taxes, it has been necessary to borrow money upon bonds of the Territory to the amount of $6,844,000 in order to provide funds for necessary improvements; and

Whereas out of the total annual taxes assessed upon real and personal property and upon incomes the receipts from which for the year 1912 amounted to $2,702,533.07, the sum of $1,758,544.39 was paid directly by sugar estates as shown by the returns on file, being 65 per cent of said taxes, and there was paid by the industries directly dependent upon sugar an estimated amount of 20 per cent of the same, making an aggregate of 85 per cent of the entire receipts of the Territory derived from the sources above specified; and

Whereas any substantial tariff change would deprive this Territory of said portion of its revenue, which could not be replaced from other sources, and the Territory would be unable to meet its current necessary expenses: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii (the Senate concurring), That we de respectfully petition the Congress not to reduce the present duty on sugar; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and to the Delegate to Congress.

THE SENATE OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, March 31, 1913.

We hereby certify that the foregoing concurrent resolution was finally adopted in the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii on March 31, 1913.

ERIC A. KNUDSEN,
President of the Senate.
JOHN H. WISE,
Clerk of the Senate.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 1, 1913.

We hereby certify that the foregoing concurrent resolution was finally adopted in the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii on April 1, 1913.

H. L. HOLSTEIN,

EDWARD WOODWARD,
Clerk House of Representatives.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint memorial of the Territorial Legislature of Alaska, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial 2.

To the President and Congress of the United States:

Be it resolved by the Legislature of Alaska, That the following memorial be sent to the President and Congress, with the request that as early action as possible compatible with public business be taken thereon:

We respectfully represent that by the organic law creating the Territory of Alaska, approved August 24, 1912, in section 3 thereof the Legislature of Alaska is prohibited from in any manner interfering with the laws of the United States "providing for taxes on business and trade."

We further represent that by the same enabling act the Legislature of Alaska is further prohibited in section 9 thereof "to fix and impose any tax or taxes upon railways or railway property in Alaska" for the period of five years from the date of said act.

With the wisdom of the above inhibition the entire people of Alaska, we declare, is in full accord, because the prosperity and further development of Alaska depends upon a wise solution of the problems of transportation.

We further represent that the provisions of "An act making further provisions for a civil government for Alaska," approved June 6, 1900, in section 29 thereof a license tax is imposed by the United States, as follows: "Railroads, $100 per mile per annum on each mile operated."

We further represent that because of the requirement of the payment of such license or tax a great hardship is imposed on miners and prospectors in various mining districts of the Territory, notably Kougarok and Solomon River precincts in the Seward Peninsula. During the season of 1912 the license was not paid and the railroads were not operated, except by dogs and mules pulling small tram cars.

We therefore request Congress to remit the license tax of $100 per mile per annum on all railroads in the Seward Peninsula until August 24, 1917.

Adopted by the senate March 20, 1913.

L. V. RAY,
President of the Senate.

Concurred in by the house April 2, 1913.

EARNEST B. COLLINS,
Speaker of the House.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, District of Alaska, ss:

I, William L. Distin, secretary of the District of Alaska, do hereby certify that the above and foregoing is a full, true, and correct copy of senate joint memorial 2 of the Alaska Territorial Legislature.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of Alaska, at Juneau, this 4th day of April, A. D. 1913.

[SEAL.] WM. L. DISTIN,
Secretary of Alaska.

Mr. THOMAS presented a joint resolution adopted by the Legislature of Colorado, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint resolution 22.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the General Assembly of the State of Colorado, would respectfully represent that under and by direction of the Secretary of the Interior the Hon. R. B. Marshall, chief geographer of the department, recently visited Colorado to determine by personal observation whether there should be established in Colorado a national park.

That the said Marshall, following the said order, visited Colorado, and after a careful and painstaking examination of the country proposed to be included in said national park, recommended the creation of the same.

That the people of Colorado desire that said park shall be established. It includes the highest mountain peaks in the State; the area is little adapted to either agriculture or grazing; its scenery for sublimity and grandeur is not excelled on the continent. Its location is easy of access to America's millions who seek health and recreation in the summer months, it being situated in the front and main range of the Rocky Mountains.

We therefore urge that you pass an act creating the said Rocky Mountain National Park, adopting the metes and bounds as set forth in the report of said Chief Geographer Marshall to the Secretary of the Interior, and embodying provisions as contained in a bill for an act creating the said park, prepared and introduced in the National House of Representatives for that purpose, and hereby declare the willingness of the State of Colorado, upon the passage of a congressional act establishing said park, to cede jurisdiction in the manner customary in such cases.

And this your memorialists will ever pray.

That the secretary of the senate is hereby instructed to transmit to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the President of the United States, and to our Senators and Representatives in Congress a copy of this resolution.

STEPHEN R. FITZGANARD,
President of the Senate.

Attest:

MARK A. SKINNER,
Secretary of the Senate.

Mr. THOMAS presented resolutions adopted by the Trades and Labor Assembly of Colorado, remonstrating against the tyranny of using State and National troops and the declaring of martial law whenever and wherever working people are on strike for better working conditions, etc., which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. SMOOT. I present a petition signed by 150 citizens of the Cherokee Nation, praying for the payment of the award made to the heirs of John W. West, deceased. I ask that the petition be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and that the body of the petition, omitting the signatures, be printed in the RECORD.

The petition was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and, there being no objection, the body of the petition was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Petition for the payment of the award made to the heirs of John W. West, deceased.

To the Congress of the United States:

We, the undersigned citizens and members of the Cherokee Nation, respectfully petition the Congress of the United States to authorize the payment, without further delay, of the award made by the commission appointed, pursuant to the seventh article of the treaty of 1846, out of the funds now standing to the credit of the Cherokee Nation in the Treasury of the United States, said award being made May 25, 1883, and approved by the Secretary August 29, 1883, reaffirmed by decision of Secretary Teller September 16, 1884, and again reaffirmed by decision of Secretary Lamar April 26, 1886, together with interest thereon, as provided for in the award since October 30, 1843.

This award was made by Commissioners John Q. Tufts, acting for the United States, and D. W. C. Duncan, a Cherokee citizen, acting for the Cherokee Nation. We believe that the action of our commissioner in approving this award was binding upon the nation, and that the failure of our nation to pay the award is a reproach to the honor of both the Cherokee Nation and the United States. To avoid a continuation of such reproach the payment of said award is by your petitioners demanded.

The United States has dealt fairly and equitably with the Cherokee Nation. On our claim arising in part out of the same treaty, where the principal sum was $1,111,111, we secured judgment in the Court of Claims, which was affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States (202 U. S., 101), for more than $5,000,000. As our nation has been allowed interest on its claims, there is no justification for our refusing to pay interest on this award regularly and duly made, the binding force and effect of which no honest man can question.

Mr. KENYON presented a petition of the Farmers Grain Dealers' Association of Iowa, praying for the creation of a commission to investigate and determine the cost of production and cost of preparation for distribution of the leading cereals, cattle, hogs, and sheep, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I send to the desk a telegram from Thomas R. Cutler, of Salt Lake City, Utah, with reference to the tariff duty on sugar, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD, without reading, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection, the telegram was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, April 16, 1913.

Senator GEORGE SUTHERLAND,
Washington, D. C.:

Utah-Idaho Sugar Co., Amalgamated Sugar Co., Lewiston Sugar Co., join in plea for full and complete hearings to be given to every industry by Finance Committee on tariff bill. Late hearings by Democratic Ways and Means Committee were absolutely incomplete. Western interests in sugar, wool, etc., are especially interested. Tariff bill H. R. 10 would cause widespread suffering and, as far as sugar is concerned, would close up our factories and play into the hands of the refiners of foreign sugars.

THOMAS R. CUTLER.

Mr. BRISTOW presented a petition of sundry citizens of Galesburg, Kans., praying for an adjustment of the pay of railway mail clerks on account of the conditions brought about by the parcel-post law, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. LODGE presented petitions of Mayor John F. Hurley and 46 other citizens of Salem, William H. Lewis and 37 other citizens of Boston, and Elwyn G. Preston and 119 other citizens of Boston, all in the State of Massachusetts, praying for the repeal of the clause in the Panama Canal act exempting American coastwise shipping from the payment of tolls, which were referred to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals.

Mr. GOFF presented a memorial of the National Window Glass Workers' Local Union of Weston, W. Va., and a memorial of the National Glass Workers' Local Union of Clarksburg, W. Va., remonstrating against any reduction in the duty on window glass, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented memorials of sundry citizens of Quinnimont, Raymond City, Welch, and Winona, all in the State of West Virginia, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation prohibiting any society, fraternal order, or organization from sending through the mails any written or printed matter representing such society, etc., which is already being used as a part of its title or name by any other society or fraternal organization, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SPEECH OF MR. JUSTICE HOLMES.

Mr. LODGE. I ask for a reprint of Senate Document 1106. It is a speech by Mr. Justice Holmes, and the print is entirely exhausted. I have many inquiries for copies.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I do not rise to object, but I should like to know what the document is.

Mr. LODGE. It is a document already printed by the Senate. It is a short speech made by Mr. Justice Holmes last February. The edition is entirely exhausted.

Mr. WILLIAMS. On what subject was the speech?

Mr. LODGE. It was on the general subject of the judiciary, I think.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I have no objection to the order being made.

Mr. LODGE. It has already been printed as a document.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there is no objection, the order to print will be made.

PANAMA CANAL TOLLS (S. DOC. NO. 11).

Mr. LODGE. I ask to have printed as a Senate document the correspondence between the secretary of state for foreign affairs of Great Britain and our State Department in regard to Panama Canal tolls. It has been published, but never printed as a Senate document, and there is a great demand for copies.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts? If there is no objection, it will be so ordered.

HEARINGS ON TARIFF BILL.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I have received numerous telegrams and letters in reference to hearings or proposed hearings on the tariff. There are very many people in the United States who feel that they have never been given an opportunity to be heard on the proposed bill, and that they are entitled as a matter of right to a hearing on a question which so vitally affects them.

I rise at this time for the purpose of asking the majority whether it proposes to permit hearings on the tariff bill which is to be considered by the Finance Committee hereafter. I notice that the chairman of the Finance Committee is not present, but other members of that committee are here. I would like to be able to answer my correspondents correctly in reference to a matter which is of such great importance to them. They feel that there must be a misunderstanding of the industrial situation in this country on the part of the Democratic majority and they would like to be heard.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, the chairman of the committee, the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS] seems not to be in his seat, nor the senior member, the Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE]. I am the next ranking member, and I will give an answer to the Senator's question to the best of my ability.

While the committee has never passed a resolution to that effect, I am satisfied that the majority of the committee consider hearings absolutely unnecessary. The Committee on Ways and Means of the House gave very full hearings, and the Finance Committee of the Senate in the last Congress had a long series of hearings. Prior to that, in connection with the Payne-Aldrich bill, the hearings were dragged out at infinite length. The Government Printing Office has printed a multiplicity of stuff in the shape of hearings. I am satisfied that the majority of the committee do not desire to have any hearings. That is my opinion.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President——

Mr. PENROSE. Will the Senator from Michigan permit me to interrupt him?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I will yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. PENROSE. On behalf of the minority members of the Finance Committee I desire to inform the Senator from Michigan that they intend to make a very vigorous request that the majority shall grant hearings. Of course, there is no tariff bill before the Senate at the present time, but when the measure comes over here the Republican members of the Finance Committee will, as far as I know, be unanimous in requesting hearings in compliance with the thousands of requests which we are all in receipt of every day from manufacturers and persons interested in the tariff that such hearings be granted.

Mr. O'GORMAN. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I will yield.

Mr. O'GORMAN. I simply desire to ask a question of the Senator from Pennsylvania. Is he speaking also for the Members of the Progressive Party who are upon the Finance Committee?

Mr. PENROSE. I am speaking for the Republicans or the minority members of the Finance Committee. I can not say that I speak for everyone, for I have not had an opportunity to confer with all of them; but I have talked with most of them within the last two or three days.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Michigan has the floor.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I merely wanted to add to what I have already said that, speaking for myself and I think for others, it seems best for the country that such tariff legislation as shall be enacted shall be enacted as speedily as possible, and we should not engage in the consideration and hearing of Tom, Dick, and Harry who apply to be heard before the committee. The business of the country is to a certain extent being held up, the importations are being affected and to some extent suspended, and it brings around, as things of that sort always do, a considerable degree of uncertainty in the minds of those who want to purchase goods. The country has heard from every man who wanted to be heard. During the last three or four years Congress has been having more tariff hearing than upon any other sort of business.

It has seemed to us that—

> If it were done, * * * then 't were well
> It were done quickly.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield to the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I rise to make a suggestion to the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS]. Representatives of almost every industry in my State—and they are very numerous—have written to me urgently requesting that they shall be given an opportunity to be heard in reference to the pending tariff bill. They are men of substance, of standing, of integrity; and I suggest to the Senator from Mississippi that it was rather unfortunate that he should have referred to them as Tom, Dick, and Harry.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Why, Mr. President, these gentlemen may be all that; but if we open the doors to hearings generally, not only they, but Tom, Dick, and Harry can also knock and be admitted.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator is wrong about that. The committee can restrict the number who shall be heard representing each industry, but they surely ought to be given some opportunity to present their case.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I have never known the committee to refuse to hear everybody who came.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have known it to be done.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I will ask the Senator from New Hampshire this question: What proportion of these people who want to be heard have already been heard?

Mr. GALLINGER. They may have been heard on some other bill, possibly; but I do not recall the fact that there has been any hearing on this particular bill on the part of the Ways and Means Committee of the other House.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Has there been any change in the industrial condition of the country that would make the facts they testified to formerly untrue now?

Mr. GALLINGER. There certainly has been a change in the rates named in this bill as compared with the rates in other bills; there are very serious changes.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Are not these rates, taken upon the whole, pretty much the rates that were sent to the Senate last year by the other House and considered then, after very full hearings?

Mr. GALLINGER. I confess that I have been unable to discover that to be a fact. Industries are threatened with extinction in this bill that were reasonably protected in the other bill. The other bill was bad enough, but this bill is infinitely worse.

Mr. WILLIAMS. There have been some changes, especially with regard to wool, sugar, and some other few things; but upon the whole, I take it, the Senator from New Hampshire will agree with me that the bills are about the same.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I do not care to engage in a tariff discussion this morning; we will have opportunity for that in the future; but I do want to say that I think the country will be interested to learn the attitude of the majority and minority members of the Finance Committee of the Senate in reference to this question. The manufacturers and the farmers of the country want to be heard on this bill. Of course, if the majority sees fit to exclude them from a hearing, the minority is powerless, and as one member of the minority I am willing that that matter shall go to the country precisely as has been suggested by the Senator from Mississippi, leaving the responsibility for refusing hearings upon the Democratic majority.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, it is not a question of refusing to hear the manufacturers and farmers of the country. The position which I take is that we have heard them; that during the last session of Congress, both with regard to the tariff bills which were then sent here from the other House and with regard to the Canadian reciprocity bill, so called, there were very extensive hearings; all those matters were gone into; and every interest in the country that desired to do so sent men here to be heard. Those men were heard, and what they said is in print. If there has been no change in the industrial condition of the country, what they said in the nature of facts—and it was only the communication of facts that would have any weight with the committee—the facts could not have changed in the meantime. If they testified to the truth then, what they have testified to as printed is still the truth. There has been no change in the industrial condition of the country to make a change in the testimony necessary.

Mr. GALLINGER. It might be shown, Mr. President, on another hearing that there has been a serious change; that importations from foreign countries under the existing law have greatly increased in certain lines of industry, and hence that further reductions in duties should not be made.

Again, the Senator from Mississippi alludes to the reciprocity matter. Why, Mr. President, we had some reciprocity offered to this country in the bill of the last Congress, but we have not any reciprocity at all in this bill. It is coolly proposed to give away everything to Canada in this bill; we are getting nothing whatever in return. So that question presents a new aspect, and it would be well for us to hear some of the farmers of this country in reference to that feature of the so-called Underwood bill. There have been material changes, both as regards the manufacturing industry and the agricultural industry, and these men ought to have some opportunity to present their views. To deny them that right does not commend itself to the Republican members of the Finance Committee.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I hope, Mr. President, that in saying what I have said the Senate will understand that I have been speaking for myself and merely giving my judgment as to what will be the action of the majority; but I think myself justified in drawing that inference and coming to that conclusion from private conversations with members of the majority. There has been no organized action either on the part of the committee or by the members of the majority.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I should like to say a few words before yielding the floor further. I said, to begin with, that I had received hundreds—perhaps they amount to thousands—of petitions in the form of letters and telegrams from business men who are interested in the prosperity and the continued prosperity of this country. They have felt that they have never had an opportunity to be heard on the questions peculiarly involved in the pending tariff bill.

If I understand the attitude of the Democratic Party correctly, not only as demonstrated by the bill that is now pending before the other House, but also from the late message to Congress by the President of the United States, there is no proposition to maintain even "a tariff for revenue only." The clear idea is to go to a free-trade basis in this country, either now or in the immediate future. The country so understands it. No such proposition has been pending before Congress since the Civil War. The President does not attempt to hide his free-trade purpose. The Senator from Mississippi feels that if this deed is to be done it is perhaps well to do it quickly and to do it in the dark. But is haste the principal thing to be considered in tariff making? Is it not important to consider the nature of the bill itself and how it will affect industries which are vital to the prosperity and happiness of the people? Can the Finance Committee have too much information on a matter so greatly important? Will publicity embarrass them in their work?

I am not in favor of delaying a consideration and determination of the tariff; I realize that the Democratic Party are charged with the responsibility of legislation; but while I am perfectly willing that they should assume that responsibility in almost any way that they shall see fit, yet I feel that I am not fulfilling my duty to my constituents unless I ask the Democratic majority to at least give a fair consideration to the needs of the people of the State of Michigan. I do not believe that the men who are petitioning the Congress are actuated entirely by selfish purposes. I believe they feel that the proposed action is going to be their undoing, and I agree with them on that. I hope I am mistaken, but I think that the least that the majority can do in this case is to give hearings to the men who are deeply interested in these schedules.

It is not true, Mr. President, that this bill is a copy of the old bill. It is not true that the same principles are involved in it as were involved in its predecessors. It seems to me that even Senators on the other side who are actuated by a patriotic desire to serve their country ought at least to be willing and anxious to obtain all the facts which are possible to be obtained.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Michigan a question. I take it that the Senator from Michigan does not deny that upon this identical bill the Ways and Means Committee of the other House has given abundant hearings——

Mr. TOWNSEND. I do deny that, Mr. President.

Mr. WILLIAMS. That those hearings have been published, and that these very people from the Senator's State were before the committee, and were heard for the most part.

Mr. TOWNSEND. That is not my understanding.

Mr. WILLIAMS. What is the use of printing their testimony twice?

Mr. TOWNSEND. It is not my understanding, Mr. President, that there were full hearings had before the Ways and Means Committee of the other House. I know there were men in this city from the State of Michigan who came down here with the purpose and desire to be heard by the Ways and Means Committee, and they were told that the time was limited; that they could not be heard; and they were restricted in some cases to 15 minutes in which to present their propositions on this great subject. Many who came here could not be heard at all. I submit, Mr. President, that that is not a hearing.

Mr. LIPPITT. Mr. President, if the Senator from Michigan will yield to me, I should like to ask him if, in addition to their time being limited to 15 minutes, a very large proportion, in many cases, of that 15 minutes was not taken up by questions that were asked by members of the Ways and Means Committee in such manner that the witnesses were not allowed and not permitted to give their testimony as they would have liked to have done?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Quite so; and that is the complaint that has been made. Furthermore, the bill is being made now in secret caucus, and no witness who appeared before the House committee could have anticipated what the bill as finally reported would be. Certainly no one could have even guessed what the administrative features would be; but now, after a thorough understanding by the country of what is incorporated in the House bill, there is a better opportunity to obtain information directly on the matters involved than could have been had heretofore. So, I am pleading for hearings by the people, who are quite as patriotic as are any Members of this body and who are much more vitally interested in our fiscal policy, because that policy may mean industrial life or death to them, according as that policy is wise or otherwise.

Mr. LANE. I should like to ask the Senator a question, if he will allow me.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. TOWNSEND. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. LANE. I understood the Senator to refer to a large number of telegrams which he had received in relation to the tariff measure.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The Senator understood correctly.

Mr. LANE. Letters and telegrams protesting against the contemplated action of the majority party. I also understood the Senator to say that the action of the party was now being taken in secret, and that it would not be known what the facts were. I wish to ask the Senator if he is receiving large numbers of telegrams and letters from consumers or whether they are merely from the class of producers and manufacturers?

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, in this country there is not a great difference between producers and consumers. They are all consumers, and every able and competent person should be a producer. But if by consumers the Senator from Oregon means laboring people, I will say, for his information, that I have received letters and telegrams from some labor organizations asking that the House bill be not passed because, in their judgment, it would be detrimental to American labor. The Senator himself will undoubtedly hear later from this same source. Laborers can not be placed exclusively in the consuming class. They are the great producers of the world, and you must not close the door of American opportunity to them.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President, I simply desire to ask a question for information. Is it a fact that any hearings of any length have been given upon the tariff question and the rates of the pending bill before the present Ways and Means Committee of the House?

Mr. STONE. Before the majority members of the Ways and Means Committee there were extended hearings on this very bill. I have in my office now five published volumes of those hearings embodying verbal statements and printed briefs submitted to the committee.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. May I ask the Senator were not those hearings rather upon a bill that was indeterminate in its character? And is it not a fact that the present bill that is being considered, as I understand from the Senator from Michigan, in secret caucus, was not introduced in the House of Representatives until April 7 of the present year, and since that bill has been introduced there have been no hearings of any sort either by the majority or by the minority or by the full committee?

Mr. STONE. I do not think there have been hearings since the present House bill was introduced and referred to the Committee on Ways and Means—none that I know of—but there were extended hearings before the majority members of the Ways and Means Committee during the preparation of the bill.

Mr. PENROSE. Will the Senator permit me to interrupt him?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. STONE. I do.

Mr. PENROSE. The Senator uses the term "extended hearings." Of course our estimate of the word "extended" is entirely relative. Does the Senator consider it an "extended hearing" to give one day to each schedule upon which ordinarily it would take several weeks to have adequate hearings, and to restrict persons representing thousands of employees and millions of dollars of investment to 15 minutes, the time allowed them being largely taken up by questions addressed to them? Does he consider a hearing on a measure which is not in existence an "extended hearing," when impressions were conveyed to manufacturers and to employees that certain lines of policy would be adopted and then schedules were announced and published, such as the cotton schedule, that came like a bolt from a clear sky upon the interests affected? Does he consider it reasonable that the cotton people should not be permitted to have a hearing when a schedule has been placed before the country entirely different from any schedule which they had reason to expect?

Mr. STONE. Mr. President——

Mr. PENROSE. If the Senator will excuse me for one moment, I will stop. After the bill is introduced the Democrats in the House of Representatives, by a large majority, solemnly decree that the proceedings shall be secret, and for some time practically three-fourths of the House of Representatives have been legislating in secret caucus, so that the American people have no official information as to the details of the transaction or the reasons or arguments leading to the conclusions embodied in the bill.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Missouri allow me to ask a question of the Senator who has just taken his seat?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. STONE. I do.

Mr. WARREN. I should like to ask the ex-chairman of the Committee on Finance whether the tariff bills which have been under consideration heretofore contained the same provision as to the date on which they should take effect as the measure now pending in the other House? As I understand, the present bill is to take effect on the day following its signature by the President. Was that true of the former bills which were under consideration?

Mr. PENROSE. The Senator means the Democratic tariff bills that were offered in the last Congress?

Mr. WARREN. Yes.

Mr. PENROSE. I do not remember whether they were to go into effect at once or not.

Mr. WARREN. My remembrance is that they were not to go into effect at once, and former tariff bills have not taken effect immediately on their enactment. That alone is a part of the problem that ought, in my judgment, to have been considered and evidence taken of those who are interested on both sides—the consumers, the manufacturers, and the farmers. The Wilson-Gorman bill passed in August, 1894, but as to Schedule K it did not become effective until the following July, nearly 11 months. The bill of last year, 1912, regarding that same Schedule K was not to become effective until January 1, 1913, and the same was true as to the bill relating to cotton; it was not to become effective until about 6 months after its passage. There are other features of the bill that are entirely new even to the Members of the majority of the House of Representatives. They knew nothing of the bill until it was presented after the hearings were all over. The bill is a stranger to everybody except the Ways and Means Committee of the House.

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, one more point, and I am done, if the Senator from Missouri will permit me. During the last two Congresses the majority of the Finance Committee have never refused a hearing to anybody; and at the request of the then minority on numerous occasions, particularly when the cotton schedule was being considered, extensive and patient hearings were given to representatives of southern industries, who desired to be heard on measures then pending.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, just why this matter has been injected at this time upon the Senate is not difficult to imagine. It is not pertinent to any business before the Senate. The question as to hearings will, of course, be determined by the Committee on Finance. The present occasion affords some opportunity for Senators on the other side to expand their vocal chords, perform a political vaudeville stunt, and get some attention by way of denouncing a revenue measure which has not even been considered by the House of Representatives, and which, therefore, under the Constitution, can not now be before the Senate. In other words, the manifest purpose is to create some kind of adverse public sentiment in advance. It is a political maneuver by distinguished and very adroit politicians.

Mr. President, the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] said that this bill fell like a clap of thunder from a clear sky, astounding the industrial interests of the country. I have no doubt that the bill produced some astonishment and some apprehension. It always happens that when we come to a proposal to reduce tariff taxation, to pare down a little the injustices of tariff schedules that have been built up in the interest of special classes having a sort of political partnership with the Republican Party, that those special interests feel and express astonishment and apprehension—naturally so. This always happens. But that is no reason why the mandate of the American people should not be executed, or why the Democratic Party should not go resolutely forward to reform abuses; and that is what we intend to do.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. TOWNSEND] said that in the hearings had, only 15 minutes was given to particular schedules or items in schedules.

Mr. TOWNSEND. No, Mr. President; the Senator from Michigan did not say quite that.

Mr. STONE. What did he say?

Mr. TOWNSEND. The Senator from Michigan said that witnesses were not allowed, in many cases, over 15 minutes. I did not say that whole schedules were confined to 15 minutes. I said that witnesses were given only 15 minutes in many cases—not time enough to present their views.

While I am on my feet, may I ask the Senator for information on another subject?

Mr. STONE. Let us dispose of this subject while we have it in hand.

Mr. TOWNSEND. It is one that the Senator has just passed. Did I understand the Senator from Missouri to say that the Democratic Party, or the Democratic Members of the Senate, had received the mandate of a majority of the American people on this question?

Mr. STONE. Yes; I said that.

Mr. TOWNSEND. The election record does not so show.

Mr. STONE. Yes; I said that we have a mandate from a majority of the American people to revise the tariff downward.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Did the Senator take that mandate from the last election?

Mr. STONE. From the last election.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Does the Senator maintain that the Democratic Party received a majority of the votes at that election?

Mr. STONE. No; but I do mean to say that the Democratic Party received a very substantial plurality, and that the Progressive Party was also demanding a substantial downward revision of the tariff, and the vote received by the two constituted a large majority of the American electorate.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Does the Senator understand that the progressive element of the American people, or the Progressive Party, was for free trade as enunciated in this bill?

Mr. STONE. Nobody is for free trade. Why does the Senator speak of free trade? I am not speaking for free trade. The Democratic Party is not for free trade, but it is against a tariff system that enables special interests to plunder the great body of the American people almost at pleasure.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Is the Senator opposed to the free-trade items in the bill?

Mr. STONE. To some of them, perhaps; not to all of them. But does the Senator desire now to go into a discussion of the items of this bill in detail?

Mr. TOWNSEND. No.

Mr. STONE. If he does, I shall decline to accommodate him. We will take up the bill when we get it before the Senate in proper form.

Mr. TOWNSEND. No; I simply wanted to understand the Senator as he went along.

Mr. STONE. The Senator's question could not elicit information from anyone, unless he intended to open up the entire tariff discussion now, and that purpose he disclaims.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I ask the Senator to yield for one moment, in order that the RECORD may be set straight as to this question of hearings.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. STONE. I do.

Mr. FLETCHER. The actual facts are that the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives had a regular calendar of assignments for the hearings on this bill while it was being shaped, beginning January 7 and continuing to and through February 1, practically one month. I have in my hand the various calendars and assignments of those hearings, giving the name of the witness, what he represented, his address, the items in respect to which he appeared, and the time given. So these hearings were actually extended over a period of nearly one month by the Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator before what committee those hearings were held?

Mr. FLETCHER. The Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Of what Congress?

Mr. FLETCHER. The Sixty-second Congress.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The last Congress.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. The Sixty-second Congress?

Mr. FLETCHER. Yes.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Do the same members constitute the Committee on Ways and Means of this Congress that formulated this bill? Was this bill formulated in the Sixty-third or the Sixty-second Congress?

Mr. FLETCHER. I have just stated that these hearings extended from January 7 to February 1. While the present members of the committee were not all members of it at that time, the present members of the Ways and Means Committee are gentlemen sufficiently qualified to read and understand the English language, and those hearings were all printed.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. The hearings to which the Senator refers, then, are hearings held during another Congress, before another Ways and Means Committee, which was composed of different people, and on another bill?

Mr. FLETCHER. There were only a few changes, as I understand.

Mr. STONE. The personnel of the Ways and Means Committee of this Congress is substantially that of the last Congress.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I rise simply to make an explanation.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, if I am going to say anything at all, I shall have to ask Senators not to interrupt me so much.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator refuse to yield?

Mr. JONES. I simply wanted to suggest that there are five new members of the committee.

Mr. STONE. Five out of seventeen are new members.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. TOWNSEND] says that 15 minutes only was accorded to many witnesses. I have sat in the Finance Committee and heard hearings. Ordinarily 15 minutes is as much as or more time than is accorded to any single speaker. When you take up the tariff bill for hearings, it rarely happens that any gentleman appearing before the committee comes to discuss a schedule as a whole. He comes to address himself to some particular item in or part of the schedule.

For example, if we had the metals schedule before the committee and hearings were being had, how many men would undertake to discuss the entire metals schedule? You would have some gentlemen talking about lead ores, some about other ores, some about this branch and some about that branch of steel and iron manufactures, and so on. No one would undertake to discuss the schedule as a whole, because no one would likely be familiar with or directly interested in all the detailed items of the schedule.

That being true—and it is true—if you gave every man 15 minutes, and many came to speak on the various items, the hearings would be extended into weeks and even into months. When we had the hearings on the so-called Canadian reciprocity bill I think fully two months of time was absorbed by those hearings. They have been printed. Those books are accessible to every Senator. When the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill was being prepared there were hearings in the House, and hearings before the Republican members of the Finance Committee of the Senate. There are volumes of testimony, so called, and these books filled with statements made by interested parties, and all of recent origin, are all accessible to everybody. Mr. President, the hearings on the Payne-Aldrich bill were only four years ago, or thereabouts. We have had hearings within the present year covering the items of this bill while it was in course of preparation. We have had hearings in the interim between these two dates—volumes of them, as I have said.

On yesterday, in conjunction with another member of the Finance Committee, I had a hearing on the plate-glass schedule in my committee room, and a very interesting hearing it was. The gentlemen who appeared before us, voluntarily and on their own motion, represented opposing interests. One represented the manufacturers of plate glass—among them being the president, secretary, and counsel of a manufacturing establishment—and upon the other a gentleman representing one of the largest plate-glass importing establishments of the country.

These gentlemen sat down at the table in front of us or around us. We held an old-fashioned conversational "seance." We discussed plate glass in all its phases from beginning to end.

Mr. GALLINGER rose.

Mr. STONE. Wait a moment until I finish this statement. We kept this up in a kindly conversational way for several hours. There was little of resentment among the antagonists before us—only now and then a flash, but nothing to disturb the sweet harmony of the occasion. We continued this interchange of views for nearly the whole of yesterday afternoon, just to oblige these gentlemen. All of them seemed anxious to talk.

What did it amount to? All of them had already submitted briefs or made statements before the Ways and Means Committee of the House; that is, before the very men who formulated the bill now pending in the House.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me?

Mr. STONE. In a moment. These gentlemen appeared before us and made statements; they filed their briefs with us as they had with the Ways and Means Committee, and they practically followed the briefs and statements they made before the Ways and Means Committee. In what they said to us in the three or four hours of our conference was but substantially a repetition of what each had said to the members of the Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator permit me?

Mr. STONE. If the Senator will allow me a second, I will; but I wish to finish this statement.

What was said at this hearing yesterday was all taken down. I had a reporter there—Mr. Galt, one of the Senate committee reporters, and a very capable man, as all of you will admit. Every word of the hearing was taken down, and what was said can be compared with the statements made by the same gentlemen, pro and con, before the Ways and Means Committee. You will find there is no substantial difference.

From what I have said, I draw this conclusion: If the Senate should conclude to give hearings to the plate-glass industry, for example, and if we should open the door, as the Senator from Michigan would have us, and let the representatives of all plate-glass manufacturers throughout the country come in and be heard, and then have the importers come in and be heard, and then have the retail interests come in and be heard, and then, if possible, have the consuming interests come in and be heard, it would take us a week or more to cover that one item in that one schedule.

It seems to me, Mr. President, that would be an impossible waste of time if we expect to pass a tariff bill. If this were new there would be something to it, but we have time and again gone over and over this ground. We have had tariff hearings after tariff hearings, too often multiplied, year in and year out. It seems to me that two or three or four months of the time of the Senate should not be occupied by the Finance Committee in listening to a mere repetition of things that have already been said and printed even more than once in public documents.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me now?

Mr. STONE. I will.

Mr. GALLINGER. I beg to suggest, Mr. President, that I can conceive of nothing more charming than for any gentleman to sit on one side of a table and talk to the genial and witty Senator from Missouri on the other side. I have no doubt that that little interview was a very delightful affair. The Senator speaks of it as a "seance." I am gratified to know that a reporter was present, and that the "seance" has been written up in some form.

I should like to ask the Senator if the rest of us are to be given permission to see exactly what was said on that occasion? Is it to be printed?

Mr. STONE. I hope so.

Mr. GALLINGER. It is a new idea to me——

Mr. STONE. I hope it will be printed.

Mr. GALLINGER. I trust the Senator will see that it is printed.

Mr. STONE. I hope it will be printed. The Senator is a member of the Finance Committee.

Mr. GALLINGER. Yes.

Mr. STONE. It will be written out in type, and the Senator will have the benefit of reading it, if he wishes, and of comparing it with the statements made by the same gentlemen before the Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. GALLINGER. But the old-fashioned way was that I, as a member of the Finance Committee, would have been invited to any hearing that was held. It is a new idea to me that two members of the majority of the Finance Committee will hold hearings in a committee room and that the rest of us will have no opportunity to know what was said or done during that hearing.

I do not doubt that such so-called hearings may be profitable to the Senator and to his colleague, whoever he may have been, but really it would have been interesting to me to have witnessed that delightful interchange of views as between the Senator and the gentlemen who appeared representing a very great industry in the United States. Having been denied that pleasure, I repeat that I hope the interview will be printed.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, of course this was not an authorized interview or hearing.

Mr. O'GORMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. STONE. I hope the Senator——

Mr. O'GORMAN. I think we might well go on with the regular order of business.

Mr. STONE. This is the regular order. I hope the Senator will permit me to reply to the Senator from New Hampshire.

The hearing was not by order of the Committee on Finance. Manufacturers come to me frequently, and I suppose they go to other Senators, to confer. It so happened that recently on the same day gentlemen representing opposing interests in the plate-glass business called to see me. They did not come at the same time; they were not together. They did not come to my office together nor come to this conference together. In fact, they never did "get together." I suggested to them that I thought it might be valuable if gentlemen representing opposing sides, who desired to talk to me, should come and talk at the same time; that I would like to hear both sides at once by men speaking face to face.

Mr. PENROSE. Will the Senator from Missouri permit a suggestion?

Mr. STONE. In a moment. We had this friendly conversational conference. There was nothing combative or exciting about it. A competent reporter took down all that was said. I was impressed by the fact that the statements made before us on yesterday were substantially a repetition of what was said by the same people before the Ways and Means Committee a month or six weeks before.

Mr. PENROSE. I have a question to ask which may relieve this situation. If the minority can not get the majority of the Finance Committee to grant hearings, perhaps we can get a promise from the Senator from Missouri to hold hearings daily with a reporter. If the Senator is willing to continue this personal investigation, I have a large number of constituents and visitors every day whom I will be glad to refer to him.

Mr. STONE. No; I decline.

Mr. PENROSE. Is this the last hearing the Senator is to hold or is he to continue these hearings?

Mr. STONE. I think it is the last I will hold. I gave three hours to that one, and if I should give like time to every item of all the three or four thousand items in the bill, I could never hope to finish my task.

Mr. PENROSE. One more question and I am through. I have likewise been the recipient of visits from glass manufacturers, and listened to their tale of woe. I am curious to know whether after the four hours' recital of the hardships under which they will labor when this tariff bill becomes a law the story made any impression on the mind of the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. STONE. Oh, yes; it made a distinct impression in a way.

Mr. PENROSE. Then will the Senator come around to a higher rate of duty on plate glass?

Mr. O'GORMAN. Mr. President, I respectfully insist on the regular order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order is demanded. If there are no further petitions or memorials, reports of committees are in order.

PROPOSED LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM.

Mr. OVERMAN. I report back from the Committee on Rules Senate resolution No. 4, and submit a report thereon, which I ask that the Secretary may read, in order that the Senator from Nevada [Mr. NEWLANDS] may be heard upon the report before action is taken.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Carolina presents a report from the Committee on Rules, which will be read.

The Secretary read the report (No. 5), as follows:

The Committee on Rules, to whom was referred Senate resolution 4, having considered the same, report the resolution back to the Senate with the recommendation that each subhead contained therein be referred for consideration to the proper committee having jurisdiction of the subject matter, to wit:

That section 2, relating to tariff and taxation, be referred to the Committee on Finance.

That section 3, relating to interstate-commerce matters, be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

That section 4, relating to interstate exchange, be referred for consideration to the newly created Committee on Banking and Currency.

That section 5, relating to public lands and natural resources, be referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

That section 6, relating to military expense and auxiliary Navy, be referred for consideration to the Committees on Military and Naval Affairs, respectively.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry. Is this matter in order at this stage of the proceedings?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is the report of a committee. It is in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I did not know that we had reached reports of committees.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, on the 17th day of March I offered in this body a resolution providing for a legislative program covering certain questions relating to the tariff, to interstate commerce, to the conservation of our natural resources, to the regulation of our rivers, and to the diminution of military and naval expenses. The purpose of that resolution, as stated at the time——

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I desire to ask what matter is before the Senate at the present time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. A report of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. McCUMBER. Is it before the Senate with unanimous consent for its present consideration?

Mr. OVERMAN. Naturally the report will take its place on the calendar.

Mr. McCUMBER. I object to its consideration.

Mr. OVERMAN. But the Senator from Nevada wishes to be heard on the report.

Mr. McCUMBER. Some of us have been waiting for a long time to get through with the routine business.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota object to the present consideration of the report?

Mr. McCUMBER. I object to its consideration until after we get through with the morning business.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I will, of course, defer to the convenience of Senators in the interest of morning business.

Mr. McCUMBER. There will be plenty of time to discuss it afterwards.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be placed on the calendar.

ASSISTANT CLERKS OR MESSENGERS TO SENATORS.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I am directed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to which was referred Senate resolution 15, to authorize the employment of an assistant clerk to certain committees, to report it with an amendment in the nature of a substitute, and I submit a report (No. 6) thereon.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution reported by the committee will be read.

The Secretary read the substitute, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Coast and Insular Survey; on Enrolled Bills; on Expenditures in the Agricultural Department; on Expenditures in the Departments of Commerce and Labor; on Standards, Weights, and Measures; on Expenditures in the Department of State; on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game; on National Banks; on Public Health and National Quarantine; on Geological Survey; to Investigate Trespassers upon Indian Lands; on the Mississippi River and its Tributaries; on Pacific Railroads; on Railroads; on Transportation Routes to the Seaboard; on the University of the United States; on Woman Suffrage; to Examine the Several Branches of the Civil Service; on Indian Depredations; on Transportation and Sale of Meat Products; on Engrossed Bills; on the Five Civilized Tribes of Indians; on Additional Accommodations for the Library of Congress; on Private Land Claims; on Disposition of Useless Papers in the Executive Departments; on Revolutionary Claims; on Corporations Organized in the District of Columbia, on conference of the minority of the Senate, be, and they are hereby, authorized to employ one assistant clerk each, at $1,200 per annum, to be paid from "miscellaneous items" of the contingent fund of the Senate until otherwise provided for by law: Provided, That if any of the committees recited above already have three employees the resolution shall not apply to them, except that this proviso shall not apply to the conference of the minority of the Senate.

Mr. OLIVER. Reserving the right to object to present consideration——

Mr. JONES. I am going to ask that the resolution shall go over.

Mr. OLIVER. While I am on the floor I would like to ask the chairman of the committee whether that committee has considered the resolution offered some time ago by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] relating to the allowance of additional help to Senators who are not chairmen of committees.

Mr. WILLIAMS. That resolution is pending before the committee, but no definite action has thus far been taken upon it. We have thought proper at this time to go only so far as the majority went with us when we were the minority. They gave merely extra help to certain minority committees. We have provided in this resolution for every minority committee, doing better by you than you did by us. When we were in the minority, I, for one, and a great many of us, had to get along with two employees. That was all you gave us then. What the committee will do with that resolution finally when it comes to act on it definitely I am not now prepared to say.

Mr. WARREN. May I ask that the resolution be read again?

Mr. WILLIAMS. It is the same resolution the Senator saw this morning.

Mr. WARREN. I saw only a part of it.

Mr. PENROSE. The resolution goes over.

Mr. SMOOT. Before the resolution goes over on objection, I should like to ask the Senator from Mississippi if he will not allow one amendment to be made at this time. Instead of "assistant clerk" I suggest to insert "messenger." I will state the reason why I make the suggestion. It seems to me it would be rather inconsistent to have an assistant clerk at $1,200 and a messenger at $1,440, and it would be just as well to have a messenger at $1,200.

Mr. LODGE. Let the resolution go over and be printed.

Mr. WILLIAMS. So far as I am concerned, I see no objection to the amendment suggested by the Senator from Utah. It does seem to be rather incongruous to be paying a man whom you call an assistant clerk $1,200, while you pay a man whom you call a messenger $1,440. I do not see that it will affect the resolution in the slightest degree. What we are reaching out after is to give the Senators an extra employee, and we have concluded that that employee shall be paid $1,200 a year. It does not make any difference materially whether you call him assistant clerk or messenger. If the Senator from Utah chooses to offer the amendment, I shall not oppose it.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Mississippi whether all the majority committees have a messenger at $1,440.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Most of the majority committees have. The substance of this will be that the minority committees will have a clerk at varying salaries, running up, some of them, as high as $2,500, and then another employee at $1,440, who is now called a messenger, and then they will have this additional employee at $1,200. By the way, I will just say that my own committee, which is going to be made a working committee, has no more help than that, and several of the working committees will have no more help. I see no objection to the amendment to be offered by the Senator from Utah, if he chooses to offer it.

Mr. SMOOT. I offer that amendment.

Mr. WARREN. There are several branches of this matter, and I ask that the resolution may go over.

Mr. SMOOT. I will withdraw the suggestion now and offer the amendment when the resolution comes up in regular order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be placed on the calendar.

Mr. GALLINGER and Mr. JONES. And printed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will be printed.

Mr. JONES. I desire to state that unless the resolution I offered the other day is acted upon by the committee before this matter comes up again, I shall expect to offer that resolution as an amendment, but making the amount $1,200 instead of $1,440.

Mr. WILLIAMS. This matter has been acted upon by the committee. It is before the Senate on a favorable report from the committee.

Mr. JONES. I offered the resolution the other day, and, in conformity to the resolution that the Senator introduced, I proposed that assistant clerks of certain Senators should be paid $1,440. I would be perfectly willing to amend my resolution by making the amount $1,200. So if that resolution should not be acted upon by the committee before this matter comes up——

Mr. WILLIAMS. What is the Senator's resolution?

Mr. JONES. It proposes to give to each member of the minority not the chairman of a committee an extra employee.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I hope the Senator from Washington will not attempt to complicate this matter with that. That will bring us into a field of discussion. The other side did not give each member of the minority an extra employee when you were in the majority, and I do not know but that there would be objection to it upon this side. All that you did was to give the chairmen of the minority committees three men. To some of them you did not even give three men. I hope that the matter will be permitted to be considered by the committee upon its own merits and be brought up as a separate proposition and not be complicated with this question.

Mr. JONES. I simply desire to suggest——

Mr. WILLIAMS. I shall feel compelled to resist the amendment.

Mr. McCUMBER. I ask that the resolution may go over.

Mr. JONES. I had the floor, I understood.

Mr. McCUMBER. I do not understand that anyone has the floor against an objection.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The Senator from Washington had the floor, and I interrupted him with his permission.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Washington has the floor.

Mr. JONES. I merely want to suggest to the Senator from Mississippi that I think the two propositions are really germane the one to the other, because every Senator must concede that the fact that a Senator is chairman of a committee does not bring him any more work and does not make him any more work at all. When we were in the majority we may not have allowed to Senators the additional help, but I do not know whether you asked for more help. I wish to say that I have always been in favor of allowing a Senator what he actually needed to do the necessary business. I think that is what we ought to have. The Senator says that they have gone further already in this matter than we went. I am simply asking them to go a little further and give us what I think is absolutely necessary. I do not want any more help than is necessary to do the official work that comes to us, but I do think we ought to have this help. I did not want to have the matter now brought before the Senate considered by it until there would be an opportunity to present this other proposition to the committee.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator will pardon one more interruption, he says he simply wants each Senator to have the aid that is necessary to do his work. Hitherto Senators have managed to do their work, and tolerably well, I take it—I manage to do mine, I know—under a less generous dispensation of aid than this gives them, and I think we had better accept this when it comes up. It is not now under discussion, however.

Mr. JONES. I simply want to suggest, Mr. President——

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, the order of the introduction of bills has not been reached?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It has not yet been reached.

Mr. PENROSE. I have some bills that I should like to have an opportunity to introduce when that order is reached.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, some days ago I gave notice of my intention to submit some remarks to the Senate to-day, but I am beginning to think that there is a conspiracy on foot to prevent me from submitting those remarks. I feel constrained, under the circumstances, in justice to myself, to call for the regular order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Reports of committees are still in order.

REPORT OF DAUGHTERS OF AMERICAN REVOLUTION (S. DOC. NO. 9).

Mr. FLETCHER, from the Committee on Printing, to which the subject was referred, reported the following resolution, submitted a report (No. 7) thereon, and it was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to (S. Res. 51):

Resolved, That the Annual Report of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution for the year ended October 11, 1912, be printed, with the accompanying illustrations, as a Senate document, together with the letter from the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution transmitting said report in accordance with the provisions of an act to incorporate the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, approved February 20, 1896.

CHARLES B. HAGADORN.

Mr. STONE, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the bill (S. 721) authorizing the State Department to deliver to Charles B. Hagadorn a gift from the Government of Mexico, submitted an adverse report (No. 8) thereon, which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

SPURIOUS CURRENCY—CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. JONES. A few days ago I introduced a bill (S. 954) forbidding the use of spurious currency, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Finance. I move that the committee be discharged from its further consideration and that it be referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

The motion was agreed to.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED.

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. PENROSE:

A bill (S. 1099) granting an annuity of $100 to officers and enlisted men of the United States Army, Navy, and Marine Corps who have been awarded medals of honor for gallantry in action and other soldier-like qualities under acts of Congress, and authorizing the President of the United States to make rules and regulations for carrying the act into effect;

A bill (S. 1100) granting an annuity equivalent to $50 per month to officers and enlisted men of the United States Army, Navy, and Marine Corps who have attained the age of 65 years and have been, or may hereafter be, awarded medals of honor for gallantry and heroism involving great personal peril, and authorizing the President of the United States to make rules and regulations for carrying the act into effect; and

A bill (S. 1101) for the relief of the survivors of McLean's Pennsylvania Regiment; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 1102) for the relief of George L. Thomas;

A bill (S. 1103) for the relief of Louisa Weaver; and

A bill (S. 1104) for the relief of Cecelia Barr; to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 1105) granting an increase of pension to Frank P. Haas (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 1106) granting a pension to Eliza Wilson;

A bill (S. 1107) granting a pension to Edward M. Stevens;

A bill (S. 1108) granting an increase of pension to William Spotts;

A bill (S. 1109) granting a pension to Frederick Wagner (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 1110) providing for the retirement of noncommissioned officers, petty officers, and enlisted men of the United States Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, and for the efficiency of the enlisted personnel;

A bill (S. 1111) granting a pension to Minerva H. Perry (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 1112) granting an increase of pension to Albert Schroeder;

A bill (S. 1113) to pension widows and minor children of officers or enlisted men who served in the War with Spain or Philippine insurrection;

A bill (S. 1114) granting a pension to James A. Stine;

A bill (S. 1115) granting a pension to Margaret Montgomery;

A bill (S. 1116) granting an increase of pension to Delight R. Allen (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 1117) granting an increase of pension to James M. P. Brookens;

A bill (S. 1118) granting a pension to Lucy M. Cooke;

A bill (S. 1119) granting an increase of pension to Margaret Boyd;

A bill (S. 1120) granting a pension to Charles L. Greene;

A bill (S. 1121) granting a pension to Ida E. Carter; and

A bill (S. 1122) granting a pension to Fannie M. Carey; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SMITH of Maryland:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 21) proposing an amendment to the Constitution providing that the President shall hold office for one term of six years and that the President and Vice President shall be elected by direct vote of the people; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

DR. FRIEDRICH FRANZ FRIEDMANN.

Mr. HUGHES. I introduce a bill, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, that has hardly ever been done in the Senate, and I think I shall have to object.

Mr. HUGHES. I should like to have the bill read. I understand, of course, that objection can be made to its consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be read by title.

The bill (S. 1222) authorizing and directing the board of medical supervisors of the District of Columbia to issue to Friedrich Franz Friedmann, without examination, a license to practice medicine and surgery in the District of Columbia, was read twice by its title.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I will have to object to unanimous consent being given to have the bill acted upon at this time. There are pretty serious questions involved in it. I ask that it be referred to the appropriate committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection being made, the bill will be referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, did I understand the Senator from New Hampshire to object?

Mr. GALLINGER. I will have to object to the present consideration of the bill. I should like to look into it and consult some of the medical men of the District concerning it. It is a serious matter. It proposes to suspend existing law.

Mr. HUGHES. The whole matter is serious. The disease which this doctor is engaged in fighting is an extremely serious matter.

Mr. GALLINGER. Yes.

Mr. HUGHES. My object in laying the bill before the Senate was to see if we could not get away from objections raised by certain members of the medical fraternity and from the attitude of distrust and suspicion which seems to characterize the gentlemen who are representing the Government in their dealings with this scientist. I have been the recipient of countless letters, telegrams, telephonic communications, and personal requests from men who are standing on the brink of the grave who feel that perhaps their lives may be saved if they are permitted to take this treatment. Dr. Friedmann himself seems to be under the impression that he is absolutely under the control of the Federal service in this matter, and he thinks he is operating under the same sort of governmental supervision that he would be compelled to operate under in Germany. At his request I have introduced the bill. I regret very much that the Senator from New Hampshire thinks it necessary that the consideration of this matter should be delayed, when his single objection perhaps will mean the loss of the lives of men, women, and children who are eager and anxious to take all the risks, real or fancied, in connection with this treatment.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, will the Senator permit a question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. HUGHES. I do.

Mr. STONE. I should like to ask the Senator from New Jersey——

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I again call for the regular order, since objection is made to the present consideration of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection being made, the bill will be referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have read a letter which I have received bearing upon the subject matter of the bill I just introduced.

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, I object to the reading of a letter on this subject. I do not want to pronounce this man a faker, but I think the Senate is going out of its way to give him advertisement. He may be a quack, for all I know. I have direct information that the reputable physicians of the country look with considerable doubt upon his maneuvers, and that reputable medical journals criticize the Congress of the United States for the semiofficial recognition which they have already given him. I was surprised and shocked when I saw that a Senate document had been printed on his alleged cure. Were it not that the incident was past and closed, I had intended calling the attention of the Senate to the gross impropriety of recognizing a questionable "cure" by an official advertisement of that character. This is not an occasion for maudlin sentiment; it is a practical proposition whether the lives of thousands of people may not be threatened by a "cure" which is purely based on quackery and fraud.

Mr. STONE. I should like to ask the Senator from New Jersey if Dr. Friedmann intends to charge $25 for each treatment?

Mr. HUGHES. I have absolutely no information on that subject.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I ask for the regular order.

Mr. HUGHES. I did not presume to ask Dr. Friedmann about that. I asked him if he would practice in the District of Columbia if given permission, and he said he would.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order is demanded. If there be no further bills and joint resolutions, concurrent and other resolutions are in order.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $2,500 for the purchase of a library for the Federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

Mr. KENYON submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $200,000 due to the estates of deceased colored soldiers, sailors, and marines of the Civil War and which was in the hands of the Commissioner of the Freemen's Bureau and have been repaid into the Treasury of the United States, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MYERS submitted an amendment proposing to increase the appropriation for support and civilization of the Indians at Fort Belknap Agency, Mont., including pay of employees, from $20,000 to $25,000, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

HEARINGS BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Mr. THOMAS. I offer the resolution which I send to the desk, and, if it is in order, I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Colorado submits a resolution and asks unanimous consent for its immediate consideration. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 55), as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Woman Suffrage, or any subcommittee thereof, be, and hereby is, authorized to send for persons and papers and to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee, and to have the same printed for its use, the expenses thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and that the said committee or any subcommittee thereof may sit during the sessions of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Colorado for the immediate consideration of the resolution?

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I think the resolution under the law has to go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

ESTATE OF WILLIAM E. PRESSEY.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 56), which was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to pay out of the contingent fund of the Senate to the executor of the estate of William E. Pressey, late messenger at the card door of the Senate, a sum equal to six months' salary at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered as including funeral expenses and all other allowances.

AGRICULTURAL CREDIT AND LIVE-STOCK INSURANCE.

Mr. FLETCHER submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 52), which was read and, with the accompanying document, referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved, That the report to the British Board of Agriculture and Fisheries of an inquiry into agricultural credit and agricultural cooperation in Germany, with some notes on German live-stock insurance, by J. R. Cahill, which was presented to both Houses of Parliament of Great Britain, be printed as a Senate document, together with the accompanying illustrations and letter.

ASSISTANT CLERK TO COMMITTEE ON INTEROCEANIC CANALS.

Mr. O'GORMAN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 57), which was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Interoceanic Canals is hereby authorized to employ one assistant clerk, at $1,800 per annum, to be paid from "miscellaneous items" of the contingent fund of the Senate until otherwise provided for by law.

AVENUE OF THE PRESIDENTS.

Mr. WILLIAMS submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 53), which was read and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia:

Resolved, That the Committee on the District of Columbia be, and hereby is, empowered to investigate and report by what authority of law and under whose direction the name of Sixteenth Street was changed to Avenue of the Presidents.

HEARINGS BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON TERRITORIES.

Mr. PITTMAN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 54), which was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Territories, or any subcommittee thereof, be authorized during the Sixty-third Congress to send for persons and papers and to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee and to have the same printed for its use, the expenses thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and that the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during the sessions of the Senate.

AMENDMENT OF ANTITRUST ACT.

Mr. THOMAS. I desire to give notice that on Monday next, at the close of the routine morning business, I shall address the Senate upon the bill (S. 112) to restore section 1 of the act of Congress of July 2, 1890, chapter 647, Twenty-sixth Statutes at Large, to its original form as enacted, by striking out the words "unreasonable or undue," inserted therein by a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States.

CONFERENCE REPORTS ON TARIFF MEASURES.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I offer the resolution attached to the notice I gave on Tuesday last and ask that it be referred to the Committee on Rules. I had intended to submit some observations with it; but in view of the great delay which the Senator from California has suffered, I will not do so, but ask its immediate reference to the committee.

The resolution (S. Res. 43) was referred to the Committee on Rules, and is as follows:

Resolved, That there shall be added as one of the standing rules of the Senate the following, to wit:

"When the report of a conference committee upon the disagreeing votes of the two Houses upon a bill proposing to change duties upon imports from a foreign country into the United States is under consideration by the Senate there shall be, upon the request of any Senator, a separate vote on any point or item of disagreement concerning which there is a recommendation that the Senate recede in whole or in part."

PROPOSED LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, it was my desire to continue the discussion of the report of the Committee on Rules regarding a legislative program. I understand that the Senator from California [Mr. WORKS] has given notice that he will address the Senate to-day. I will ask the Senator from California whether it would meet his convenience if I should conclude my remarks regarding the report of the Committee on Rules now or defer them until after his remarks?

Mr. WORKS. I should be greatly obliged to the Senator from Nevada if he would defer until I have submitted some remarks of which I gave notice.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Then, Mr. President, at the conclusion of the remarks of the Senator from California I shall take up the discussion of the report of the Committee on Rules on a proposed legislative program.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Nevada whether he intends to ask any action upon that report to-day. I do this because a number of Senators might leave the Chamber, thinking that there would be no other business attended to.

Mr. NEWLANDS. I do not know whether I shall ask action or not. The probability is that I shall.

Mr. SMOOT. Then, Mr. President, if action is going to be asked upon this matter, I object to it, because I want it to go to the calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There being objection, the report goes to the calendar.

Mr. SMOOT. I shall object to the consideration of the report, and let it go to the calendar, if the Senator is going to ask for action upon it to-day. I have no desire to stop the Senator from speaking upon it, but I certainly do not want any action taken upon it to-day.

Mr. NEWLANDS. Mr. President, I will defer taking up this matter until the conclusion of the remarks of the Senator from California. Meanwhile I shall consider as to my course of action regarding it.

Mr. NEWLANDS subsequently said: I desire to give notice that on Monday next, during the morning hour, I shall address the Senate on the resolution (S. Res. 4) providing for a legislative program during the extra session.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL MONDAY.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, I move that when the Senate adjourns to-day it shall be until Monday next at 12 o'clock meridian.

The motion was agreed to.

PUBLICATION OF CRIMES AND ACCIDENTS.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I ask that Senate bill No. 496 be read and laid before the Senate for discussion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read the bill (S. 496) making it unlawful to publish details of crimes and accidents in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, introduced by Mr. WORKS April 8, 1913, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That it shall be unlawful for any person, corporation, or association to print or publish in any newspaper or other publication in the District of Columbia an account of any murder, or alleged murder, or any other actual or alleged crime, suicide, or other accident, injury, or tragedy of any kind wherever the same may have been committed or happened, or alleged to have been committed or happened, other than a mere statement of the fact that such a crime, tragedy, or accident has happened or is alleged to have happened, without details or comments of any kind with respect to such crime, accident, or tragedy, or in respect of, or about, any person connected with or related to or alleged to be or to have been connected with or related to the same.

SEC. 2. That any person, corporation, or association who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not less than $500 nor more than $5,000, to which may be added imprisonment in the District Jail or Workhouse for not exceeding one year.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, during the first session of the last Congress I introduced a bill, Senate No. 3221, making it unlawful to publish in the District of Columbia details of crimes, accidents, and tragedies. The bill was not pressed by me for consideration by the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which it was referred, and was not acted upon. I have again introduced it at this session.

That something should be done to elevate the standard of journalism in this respect in this country, not only in the public interest but in the interest of the great profession of journalism itself, must be obvious to all observant and discriminating people. I have introduced this bill as one means of attracting public attention to the evils growing out of the indiscriminate publication of information that is detrimental to the morals of the people, distracting and fear inspiring in its tendencies, degrading to the journalistic profession, and in every way poisonous and deleterious in its effects both upon publishers and readers of it. This is one phase of the subject to which I desire to attract the attention of the Senate and the country. Another phase of newspaper work that should challenge attention, by the mere mention of it, is the well-known want of reliability of journalistic news and information.

What I am about to say is not inspired by any sense of ill will toward newspapers or their reporters or publishers. I have no personal grievances against either. I have had my share of misrepresentation and abuse from newspapers, but I am glad to say that it has left in my mind no sense of malice, hatred, or desire to reciprocate in kind. I take it that if a newspaper misrepresents or unjustly assails me it can do me no harm, and that if it tells the truth about me I have no reason to complain. So I am not at war with any publication. What I have to say is not in any sense directed at individuals. It is intended to assail a custom that has grown up of publishing objectionable matter in newspapers and other publications and to call for relief from conditions resulting from such journalism. In this effort I should have the support of all high-minded newspaper men who have right ideals of the duty they owe to themselves and their country. Indeed, I know there are newspaper men who are doing a much greater work for the advancement and elevation of their profession in this respect than I can do by anything I may say here to-day—much more than can be done by any law or laws that can be enacted by State or Nation in the endeavor to suppress objectionable publications. It is to that higher class of journalists that we must look for the ultimate remedy for these evils.

The newspaper is a great and powerful influence in a free country like ours, where the press is free and untrammeled. That influence may work for good or evil. The publisher of a newspaper takes upon himself responsibilities of the highest order. He may make his publication an influence and support for the very best in private and public life. It finds its way into the homes of the people and may be an inspiration and uplift that can do more than almost any other force to purify thought, elevate manhood and womanhood, direct the steps of the young to a higher standard of purity and righteousness, elevate citizenship, inspire young and old to a better understanding of the obligations of citizenship in a free Republic like ours, and a higher and more unselfish patriotism. Such should be the mission of every publication.

That some of our newspaper men are not living up to this high ideal of true journalism none, I believe, will be more ready to admit than journalists themselves, and none, I am very sure, would be better pleased than they to remedy the evils that have resulted from a departure from the higher standard.

Mr. President, I noticed with some interest the comments that were made by the newspapers upon the bill introduced by me. Most of them, I think, were inclined to treat it lightly. Some of them were disposed to treat it as a joke while kindly commiserating its author. Still others went beyond the mere terms of the bill and treated seriously the broad questions to which it at least attracted attention.

I do not wonder that the bill should have excited the ridicule of the man who looked upon it as nothing more than an attempt to check, by law, the publication of such objectionable matter as is mentioned in it. No one realizes more fully than I do that without the help of the newspaper workers themselves such legislation as this bill proposes will be futile as a means of accomplishing the beneficial results its author has in mind. Newspapers are published for profit. They will print what their readers want and will pay for. With altogether too many of them it is a purely commercial question. So regarded, it is only a question whether a paper which publishes such matter as this bill proposes to prohibit is a better seller and will secure a wider circulation and more advertisements than one that publishes only legitimate news.

Whether people do want this kind of news or not is one of the questions to be considered, looking at journalism as nothing higher than a means of making money. Newspaper men maintain that they furnish this kind of news because the people want it and will have it, and therefore it is the only way of maintaining their publications on a paying basis. If this is true, it is certainly a melancholy fact. If it is untrue, it is a grave charge to make against the American people. Undoubtedly it is true of some people. But I am convinced that the masses of the people who support the newspapers would prefer to have such news omitted and many people do not read the newspapers and exclude them from their homes because of this objectionable matter.

But, assuming that the greater number of people really want their papers to publish such stuff, who is responsible for this depraved appetite for deleterious and hurtful news? The men who publish the newspapers should seriously ask themselves that question and act accordingly. I know, Mr. President, that all these things are matters of dispute. They may well be so, because neither the one assertion nor the other respecting them is susceptible of proof. They are almost entirely matters of speculation.

In the consideration of this question we will have to distinguish between the legal question of privilege or the liability to individuals for false publications and that of the publication of matter which is objectionable because of its tendency to poison the minds of the public, whether true or false, or generally deleterious news unfit or injurious in its character. In order that I may be better understood, let me point out some of the publications that should be suppressed by law. Chief of these is the publication of the details of crime. If a crime is committed anywhere in the country, it is published with greater or less particularity and detail in every town where a newspaper is printed. The more horrible and atrocious the crime the greater the space given to it and the more specific and minute the details that are given. This so-called news, that should on every account be suppressed, is spread before the readers of the newspapers all over the country with flaunting and alluring headlines to attract attention. It is read by millions of people, young and old alike. But, unfortunately, it does not stop there. The lives of the participants in the crime, both the perpetrator of it and his victim, are laid bare to the world. It is not confined, either, to the immediate parties concerned, but their innocent and stricken friends and relatives are hunted down, and the alleged history of their lives, more often than not false and distorted, is given out to the world. This seems to be a particularly attractive field for the average newspaper correspondent if anyone remotely connected with the unfortunate affair happens to be a man or woman of prominence and well known to the public. It gives spice and interest to a "story" that should never be told and advertises the newspaper as one of great enterprise. The sensational newspaper, of which there are altogether too many, "features" this kind of news and congratulates itself on the opportunity that a dreadful crime or fearful accident gives it to exploit its unparalleled facilities for gathering the news and its unequaled enterprise in furnishing it to its readers. It boasts that it spares no expense in its efforts to supply the public with what it assumes the people want.

A few instances will suffice to show the extent to which this effort to supply the morbid and criminal classes with news that panders to the taste for the horrible and immoral and makes more criminals and causes more crimes than almost any other influence has been carried.

We need not go back very far or very far away from the Capital of the Nation to find some of the most appalling instances of this kind of journalism. Something like a year ago a most atrocious and cruel murder was committed in the near-by State of Virginia. A young woman, married and belonging to a highly respectable family, was brutally murdered. Her young husband, who was out driving with her at the time she was shot, and who likewise was of good family, was soon suspected of the crime, was arrested, tried, and executed for the murder of his young wife. From the time the crime was committed until it was expiated by the life of its perpetrator, the news of the crime in all its details, the lives of the victim and her slayer, and those of their innocent and suffering relatives, near and distant, were published day after day for weeks. The papers, or most of them, were full of it. One would think that the bare statement of the facts would have been enough, but they were amplified and distorted, and alleged facts fabricated and sent out as the truth about it. The pictures of everybody concerned that could be obtained were printed over and over again. The infamy of the thing was enhanced in a way that should have aroused the indignation of all decent people. There was a woman in the case who had, it was claimed, broken up the home of this young couple and brought one to a tragic and the other to a felon's death. The details of this woman's life and her relations with the murderer were published and amplified upon and distorted. And to crown it all, the photographs of the wife, the mistress, and the husband and murderer were published together, the man appearing between the two. Could one conceive of a more brutal and inexcusable piece of so-called journalism than this? Think what it must have meant to the innocent and agonized parents of both the husband and the wife! I can not conceive of anything more fiendish and inhuman than this in the way of newspaper printing.

Mr. President, this is only a very imperfect description of the extent to which some newspapers went in this one instance. It does not half picture the extent to which the published news and fiction relating to it went, or the enormity of the offense against innocent people to whom the crime had brought sorrow and shame, or the injury that was done by poisoning the minds of the readers of these papers with their offensive and horrible recitals of a brutal crime and the immorality that preceded and brought it about.

This is only one out of thousands of like cases. It has been specifically mentioned here because of the flagrancy of the publications relating to it and because it took place so recently that it is fresh in the minds of newspaper readers. The crime was a most distressing one even to think about. The publication of the revolting details of all of the circumstances connected with it, paraded before the readers of such newspapers as made these publications, was most shocking.

The mere mention that such a crime had been committed was enough. To go further was an offense against the common rules of decency. It was calculated to arouse the worst passions of men. The reading of it could do no possible good. It was wholly inexcusable and revolting, looking at it from any point of view. If there is any real desire of any of the readers of the newspapers of this country to read such deleterious and offensive stuff, it should be one of the highest duties of a journalist not to feed any such morbid sense, but to correct it and suppress any such news as detrimental to health and morals and unfit to be published or read. No greater wrong can be done by a great newspaper than to pander to such an appetite and thus create and continue a demand for such news.

Mr. President, however serious such an offense may be as affecting the individual reader, it is even more serious as affecting the newspaper men who gather and publish such news. They live constantly in an atmosphere of crime and immorality. Their purpose is to trace down and send out to their fellow men the details of misconduct of every kind. They live in it, think about it, and give it out to others in all its horrible forms. Their minds are filled with thoughts of immorality, crime, and human tragedies, misfortunes, and misery. The newspaper reporter must dive into this sea of crime and corruption and dress it in such form as to attract the readers of the paper. To make it attractive and readable he adds to the horrors of it, pads it with false and more attractive matter to render it more sensational. He haunts the homes of everybody connected with the crime, shadows them day after day, and publishes facts and falsehoods about them in order to embellish his "story" and make it still more attractive. The kodak man is his aid and abettor. What is lacking in the written story is made still more graphic and sensational by pictures of everybody connected with the crime. Reporters and kodak men thrust themselves into the privacy of the home, snap the unwary unawares, write up imaginary stories about people concerned or connected, directly or indirectly, with the crime—the innocent, suffering, and sorrowing along with the guilty. They seem to lose all sense of decency or of respect for the rights of others in their eager quest for what should be unreadable news and the desire to furnish copy for a newspaper that seems to have lost all sense of decency and propriety in its dealings with the affairs of other people, often of the most sacred kind.

Mr. President, what a life this is for any man to lead. It makes one shudder to think about it. And most of the men who are instrumental in this wholesale poisoning of the minds of our people are young men, often mere boys. It is appalling to think of such a school of vice, falsehood, and violation of the sacred rights of others. It can not but be degrading in the utmost degree. No man can live in such an atmosphere and not suffer from its poisonous impurities. He not only suffers from it himself, but he is constantly instilling it into the minds of others.

Mr. President, I have referred to one case merely as an illustration of the general course of journals that deal with such news. The papers are full of such matter day after day. Some of them feature it and make it chief among all others. Some publish the fact that a crime has been committed without embellishment or exaggeration. Such a course is to be highly commended. There are many just and high-minded journalists in this country who deprecate sensational and objectionable news as earnestly and as strongly as I do. They would rejoice to see a complete reform in this respect. To such as these the bill I have introduced would be welcome if it could be enforced. Its enforcement would depend largely upon the attitude of the newspapers toward legislation of this kind. That many journals deplore these methods and such news is evident from the sentiments they have expressed. Here is an editorial on the subject from one of the leading newspapers on the Pacific coast:

BARRED IN NEW YORK.

Moved by a proper regard for public decency and morality, the commissioner of licenses in New York City has notified the managers of the 600 or more moving-picture shows in that town that the Henry Clay Beattie case must not be made the subject of any of their exhibitions.

The prohibition was made complete. "No moving pictures or other views representing scenes from the trial of Henry Clay Beattie, jr., for the murder of his wife, or in any way connected with the case," are to be exhibited under penalty of the revocation of the license of the place in which they are shown. The action of the license commissioner was most commendable. He has made a wise use of the authority with which he is vested.

Morally speaking, the publication of all the wretched details of that crime is as indefensible as the exhibition of moving pictures purporting to portray them. Let offenders present such specious excuses as they will, setting forth the obligation that rest upon them to "print the news"—they are governed by greed, and to coin a profit do not hesitate to offend against decency. They pander to depraved tastes and instincts, being moved by their own cupidity and their pocket revenues, that are won at the cost of morality.

Inasmuch as there will always be publishers whose itch for gain and contempt for decency, left unrestricted, would lead them to pollute the public mind by magnifying and exploiting every story of hate and murder, lust and passion, it is probable that laws eventually must be enacted for the protection of the community. Offenders will loudly protest against an invasion of the freedom of the press, but freedom was never a warrant for license. Newspapers that print lottery advertisements are excluded from the mails, as are publications containing obscene pictures, but no one pretends that the freedom of the press has sustained any injury therefrom.

Similarly newspapers that convert themselves into gazettes of crime, that seize with eager haste on every salacious happening and exploit it to its last sensational detail, magnifying and emphasizing every disgusting obscenity and degenerate phase of abandoned life, should be debarred from the mails. Were they so debarred, the freedom of the press would suffer the least injury and the cause of morality would be immeasurably advantaged.

So far, Mr. President, I have spoken only of the publication of the details of crimes; but the manner of treating accidents is almost as bad. It is quite as bad in many if not most respects. Take the late disaster to the steamship Titanic as an example. It was an accident that cost many lives and brought sorrow to many homes in this country and beyond the sea. Before it was possible for anyone not on the ship to know anything more than the simple but appalling fact that the ship had been lost the papers throughout the whole country were full of stories of the most sensational character about it—stories that were without foundation and wholly false. The truth of these stories, if they had, in fact, been true, could not have been known to the newspapers that gave them out. They were a horrible injustice and cruelty to the agonized friends and relatives who were waiting anxiously to know the truth, besides the false impressions made upon the minds of others that could never be erased. There could have been no object in all this other than to make money. Extras were put out almost hourly in all of the large cities containing these false and misleading stories that no doubt thousands of people who still have some faith in the correctness of news given out by the papers are still believing, some of them wholly unjust as well as misleading. But even this spurious matter, published as mere conjecture and speculation and without any knowledge of its truth, was not the worst. After the facts began to be known, and when some degree of accuracy was attainable, the unwarranted and wholly false stories manufactured for sensational effect continued to be published. One of the passengers on the ill-fated ship, who lived for some time after the disaster, declared long after all the stories about it had been published that most of them were false. These never have been and never will be corrected.

The extent to which many of the newspapers of the country are devoted to the publication of such hurtful stories as these, which can not justly be called news, is appalling to think about. In one issue of one of the papers published in this city about the time this bill was introduced by me appeared no less than 54 separate accounts of murders, suicides, accidents, and other tragedies happening all over the country. Most of them were occurrences in which none of the readers of this particular journal could have any personal interest. Their publication could be justified or excused only on the ground that its readers want that kind of news. I give here the headlines appearing in this issue of the paper relating to each—not all the headlines, but only the first one or two in each case. In many cases there were others of a most startling kind, and the body of the articles published contained, in some instances, the most objectionable details of these occurrences. The principal headlines in the several cases are as follows:

Washington woman injured—Lies in hospital 36 hours before she is identified.
Shoots wife as burglar—Man probably fatally wounds mate, who closed window.
Shot down in own home—William Stewart killed by his guest during quarrel, police say.
Sees her sister shot—Wife is then felled with gun and husband flees—Posse on trail of fugitive—New York woman probably fatally wounded in family quarrel near Pocomoke City, Md.—Alleged assailant, brother of railway superintendent, may not be taken alive.
Slays brother with stone—Aged men fight to finish, ending 30-year feud.
Body of Merritt arrives—Battleship North Carolina brings victim of marine explosion.
Find loot in women's room—Police charge wholesale shoplifting in 12 different towns.
Offers to sell his tongue—Man in jail would aid girl hurt in auto crash.
Two children save her—Girl of 9 and boy of 10 rescue woman from drowning.
Sea victims' diary found—Messages carved on a hatch cover tell of agonies of castaways—Flotsam reports deaths of shipwrecked men and bears note of farewell to loved ones.
Tugboat is sunk by liner—Collision in East River cuts small craft in two.
Battle in Liverpool—Strikers, soldiers, and police fight for three hours—Succeed in moving supplies.
Falls from yacht; drowns—Arthur W. Yates strikes head on side of boat, then sinks.
Dig to save three in mine—Rescuers work frantically for freedom of comrades—Urged by faint tappings.
Knocks woman senseless—Mrs. C. Toney awakes to find burglar at bedside—Blow from negro follows—Robbed of $37 she had under pillow—Whole police force after him.
Jealous; slays girl—W. H. Sabens kills woman who was to marry another—Shoots at self, but misses—Ada Haynes, 22 years old, had feared former sweetheart, her friends say, ever since she decided to wed New York man—Murderer is caught in Pennsylvania Avenue.
At 9 she is expert thief—Little dimpled girl picks 13 pockets in space of 2 hours.
Woman takes carbolic acid—Mrs. E. M. Frederer removed to hospital, and will recover, doctors say.
Waitress, 17, is missing—Sister of Miss Lucy Dillon asks police to try and find her.
Chase over three States ends—Ex-cashier charged with fraud is captured after week.

Mrs. Owen confident—Alleged kidnaper of Harris girl protests innocence.
Five cable workers perish—Boat is capsized in Frazee River by swift current.
Posse gives up man hunt—Day's hunt is fruitless—Victim of shooting near death.
Three slashed with razor—Two men may die of wounds inflicted during quarrel with merchant.
New scalp a failure—Miss Houghton must return to Emergency Hospital.
Man lost in Atlantic City—Claims to be brother of millionaire—Stays with police.
Hog tears his hand—Enraged animal severely injures man carrying it—Unusual case, doctors say.
Seeks daughter and man—Father asks police to find Florence Cochrane and I. Leatherwood.
Beattie's trial near—Jury likely to be selected by end of this week—Inquiry to begin to-morrow.
Capt. Howard shoots self—Grandson of Revolutionary general not expected to live—Baltimore resident, a Confederate veteran, suffered from nervousness.
Shoots mother who rewed—Boy's bullets also wound a little Philadelphia girl.
Three men bitten by dog—Patrolmen kill animal after an exciting chase.
Bride of three days dead—Wife of Roanoke farmer stricken with fatal malady.
Run down by an auto.
Her tale reveals murder—Woman charges that companion was slain in mountains.
Launch sinks; 18 in peril—Officers and seamen of battleships have narrow escape.
Wife keeps hubby's date—With infant in one arm, she pummels rival at ferryhouse.
Shot dead in motor boat—Mysterious killing may have been caused by stray bullet.
Human chain saves three—Exhausted men rescued at Atlantic City by fellow bathers.
Burglars at Narragansett—J. W. Converse, of Philadelphia, robbed of $700 while dining.
Lassos autos in street—Man tries out stage act, but is captured and tried.
Says captive shot keeper—Anonymous letter informs woman husband kidnaped—Missing man is alleged to have gone insane, killed member of band, and escaped.
Brother's blood fails to save him.
Boasts of jail escape—Policeman overhears William Douglas and rearrests him—"I'd like to see any officer get me again," his last words while free.
His head in the mail—Midhat Pasha slain, and letter says at late Sultan's order.
Explain loss of memory—Malady due, London doctors say, to strain of modern life.
Shields slayer as he dies—Abbe Guibault shot down in his home in France—Mystery surrounds murder which the victim could but would not explain—Neighbor's gun used.
Mystery in beauty's death—Inquiry may be made concerning Mlle. Lanteime's drowning.
Girl tries to bury herself—Broken hearted because lover rejected her after tramping 200 miles.
Dead from explosion of engine boiler.

Think of such a collection of crimes, immoralities, scandals, and terrible accidents being served up to its readers by a newspaper in one of its issues. And this issue was by no means an exceptional one of this or other newspapers, some of them regarded as among the leading journals of the country. People who read the newspapers are served with such shocking and degrading matter in every issue of the paper that comes daily into their homes. In some there are more and some less than the number given above, but the one I have taken as an example presents a fair average of impure and otherwise objectionable news items of the metropolitan journal of the time.

Mr. President, time will not permit me to go into the details of such offenses of the newspapers against the rules of decency and propriety. It is unnecessary. They are known to every newspaper reader. They are the subject of very general unfavorable comment on the part of respectable people, who feel that they must read the papers in order to keep up with the times. Such readers do not read these objectionable articles, but in trying to sort out the legitimate news they can not escape the glaring and offensive headlines that precede such matter, and it is next to impossible to keep them from the younger members of the family who do not realize, as they do, the dangerous and poisonous nature of such news.

The feeling against such publications was strongly expressed in a letter of December 13, 1908, addressed to the newspapers of New York City, signed by men of standing and prominence, in which it was said:

The aim of securing newspapers for our homes which shall at all times be free from lewd or suggestive articles detrimental to morals, offensive to decency, and damaging to self-respect is one which all admit to be desirable. Some might perhaps say that it is possible to enjoy it at all times by simply buying only good newspapers. But, unfortunately, there come periods when overweening public interest and unworthy public curiosity provoke the editors of even some of the best of our journals to overstep the mark and to lay before us and the modest home circle, including the tender children of the schools, libidinous details of criminality which are revolting even to men charged with the punishment of those who prey upon society. We attempt to escape it and close our door to it for a short period, only to find that to keep in touch with our usual social or business needs we must continue our patronage of a journal which we are ashamed to bring home. Then our school children or others must have the objectionable articles and detestable headlines thrust upon their sight in the public conveyances or other places. Each editor escapes censure by claiming that all his brother editors will surely present the same matter, and he can not be exceptional.

The community—all communities—were shocked by the long-continued revelations of the Thaw case, set forth in bold type. We are now promised another of similar character by reason of the approach of certain sensational murder trials, during the course of which, as we have been credibly informed, material more interesting to the prurient mind, and consequently more dangerous to the home and more disgusting to the self-respecting man, is about to be presented in court.

It is believed by good authorities that a respectful protest presented early enough to the press by men of serious character, representing heavy responsibilities in the care of their own children or children confided to them by the duties of their positions in life, will meet with an immediate and sympathetic response, resulting in such careful editing of this and similar news matter that no harm shall be done to the reading community by indecently offensive suggestion.

It is felt that with such views support will be obtained throughout the whole country. Several editors have already expressed their intention of observing even greater care than in the past over news matter of this kind in their columns. You are therefore asked to give this movement your editorial support.

Mr. President, there is another phase of the question I am discussing, but not covered by the bill, that calls for serious consideration and unqualified condemnation, and that is the unreliability of the newspapers, their misrepresentations, unjust coloring of alleged news, the faking or manufacturing of accounts of events or alleged events, and the like. Nothing connected with newspaper work has done more than this to lose the papers the confidence of the public and destroy their influence. The inaccuracy of newspaper accounts of proceedings of public bodies and the acts and sayings of men in public life has become proverbial. The public is constantly misinformed and deceived and public men misrepresented, their positions on public questions misstated, often willfully and maliciously, and accounts given as actual occurrences that never took place, but have been concocted as a readable story that may be interesting as fiction. Unfortunately it is not published as fiction but as fact, and often about public matters of grave importance. Such journalism is a violation of the duty a newspaper owes to its readers. It is continuously and persistently deceiving the people who pay for it on its implied obligation to supply them with the news, with facts and not fiction wrongfully put out as facts. It is a grave wrong to the individual who is misrepresented, misquoted, and often persistently and willfully put in the wrong without reason or excuse. An aggravated case of this kind of unreliable and unfair journalism may be found in what the newspapers printed about the pretended make-up of the Cabinet of the newly elected President of the United States. Men were named with perfect assurance as being decided upon as members of the Cabinet, and conversations and consultations between the President elect and his alleged advisers and what had been said about supposed aspirants for these high places, good and bad, were given day after day, as if the newspaper writers had been present and heard what was said. Of course people who knew what was going on understood that all of these publications were purely imaginary and without foundation in fact, but many readers did not, and took them seriously. But the fact that such publications are false is not the worst of it. Sometimes they are willfully and maliciously false. In other cases they are intended to be embarrassing to public men written about, and often have that effect and do great injustice.

But, Mr. President, this is only one instance out of hundreds where many newspapers are reckless, insincere, untruthful, and wholly unreliable. They have suffered greatly from this manner of dealing with the public and with public affairs. They have lost the confidence and very generally the respect of their readers. Journalism, which should be one of the highest and most trusted professions, has suffered immensely in public esteem from this character of journalism on the part of some of its members. Men in public life are misrepresented and misquoted habitually by some newspaper writers; the facts about public questions are distorted, colored, and often misstated; the reading public is deceived and misled about public affairs and public men, and if such papers were believed the most serious results might follow from such unreliable and mendacious journalism.

Mr. President, I am glad to say that the better class of journalists do not approve of this kind of so-called journalism and are striving to protect their profession and their newspapers from its blighting effect. Here is an evidence of it taken from one journal which condemns it in unmeasured terms:

In these days of competitive sensationalism in the newspaper field it sometimes seems as if all consideration for the home life of the people has been lost sight of in the efforts made by the newspapers to outdo each other in reporting the scandalous and salacious details of some case which happens to be on trial or in the exploitation of some crime that has been committed. Because we are condemning the evil itself rather than the persons concerned, we refrain from mentioning the name of any city or paper; but it is to be deplored that such a condition seems to exist in one of our principal cities at the present time, and the only excuse offered in defense of it is that the publishers believe their patrons desire to read such stuff. This, however, is scarcely to be considered flattering to the community as a whole, and in proof that the desire for "news" of this kind is not unanimous, in this particular city at least, we quote the following resolutions, which were adopted by one of its leading women's clubs, and all other women's clubs were asked to indorse:

"Whereas certain daily papers in this city are continually giving in revolting detail the accounts of crimes and scandals, setting forth the same in the most conspicuous manner; and

"Whereas if these papers are received into our homes, the filthy and demoralizing news above referred to must come under the eyes of our children: Therefore be it

"Resolved by the Home Study Club, That we protest against the moral wrong being done our children, ourselves, and the whole city by the debased journalistic ideals at present dominating the publishers of these papers, and we ask that they who are responsible for the publication of such news as is suggestive of evil and demoralizing to all who read it adopt a higher standard of morality and decency for their papers, if they hope to have them remain in our homes."

In addition to this courteous yet emphatic protest, the matter has been taken up by some of the ministers of the city, one of whom said from his pulpit:

"How are you and I going to protect the minds and morals of our growing boys and girls if we put that sort of thing within their reach? We all remember what earnest objections our people made to our reading the old yellow dime novels when we were young, and if we will stop a moment to consider the psychology of the thing we will see how much worse it is to give our children daily access to the most degrading facts of actual life as published by these newspapers. If you have any doubt on this point, just stop for a moment and ask yourself what you would think of me if I were to gather your boys and girls together and put such stuff into their hands as fit literature for them to read.

"When we criticize the newspapers for these things we are constantly reminded that they are commercial enterprises and must give the people what they want in order to command circulation. Since that is the case, Christian men and women can best impress the newspapers with what they want by some form of commercial treatment. Many of you men are patrons of the advertising columns of these newspapers; and if you see fit to do so you can very quickly let the publishers know what your disapproval of their news columns means, for it is the publishers who are directly responsible for the present situation. By refusing to read their papers as long as they follow their present policy, and by refusing to patronize them, you can make the most effective protest against this kind of journalism."

In common justice, however, it should be stated that one of the newspapers of the city, a paper which had the courage to announce in a recent issue that at the expiration of existing contracts no more advertisements of beer, liquor, or cigarettes would be accepted, in commenting on these protests says:

"Nor do these public protests reflect in full the disgust of many thousands of respectable citizens who give vent to their feelings in private conversation whenever the press is mentioned. Yet these people are not seeking a quarrel with the press out of hand. Many of them entertain a mystic fear of newspapers; some of them cling to a faith in the moral integrity of the press that amounts to a childlike affection. Nor do they ask that legitimate news be suppressed. They only ask that the news be presented in such form that it will not corrupt the young nor spread crime and immorality among the ignorant.

"Under sufficient pressure we think the newspapers will come to that way of handling news; and that pressure will be sufficient when the people who demand clean journalism can demonstrate to the newspapers that they are better worth considering than the people who demand unclean journalism. An 'epidemic of crime' is in the first instance largely an epidemic of the bespangled and bejeweled publicity of crime."

Nor should it be inferred, in citing the conditions which prevail in this particular section, that it is by any means an isolated instance. It is unfortunate that this pandering to morbid and vicious tastes is so nearly universal that anything in the way of protest stands out in vivid contrast. For instance, a prominent metropolitan newspaper had this to say about a recent murder case which was largely exploited by the press:

"The mushy sentimentality of which this case has furnished a somewhat extreme illustration is a more serious element in our national life than most people realize. In the matter of homicide itself we have no doubt that it constitutes one of the chief reasons of our country's most unenviable prominence. * * * No sooner does a case figure conspicuously in the newspapers than it is turned over in every conceivable way on its sentimental side, and the monstrousness of the crime lost sight of in the "human interest" of the criminal. The wrecker of banks is a staunch comrade and a dead-game sport; the wife murderer is not half bad when you get to know him."

The time was when space in newspapers was too valuable for anything save the most important news and that briefly told, but the lessened cost of production that has made possible the modern newspaper at a popular price has not worked altogether for the good of the public; the choice of reading matter wherewith to fill its columns has not always been wisely made, and this evil has grown with the years.

Another leading newspaper, in commenting on the bill introduced by me, has this to say:

No one deplores more sincerely the frequency of crime than the conscientious publishers of first-class newspapers or regrets the necessity of the constantly recurring publications of descriptions of these events. It may be that there are newspapers that take pleasure in killings and other forms of crime for the sake of the appeal to the morbid minds of those who delight in narrations of tragedy, but the general run of American newspapers can not be so classed.

The term "general run of American newspapers" used by this editorial writer is rather indefinite. And the guarded statement that it may be that there are newspapers that "take pleasure" in publishing the details of crimes is significant and wholly fails to meet the evil of which I am complaining. It is not alone the newspapers that "take pleasure" in it that publish such objectionable news. Many of them publish it against their judgment and sense of right and decency and only because of their belief that the people want it, and to make money. Such newspapers are the most dangerous of all. They are generally publications of standing and a degree of influence. They join with the sensational and distrusted newspapers in these publications and thus give them an appearance of respectability and proper journalism that they do not deserve. Such journals if they should leave such publications to newspapers known to belong to the class designated "sensational," could do much to break up this custom of printing such news and advance the interest and elevate the standard of their profession immeasurably.

It is not alone the better class of journalists and newspapers that are endeavoring to protect themselves from such violations of the rules of true journalism, but the people generally are rebelling against and denouncing it, and many civic organizations are entering their protest against it in the interest of morality and civic righteousness.

The National Ethical Press Association in a letter on the subject has this to say:

This association was formed with the object of promoting clean journalism and the cause of newspapers which strive to publish unbiased news. In our first effort to interest public servants in our work—in an effort to induce them to see that there is a legislative power which can be used to protect the public—we addressed a special committee of the Legislature of Illinois, and later the members of the legislature itself.

The particular point we tried to make was that a certain class of newspapers now published in this country were not giving either the public or public servants a just deal through the manner in which the present important and official news is published.

Later we addressed the Subcommittee of Privileges and Elections of your body and after that the full committee, sending to them copies of our correspondence and arguments presented to the Illinois Legislature.

There is a popular demand throughout the Nation, among private citizens as well as public men, for authentic, uncolored information as to public affairs. The people wish to read unbiased news as to matters of Government, which directly affect their daily life. This demand is based upon the fact that many of our leading newspapers, not all, print official proceedings of the Government, of State legislatures, and municipal bodies, not as those proceedings actually take place, but distorted, discolored, to suit the private ends of the publishers.

The Council of Jewish Women have appointed a national committee on purity of the press. In a circular issued by this committee it is said:

At the triennial convention of 1908 this department was formally recognized as one of the activities of the council.

Our protest against the publication of indecent, criminal, sensational, and otherwise objectionable news matter as presented in the circular letter appended has received many indorsements alike from individuals and organizations. Many have expressed their appreciation of our having started a campaign for a cleaner journalism and have promised cooperation. Many articles and editorials have appeared commenting strongly on the evils of the modern press. Thus do we observe that the necessity for this work we have initiated is rapidly becoming apparent to thinking people. As newspapers are widely circulated, the influence of our work will reach beyond the bounds of any one locality.

As it is only through concerted action that a strong public opinion can be formed, we appeal to all sections to take an active interest in this prophylactic work, aiming as it does, to prevent the continuance and further extension of a harmful practice and its consequence. Since editors claim that they merely supply the demand of their readers, it devolves upon us to create a strong public sentiment for a cleaner journalism.

One of the good women connected with this work wrote me soon after I introduced the bill under discussion, as follows:

I was delighted to see in last night's Star that you had introduced a bill for "Suppressing the publication of crime in the newspapers." It is a subject in which I am much interested, upon which I have written and thought—hopelessly—for months. I belong to the "Council of Jewish Women." Am chairman of the local section on "Purity of the press." If our society can in any way aid your efforts at reform in the daily and weekly papers that publish so much that is pernicious to the rising generation, I would be most happy to aid you to the extent of our power.

In some of the States statutes have been enacted to meet this growing evil. The following act passed by the Legislature of Indiana is a fair sample of the efforts made in that way:

An act prohibiting the publication or sale of pernicious literature, and providing for punishment for the violation of the same.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, That it shall be unlawful for any person to sell, or offer for sale, or to print or publish, or to bring into this State for the purpose of selling, giving away, or otherwise disposing of, or to circulate in any way, any paper, book, or periodical, the chief feature or characteristic of which is the record of the commission of crime, or to display by cut or illustration crimes committed, or the acts or pictures of criminals, desperadoes, or of men or women in lewd and unbecoming positions or improper dress.

SEC. 2. That any person guilty of violation of this act shall be fined not less than $10 and not more than $200.

Missouri and Kansas have similar statutes.

Now, Mr. President, what is the remedy for this evil that is poisoning the minds of the readers of the newspapers, contaminating the atmosphere with its impurities, and leading the young into lives of immorality and crime by its attractive and misleading suggestions? The one effective and sure remedy lies with journalists and newspaper publishers themselves. They can, if they will, so discountenance and condemn such unworthy and hurtful journalism and stand for clean and reliable effort, by both precept and example, that the practice will soon be made so odious that such newspapers will not be read and will not pay. Another remedy rests in the hands of the readers of such newspapers. If the men and women who really believe in clean, reliable, and respectable journalism only had the moral courage to refuse to read such newspapers, or to advertise in them, this would have the same effect. But this can not be done by one or a few persons here and there. It must be a concerted effort by the many. If the various organizations that are opposing impure journalism would only induce their own members to take this stand and abide by it, the good work would be commenced in an effective way. Besides the impression it would have on unworthy newspapers, it would be an example and an education to others who are protesting against the kind of news they are getting through so many of the newspapers.

Still another remedy is by the enactment of laws forbidding such publications under penalty. Any such effort meets at once the cry that it is in violation of the Constitution of the United States. The Constitution provides:

Congress shall make no law * * * abridging the freedom of speech or of the press.

This provision of the Constitution should be so construed as to give full effect to its terms. The freedom to speak and write one's views on any and every subject, especially subjects affecting the public welfare, should be carefully and effectually preserved and protected. This is a privilege that should be held sacred in a country like ours. But there are other rights and privileges on the part of the public that should be just as sacredly observed and as carefully protected. So the real question is, How far can an individual newspaper trespass upon the rights and liberties of the public and claim immunity under this provision of the Constitution? As it affects the individual who is unjustly assailed by a newspaper he has his remedy at law in an action for damages, which may be regarded as sufficient remedy for the wrong done him. But when publications are detrimental to the public in general, as in the cases I have been considering, the question is an altogether different one. Can the Constitution be so construed as to protect a newspaper that habitually publishes obscene and other matter detrimental to the public morals and tending to make criminals and incite to crime? Is it an abridgment of the liberty of a newspaper to forbid it to publish such stuff?

The Government has gone so far as to prohibit the sending of such matter through the mails, and this law has been enforced in many cases. Of course, this is not to prohibit the publication, but in most cases it has that effect. Besides, to prohibit the sending of a newspaper containing such news through the mail is to abridge the freedom of publication.

It is well for the liberty of the people that censorship of the press is no longer allowed in this country. It was this that the Constitution was intended to prevent. But to censor the press and thereby say what shall and what shall not be published is one thing, and to make one responsible for a violation of the privilege thus secured to him is quite another thing. The very fact that the right to publish what one pleases without abridgment exists is the strongest possible reason for making the publishers of news liable for abusing their right and privilege. This liability has always been recognized and enforced. The newspaper may publish what it pleases about an individual, but if its publication is false and injurious it is liable both civilly and criminally. This no one will deny. And, sir, I maintain that if a newspaper publishes matter that is deleterious and poisonous to the minds of its readers, thus violating the rules of good morals and decency, it should be made criminally liable for this offense, an offense far more important and hurtful than the libel of the individual and upon precisely the same principle. There should be this difference, however: Proof of the truth of the matter is always a defense to an action for libel by the individual. It should not be so in all cases, where the prosecution is for publishing any matter injurious to health or morals or against public policy. Often a publication of the truth may be more injurious and more reprehensible than that of falsehood or fiction.

Mr. President, this brings us face to face with the great question of the police power of a State and the extent to which that power may be enforced to protect the public. It is a broad field. It has given rise to much important litigation and hundreds of decisions, many of them at variance with each other. As to the general scope of the power, Mr. Freund has this to say in his work on Police Power:

That freedom of speech and press does not mean freedom from responsibility for the abuse of that freedom appears not only from the history of the right but from express constitutional provisions to that effect. Above all, the constitutions do not legalize libel and slander of other persons, against which the remedies provided for by the common law may be applied. So, also, there is no doubt that speech and press may not be used to corrupt public morals, and obscene or profane utterances by word of mouth, in writing, or in print may be made punishable offenses. In Missouri and Kansas statutes have been upheld punishing the sale of newspapers largely devoted to the publication of scandal, lechery, and immoral conduct.

For some unaccountable reason the notion prevails that greater latitude is given a newspaper than any other vehicle for conveying information without responsibility for what it says. This claim was put at rest by an early case in New York, reported in Second Hill, at page 513. In response to a claim of this kind in defense of the editor of a newspaper, the court said:

We were also told that if the law were not thus indulgent some legislative relief might become necessary for the protection of this class of citizens. Undoubtedly if it be desirable to pamper a depraved public appetite or taste, if there be any such, by the republication of all the falsehoods and calumnies upon private character that may find their way into the press—to give encouragement to the widest possible circulation of these vile and defamatory publications by protecting the retailers of them—some legislative interference will be necessary, for no countenance can be found for the irresponsibility claimed in the common law. That reprobates the libeler, whether author or publisher, and subjects him to both civil and criminal responsibility. His offense is there ranked with that of the receiver of stolen goods, the perjurer and subborner of perjury, the disturber of the public peace, the conspirator, and other offenders of like character.

Objectionable exhibitions by means of moving pictures are not only subject to prosecution, but they are rigidly censored and suppressed. While the newspapers were publishing the shocking and otherwise objectionable details of the celebrated Beattie murder case and illustrating them with photographs and pictures, the proprietors of moving-picture shows were, in many cities, expressly forbidden to exhibit pictures of the very same things. No one seemed to doubt either the power to suppress such exhibitions by these places or the wisdom or propriety of it. In fact, the course taken was very generally commended, and for good reason. But at the same time the newspapers of the country were allowed, without molestation, to do the very same thing in a much more injurious way and to the detriment of millions more people.

The question naturally arises whether such publications as I have been talking about are so injurious and hurtful as to warrant the interference of the lawmaking power to prevent them. A very interesting dissertation on this subject will be found in a little book by Frances Fenton entitled "The influence of newspaper presentations upon the growth of crime and other antisocial activity." The author undertakes, in a systematic way, to show the percentage of newspaper space given to objectionable news, the character of it, and its effect by evil suggestion, and otherwise, upon crime and criminals and public morals, and concludes with these general observations on the subject:

III. RECOMMENDATIONS FOR CHANGES OF THE NEWSPAPER.

1. The newspaper is a tremendous influence in the community. Its stimuli reach an enormous number of persons and reach them frequently and insistently. It should, therefore, be an educative and dependable medium. Its possible educative value has scarcely been realized. Suggestive antisocial matter should be excluded from it. This does not mean that all mention of antisocial matters should be excluded. It is desirable that the public should be informed on all matters which they can assist in improving. But the news which gives them the information should not be couched in terms or presented in forms and details which make it criminally suggestive or factually misleading. It is possible to deal with antisocial matters in such a manner as to minimize the possibility of suggestion to antisocial activity by confining the treatment to bare statements of fact by selecting such facts only as are necessary to constructive action in the matter. It is likewise possible to use all of the media which contribute so largely to antisocial results in gaining increased social results. Many of these methods constitute a technique ready-made for educative purposes. Large type, vivid and picturesque writing, illustrations, colored type, diagrams, etc., are just as easily the media of social as of antisocial suggestion, and when the content conveyed by them is of a social character they are indispensable for readers who are fatigued or who read in poor light.

2. There are, however, strong forces working against such changes as have been suggested at the present time. Commercial influences operating upon the policy of newspapers serve to suppress facts important to the public. Any accident, theft, crime, which is likely to react unfavorably on the buying public is not coupled with the name of the firm with whom it occurs. For example, if an accident occurs in a State Street department store in Chicago, whether due to fault of the company or to some other cause, the newspapers do not mention specifically where it occurred, because such mention hurts the store's trade.

The newspaper is also accustomed to play up or distort facts when such a course pays. An example of this is to be found in the fact that while the opera Salome was under fire in Chicago and not yet suspended some of the Chicago papers, and likewise Cleveland papers (for which city the opera was booked after Chicago), took the side of the opera and minimized its suggestiveness.

The fact that the newspapers work for a margin of sales also strongly influences their policy in printing antisocial matter. There is a circulation which can be pretty definitely counted upon, i. e., a certain number of people buy papers constantly for the news, regardless of the content. Beyond this, featuring, doctoring, and faking draw a wide circle of buyers who would not otherwise be attracted. For example, the sporting section is usually printed on colored paper and placed on the outside of the evening paper for the purpose of attracting this margin of sales among a class who are not generally interested in the political and social news of the day. Likewise there are girls who would not buy a conservatively gotten-up paper, i. e., one dealing with the essential and standard facts of life presented in an uncolored and dependable manner, who will buy a copy which bears the caption in large red type, Turns revolver upon woman—Shoots self.
